Another claim sometimes made in behalf of alcohol is that its use aids the system in resisting extremes of temperature. What has science to say on this subject? Is alcohol a heat producer, and does its use increase the power of resistance to cold? Medical science formerly answered, Yes; now its answer is a tremendous NO. An ounce of fact is worth a million tons of fine-spun theory. The old notion was the result of fanciful theorizing; the new is an induction from a vast number of facts. In the numerous Arctic exploring expeditions which have attracted the attention of the civilized world it is a simple fact that abstainers have withstood the rigors of those high latitudes far better than drinkers. The percentage of deaths is far greater among drinkers than among abstainers, and the abstainers are far abler to endure fatigue.

It is also an admitted fact that the use of alcohol is not only not beneficial, but positively injurious, in regions that are subject to extremes of heat. Comparatively few abstainers die from sun-stroke. Go to any of our American cities at a time when the death-rate from sun-stroke runs high, and make an investigation, and you will find that an immense percentage of the deaths are drinking men.

Is the moderate use of alcoholic liquors promotive of health and conducive to longevity? This question medical science answers in a most emphatic way. Dr. Parkes, the eminent surgeon above spoken of, speaking of his experience in the British Army in India, says:

The Eighty-fourth Regiment, in which I served from 1842 to 1850, numbered many teetotalers (at one time more than four hundred) in its ranks; and the records of the regiment show that the teetotalers were more healthy, more vigorous, and far better soldiers than those who did not abstain.

Numerous other army surgeons of distinction bear similar testimony, and this professional testimony is corroborated by that of many illustrious military commanders, chief among whom may be mentioned the lamented Havelock.

Sir John Hall, Inspector general of the British Army, makes this statement:

The healthiest army I ever served with had not a single drop of any kind of liquor; and, although it was exposed to all the hardships of Kaffir war at the Cape of Good Hope, in wet and inclement weather, without tents or shelter of any kind, the sick-list seldom exceeded one per cent.; and this continued not only throughout the whole of the active operations in the field during the campaipn, but after the men were collected in standing-camps at its termination. But immediately the men were again quartered in towns, where they had free access to spirits, numerous complaints made their appearance among them.

An overwhelming mass of testimony of the same character has been gathered by Dr. Carpenter from India, Brazil, Borneo, and Africa.

Says Dr. Lees: "All writers on materi medica now rank alcohol among the most powerful and fatal of narcotic poisons." Dr. Edwards, of London, says there are more men killed by alcohol than by all other poisons put together.

Similar testimony is given by Dr. Benjamin Ward Richardson, Dr. William B. Carpenter, Dr. Andrew Clarke, Sir Astley Cooper, Sir Wm. Gull and a host of celebrities in the medical world too numerous to mention. More than two thousand leading physicians in England have publicly united in this verdict against alcohol, as have also a very large number of the leading physicians of America.

The cool, unimpassioned utterance of the nineteenth century medical science, then, is that alcohol is a poison.

And strong as this testimony is, we have evidence from another source that is stronger still. We refer to the records of life insurance companies.

Since 1850 the Temperance and General Mutual Assurance Company in London has divided its policy-holders into two classes, and kept separate records with each class. It must be remembered just here that this is not a comparison between abstainers and drunkards, but between abstainers and moderate drinkers. Insurance companies are very careful about taking risks on the lives of regular sots. Now, the records of this company show that year after year the death-rate among drinkers has been much larger than among abstainers.

The records of the Temperance Provident Institution, another great English insurance company, evince the same fact. The death-rate of both sections, of course, varies slightly in different years; but the average difference, running through a number of years, is twenty-nine per cent. Just think of it! For every hundred deaths among abstainers there are one hundred and twenty-nine deaths among drinkers. And, mark you, these are temperate drinkers. When these drinkers die, the doctor does not say they died from drink. He says they died of apoplexy, paralysis, heart disease, liver disease, kidney disease, etc.; and the doctor speaks truly. These men do die from disease; but how does it happen that five drinkers die for every four abstainers? One answer can be given to this question, and one only. These men die because their systems have been poisoned by alcohol. Had they not used alcohol, they would not have become diseased; or if so, their vital force would have been sufficient to withstand the disease. These additional deaths are as certainly caused by alcohol as if the men had died of delirium tremens.

Now, testimony from this source is of the most valuable character. Men go into the insurance business with the same motive that prompt them to go into any other business. Pecuniary gain is their aim. These insurance companies keep separate records with drinkers and abstainers simply in order that they may know which class it pays best to insure. The correctness of the conclusions reached in this way no sane man can question.

Says Col. Jacob L Green, president of the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company:

It has been my duty to read the records of, and to make inquiry into, the last illness and death of many thousands of persons of all classes in all parts of the country. . . . Among the persons selected with care for physical soundness and sobriety the death-rate is more profoundly affected by the use of intoxicating drinks than by any other cause apart from heredity. . . . Congested brains, insanity, paralysis, pneumonia, rheumatism, and various diseases of the kidneys, liver, and stomach, are the results of that slow process of blood-poisoning which comes from even moderate, orderly, decorous drinking.

This applies to all kinds of alcoholic liquors—wine and beer, no less than whisky and brandy. Of course, there is not the same proportion of poison in them all. It takes several glasses of wine or lager to contain as much alcohol as is contained in one glass of whisky or brandy; but the poison is there, and it is for the poison that men partake of any of these drinks. Did space permit, we would present some statements from high authorities showing that lager beer is one of the most hurtful of all the alcoholic stimulants.

Now, what is temperance as regards the use of any and all these drinks? Temperance means the moderate use of things that are proper to be used. It means total abstinence from things improper to be used. Now, since it is a demonstrated fact that alcohol is a poison, temperance requires that alcohol should be used just as other poisons are used. How do we use other poisons? Why, we use them as medicines. When a physician diagnoses a case, and decides that the patient has some disease for which a certain poison—say, strychnine or aconite—is an antidote, then temperance allows the man to use that poison. But suppose a man should use this same poison when in perfect health, would that be temperate? Suppose a man in perfect health should use every day a very small quantity of strychnine; suppose some one admonishes him of the danger of so doing; suppose he replies, "Oh, I don't use it to excess; I am exceedingly temperate in my use of it!" Would he not at once be set down as a lunatic? How much wiser is the man who in perfect health uses alcohol? It is just as certain that alcohol is a poison as that strychnine is a poison. For a healthy man to talk about using any kind of alcoholic beverage temperately is, therefore, the very height of absurdity. In sickness alcohol may be used just as other poisons are—under the direction of a skillful physician. In health any use of alcohol is an intemperate use. Thus, as regards the use of alcoholic beverages, temperance and total abstinence mean one and the same thing.

The dignitaries of the Holy Roman Church need to read something besides dark-age theology. They need to familiarize themselves with the teachings of modern science. When they do so, they will no longer advocate even a moderate use of one of the deadliest poisons known to the materia medica of the nineteenth century. It is decidedly amusing to hear a distinguished chancellor speak of alcohol as a thing of "God's creation." Will the gentleman be so kind as to inform us where God's breweries and distilleries are located? Perhaps they are the ones owned by members of the Holy, Infallible Roman Church.

A Sunday at Moss Point.

We spent last Sabbath at Moss Point, Miss., occupying the pulpit morning and night. It goes without saying that we had good audiences. Moss Point is known as a church-going community. The Methodist Church has recently been renovated at an expense of $1,100. It was a very neat, tasteful structure before, but is now more beautiful than ever. It is admirably lighted, comfortably seated and beautifully carpeted. Our church is at the front in Moss Point, and is experiencing remarkable prosperity under the administration of its present pastor, Rev. T. W. Adams. During his pastorath there has been a very marked development on financial lines, a corresponding increase in spirituality. It is our judgment that there are few, if any, churches among us that are in better spiritual condition or doing better work for the Master's kingdom than Moss Point. Bro. Adams is held in high esteem by the church and community.

Moss Point is a larger town than the general public suppose it to be, having a population of about four thousand. It is a city of magnificent distances. The residences are not huddled together as if the world was over-populated; but each residence, as a rule, has ample grounds for yard, garden, truck patch and lawn. We confess to a liking for that sort of thing; and when we build a city, we are going to build it after that fashion.

We were delightfully entertained during our stay at the parsonage, to whose inmates we are under obligations for many kindnesses. We also enjoyed the hospitalities of Bro. L. N. Dantzler and his excellent family.

Moreover, as our readers know, Dr. Featherstun writes in an admirable spirit, so what he writes is read with pleasure by those who differ from him as well as those who agree with him. The annual report of Gov. Renfrow of Oklahoma, which was recently submitted to the Secretary of the Interior, gives evidence of marvelous growth. The white population is 275,000. The taxable property aggregates $39,275,183—an increase of nearly $20,000,000 in a year. The school population is 77 770. The territory has in successful operation an agricultural and mechanical college, a normal school, and a university. When it is remembered that the territory is only about two or three years old, this is a remarkable showing. Wheat and cotton are the principal crops. The country is also admirably adapted to stock raising and truck farming.

The following are a part of the statistics reported at the Protestant Episcopal Convention, at Minneapolis: Bishops, 75; clergymen, 4,544; communicants, 618,500; houses of worship, 5 117; confirmations during the past year, 131 473; baptisms during the year, 190,820. The net increase of membership during the last three years has been 65,781. This makes an annual average increase of a little over four per cent. The aggregate of salaries has been nearly $12,000 per annum during the present than during the preceding triennium. The increase in the number of clergymen has not kept pace with the increase of membership. The subject of constitutional revision has been committed to a new commission composed of six clerical and six lay delegates.

PERSONALS.

Rev. H. M. Wilkes, a Methodist minister, was killed by a train at Pleasant Grove, Tenn., on the fifteenth. He had been in the ministry forty years.

Rev. I. W. Cooper and Rev. T. B. Malone, of West Point, Miss., the noted singer of North Mississippi Conference, will hold a meeting at Shubuta, Oct. 21 28.

Robert Paine, eldest son of Bishop Paine, died at his home in Aberdeen, Miss., a few days since. He was an ardent Methodist, and an efficient officer in the church.

The New Orleans Picayune, of the eighteenth, contained a special announcing the serious illness of Bishop Haygood. He is said to be threatened with paralysis.

Rev. I. W. Cooper and Rev. D. P. Bradford will hold a meeting for J. A. Bowen at Macon, Miss., Nov. 4 11. Bro. Bradford is one of the best singers in the Mississippi Conference.

G. W. Sentell, one of the oldest and most widely-known cotton merchants of this city, died on the sixteenth at the residence of his son-in-law, Dr. S. A. Dixon, Shreveport, after an illness of about a month.

Money Needed.

An editorial in the Times-Democrat, a few days ago, showed that the condition of affairs in Louisiana is very much improved. The statement was made that, owing to the increased value of our two principal products, cotton and sugar, the crops will bring from twelve to fifteen millions more dollars than the same crops last year. This is certainly an improvement, and our people are beginning to breathe easier. They will be able to meet many obligations which they could not cancel last year.

Now, many of our people are under special obligations to Centenary College. They have given their notes for various sums, and the stringency of the times prevented them from meeting these obligations last year. We hope that those who are indebted to us will remember that money is very much needed. We can not meet our obligations to our teachers unless it comes in. The improved condition of things causes us to hope that every person who has given a note will send in the interest as soon as possible. No money will do so much good in so many ways as the money given to the cause of Christian education.

I have the pleasure to report that the college is doing well. Our students are working well at their tasks and behaving themselves as gentlemen always do. Our teachers are earnestly endeavoring to develop and train the young men for future usefulness to the Church and State.

We are looking forward with great interest and hope to the meeting of the Louisiana Conference in our town, next December. We trust that it may make an epoch in the history of the college. The church and town are preparing to give the Conference a hearty welcome, and the brethren are assured that no pains will be spared to make their visit among us an enjoyable one.

Now, you who are indebted to us, don't forget that we very much need what you owe. You can get a postal money order anywhere, and that is one of the best ways to send money.

All In?

MR. EDITOR: Please say to your readers, particularly the pastors, that a number of brethren whose charges have heretofore fallen very badly behind in the collections for missions, write me that their collections this year will be "full." If this proves to be general among our charges, it means an advance in South Louisiana beyond anything in the past history of our church there.

The Lord has sent the workmen (if we can now provide "the hire") to man a destitute field. Let not failure be chargeable to the pastors.

Scraps of Methodist History.

The first regular Annual Conference of the M. E. Church ever held in Mississippi was Oct. 10, 1816, and Bishop Robert R. Roberts held the same at the house of Mr. William Foster, in the county of Wilkinson, not far from Woodville. The place of meeting was an upper room, which served for Conference in the day time and a place of sleeping for the members of the Conference at night. It was really the Bachelor's Conference, and only had there eight members. The Bishop being delayed in reaching the appointment, the meeting was organized by Samuel Sellers, presiding elder, and James Menefee as clerk. The other members present were: Ashley Hunt, Thomas Nixon, John Lane, Thomas Owens, Peter Jones, and Elijah Gentry. James Dixon was absent. The arrival of the Bishop was an occasion of great joy to this noble band of Christian workers, some of whom had never yet seen a "live Bishop." The Bishop carried through all the work of Conference with great diligence and dispatch; and in the conclusion of other business reported as at the disposal of the Conference the following sums:

Doe Conference from book fund	$203 00
Mite subscription in Bishop R. R. R's hands	100 00
Amount from chartered fund	180 00
Natchez mite subscription	7 75
Collection Pearl River Church (Menefee)	81 50
Tangipahoa collection (Ashley Hunt)	29 81¼
Total amount	$199 06¼

This fund was disposed of as follows:

One hundred dollars left on hand was sent by Bishop Robert R. Roberts to be equally divided between the Conferences of Tennessee and Missouri. This was the first Conference that Bishop Roberts attended after his ordination. He lived twenty-seven years afterwards. He died in January, 1844, just before the division of the M. E. Church—a consecrated man, honored and loved by all. His last sermon was from the text, "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

Bishop Robert R. Roberts belonged to an old, large pious Welsh family, who, in 1285, when Wales became an English principality and English became the legal language, dropped the "h" out of the name "Rhoberts," and became Robert. Many of the families took on an "s" and became Roberts. They adopted this pretty motto as containing the sentiment of the family, and by which they might be recognized in all parts of the world: "Calon with Calon; Dow a Digon." "Heart with heart; God our supreme love." "Love neighbor as self, and God with all the heart." This has ever distinguished the family and its different branches.

Besides Bishop R. R. Roberts, we find also Bishop R. L. Roberts, the Free Methodist Church of N. Chili, N. Y.; Presiding Elder Wm. Roberts, of the M. E. Church on the Pacific coast; one Lord William Roberts, an aged and wealthy Baptist man, who settled in Santee, S. C., and was killed by the Tories because he would not tell them of his son, Robert Roberts; and also Rev. Pierce Robert, pastor of colony of Protestant refugees from 1685 to 1715, at Santee, S. C. He was the grandfather of my grandfather.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

THE DEATH OF STEPHEN.

(Acts vi, 8; vii, 60.)

The History of Christian Martyrs by Fox should be read by everybody. Stephen was the first Christian martyr.

1. When the advocates of error discover that honest discussion will result in their discomfiture, they usually become angry and resort to cruel force.

(1) Thus the enemies of Christianity, finding themselves in the wrong when discussing with Stephen, have recourse to falsehood and persecution.

(2) King Saul, finding out that the masses deemed David his superior, he sought to kill the conqueror of Goliath.

(3) Though Dr. Luther at the Diet in Worms had fully established his innocence, the Reformer's friends knew well that the bloodthirsty enemies would seek to take his life. Hence he was secreted at Wartburg for two years.

(4) A deaf man was known to attend all public debates. Inquired why he attended, not being able to understand anything of what was said, he replied: "Yes, I understand a great deal. I always discover who is in the wrong. 'Tis the one who first gets angry."

2. The circumstances of Stephen's death are thrillingly interesting.

(1) The rabble, then as now, always ready to participate in some devilry, even in lynching, cruelly stoned this worthy man of God.

(2) The participants laid their numerous garments at the feet of Saul. This Saul, subsequently Paul, speaks of a thorn in the flesh. May it not have been the repeated sight of this dreadful spot when journeying to Jerusalem?

(3) Preceding death, like the Master on the cross, Stephen interceded for his enemies. "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge."

(4) Dying, Stephen prayed, "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit." Receive what is thine. Well he knew that there he would be

"Safe in the arms of Jesus."

(5) Praying thus, he passed away: fell asleep. Notwithstanding the furious exclamations of his murderers, he is perfectly serene. Falls asleep as child in mother's arms.

(6) Thus Christians should desire to die. Though pain be excruciating, he refuses stupifying morphine, alcoholic preparations. He looks upon death as a liberator. He is not, for Christ takes him.

Programme for Literary Meeting of the Epworth League

A week previous to the meeting the president of the League appoints six members, each to write out an acrostic on the names of some favorite preacher, Sunday-school superintendent or president of Epworth League. After this manner: Acrostic on the name of Bishop J. C. Keener:

Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, and to-day, and for ever. (Heb. xiii, 8.)
Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many. (Heb. ix, 28.)
Knowledge rather than gold. (Prov. viii, 10.)
Enoch walked with God. (Gen. v, 24.)
Evening and morning, and at noon will I pray. (Ps. lv, 17.)
Now, therefore, stand and see this great thing. (I. Sam. xii, 16.)
Examine me, O Lord, prove me. (Ps. xxvi, 2.)
Rest in the Lord, and wait patiently for him. (Ps. xxxvii, 7.)

After reading each of the six or more acrostics, appropriate hymns may be sung.

League Data.

The various Bishops at the different Conference sessions manifest great interest in the Epworth League.

The preacher who at the session of the Annual Conference confesses that he has no League in his work will not escape reprimand.

The Epworth League will assist the pastor in building up Zion.

The address of Dr. Blank, editor of this ADVOCATE, to the recent Epworth League Conference was highly spoken of. It is hoped that it will appear in print.

Order of Union Epworth League Meeting Places.

Next month the Union Epworth League will meet in the Morean Street Church. The following will be the order thereafter: Parker Chapel, Dryades, Craps, Felicity, Carondelet, Louisiana Avenue and Carrollton.

Gone Home.

The following note will be read with sorrow by the numerous friends of Bro. Ormond:

My dear sister, Blanche, died at my father's home, at Summerville, Ala., on Oct. 11. She was just entering womanhood, being eighteen years and eight months old. We are all sad. Pray for us.

Our Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete to every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self threading shuttle, self setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.

"ARLINGTON B."

The "Arlington B" self threading sewing machine has a large high arm its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take up, convenient foot rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven eighths of an inch) one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver one wrench one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned, and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clear.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearings polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension

SELF-THREADING—The "ARLINGTON B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE.—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark and easily understood

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened light and noiseless, and are very durable.

We invite special attention to our new sewing machine offer. This machine is a most excellent one in every respect. We have never made a better premium offer. Let no one confound this machine with any one previously offered. It is a different machine altogether. Take notice that we prepay freight and guarantee entire satisfaction.

Notice.

Those who want Bibles at our premium rates would do well to order at once, as our offer may be withdrawn in a few weeks.

The Holman Bible for $1 65

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.65 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to Oct., '96. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two full years in advance, i. e., up to Oct., '97, can get this Bible at $1 35.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2 45 instead of $1 65. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2 45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We are now prepared to fill orders for Bibles (both kinds) promptly.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

HOME CIRCLE.

SAY THE LOVING WORDS NOW.

Year after year, with a glad content,
In and out of our home he went—
In and out.
Ever for us the skies were clear;
His heart carried the care and fear,
The care and doubt.

Our hands held with a careless hold
All that he won of power and gold,
In toil and pain.
O, dear hands that our burdens bore—
Hands that shall toil for us no more—
Never again.

O, it was hard to learn our loss,
Bearing daily the heavy cross—
The cross he bore;
To say with aching heart and head,
"Would to God that the love now dead
Were here once more!"

For when the love we held so light
Was gone away from our speech and sight,
No bitter tears,
No passionate words of fond regret,
No yearning of grief could pay the debt
Of thankless years.

O, now, while this kind love lingers near,
Grudge not the tender words of cheer,
Leave none unsaid;
For a heart can have no sadder fate
Than some one day to awake—too late—
And find love dead!

Children's Bed-Time Hour.

FOR MOTHERS.

Children should be put to bed early, for plentiful and peaceful sleep is a good medicine for soul and body, both for young and old. The mother, if possible, should be with her children during the last hour before they fall asleep. They will then listen with hushed attention to whatever is told, or read, or sung to them, and the words spoken with the good-night kiss will sleep with them and be whispered again in their dreams. That is the hour for mothers to impress on their plastic nature the thoughts which they wish them to remember longest. Every mother who has formed the habit of reading, talking and singing to her children after they have been tucked away in their little beds, will bear joyful witness to the value of this form of maternal influence. In that hallowed hour all the little wrong deeds and irritations of the day can be talked over most quietly, and smoothed out most sweetly; and the duties of children to their parents, and to one another, can be presented in their most attractive forms. But care must be taken that these talks with the children immediately before sleep do not take the form of preaching. It should be a cheerful, laughing talk, or at least a talk that will cover their little faces with smiles.

Let your child always go to sleep with a glad thought in its heart and a smile on its face. The next morning, as it springs from its bed, the glad thought will burst out in songs, and the smiles in shouts of laughter. If a wrong has to be reproved, let the child be assured of forgiveness, and let the mother be assured that forgiveness is accepted before the eyes shall close. Let the child fall asleep loving all and assured of the love of all. Then, after the little prayer has been said, the child, at peace with all on earth, and with the smile of heaven's love on its face, will drop away into peaceful slumber with its soul all unruffled and unsoiled, as white and smooth as a freshly washed and ironed piece of snow-white linen.

It is always a solemn thing to fall asleep. We can never know where the waking may find us. Any night the rosy child or the healthful mother may sleep into the sleep of death. Then always let the good-night kiss be accompanied with a word of peace, a word of love, and sweet tranquility. It is a piece of downright cruelty, one of the crimes which law can not reach, for a thoughtless and fretful mother to scold her children away from her presence at night, and to drive them to bed with sharp and angry words. Of all the sad sounds ever heard in this sorrowful world of ours, the saddest is the suppressed sob of a little child, the smothered cry of a wounded heart, coming from beneath the bed clothes, as it weeps itself to sleep because of a mother's unkindness.

The mother may be work-worn and weary, and the children may be tired and cross, but let no mother ever so far forget herself as to lead her children to forget that she is their mother. Let her remember that not only her words, but the tones in which they are spoken, will at that most solemn moment make the deepest and most lasting impressions on their tender souls, and that they may determine their weal or woe for eternity.—Zion's Herald.

Place and Fitness.

One of the most pitiful things in the world is to see nine hundred and ninety-nine persons contriving, laboring, competing for place, and only one man in a thousand concerning himself with the vastly more important and pertinent and essential matter of fitness. As if fitness did not always and inevitably come before place, preparation before performance, equipment before assumption, merit before desert! Yet who in these days thinks first of making himself worthy, and then of the honor which his worth deserves? Who abases himself that he may be exalted? Who goes to school to humility that he may rule with honorable pride? The tendency, unfortunately, is all the other way. Men seek first the place, under the reckless and vain delusion that fitness will follow as a kind of miraculous and spontaneous result of presumption! A young man leaves school, or breaks off his technical education, dazzled by the offer of a position which seems as high as he had ever dared to aspire. He gets the place, but seldom keeps it, and still more seldom rises above it—because he has not been content to wait and fit himself for the demands and responsibilities of his profession. Very soon those who have equipped themselves more thoroughly than he will overtake and pass him. It is like running a long race over rough roads. The rider who stops to have his horse thoroughly shod will win over him who pushes frantically ahead with a loose shoe, to gain time.

If there is any lesson of more importance than another to the young man and woman of this hasteful and wasteful age, it is the lesson of the true relation of place and fitness. Everywhere and in all things consider first personal worth. Whether in religion, in business, in education, in professional life, or in social life, seek first the solid, genuine, noble qualities which entitle one to respect and honor. Never mind the emolument or the place. Do not think about them; certainly do not give them preference in your thought. These things will surely follow if you deserve them. And if you aspire to and snatch at them without desert, they will just as surely escape and defy you. Aim first to be fit for the honors and responsibilities of life. Then, if you are truly worthy, you will not need to sigh and struggle and madly grasp for these things. They will come to you as easily and naturally as beauty and fragrance come to the flower in its unfolding. The truly great men and women of the world are they who have toiled humbly and patiently, waited without repining, hoped without ceasing, striving always not to grasp, but to gain, the prizes and honors of life. And their reward has come, when it came, with all the richness and stability of the good which falls to the lot of true desert.—Selected.

Courtesy as a Christian Duty.

Love reveals itself as much in the manner as in the matter; in the quality as well as the quantity. Not only what we say, but how we say it determines the effect. Love not only gives, but gives in a gentle and kindly spirit, and often the manner is worth more than the gift. The "new charity" recognizes this. It is the inspiration of contact with a pure and loving personality, the self-respect resulting from the loving interest another takes in us, the realization of fellowship in our loneliness and isolation, that makes love's ministry the sweetest and best thing in the world.

And it is this love that is forever losing sight of self in its kindly interest in others, that is the very soul and heart of courtesy. There is a kind of politeness that passes for true courtesy which is external and self-centred. It is the courtesy of the market that treats customers politely because it pays to do so; the courtesy of society by which personal friction and discomfort are avoided. This has its value, but it is not the article our topic suggests. Christian courtesy springs from a heart full of love and spirit of Christ. It is kind because it loves to be so. It seeks not its own neither in social or commercial compensations. It may or may not be posted in the intricacies of good form, but it can always be depended upon to lend a hand and to shoulder burdens for others. Christ rebuked the scant courtesy of his host and commended the boundless, but unconventional love of the woman who was a sinner, but who gave him tears and precious ointment.

A person may be courteous and not be a professed Christian; but one can not be a consistent Christian and not be courteous. For true courtesy springs from a kind and loving heart, and kindness and love are the fulfilling of the law. Rudeness in a Christian is crudeness or worse. It reveals an uncultivated area of mind and heart. It shows incompleteness of character or inconsistency of life. The logic and drift of the life of a child of God is towards that unselfish interest in others, that sympathetic appreciation of others' cares and sorrows, that genial and good-natured manner that makes sunshine wherever one goes, that has been exemplified in thousands of Christians—in the knights of chivalry, in the Bayards and the Sidneys, in the gentlemen and gentlewomen of the old school and the new school. The age of chivalry and aristocracy is gone, and we are all democratic, with the manners of the people. But it is a Christian democracy, and we need to cultivate the courtesy of him who was as perfect in his manners as in his speech and acts. When the kingdom of God is fully come and the will of God is done on earth as it is done in heaven, every man and woman will be full of the noblest courtesy.—Guardian.

The Drink Habit.

One of the last products of the pen of W. Jennings Demorest was a study of the liquor problem in his magazine. In it he says: "We are fully aware of the fact that it is impossible to exaggerate the horrors and the extent of the misery produced in the homes of a large proportion of the people by this drink habit. We know that we can not fully estimate the loss and injury that the community suffer on account of its awful tax on the resources of labor. Nor can we fathom all the crime and degradation that are the direct outcome of this terrible appetite for strong drink.

"No amount of regret can atone for the wail of a mother's awful agony over her lost son; no amount of good intentions will compensate the wife of a drunken husband, no tears of anguish or even real repentance will ever repair the broken hearts or stifle the cries of homeless, starving children who have been made worse than fatherless by the toleration, and even protection, that the liquor traffic has obtained through votes. Eternity alone will reveal all the horrors that this traffic in alcoholic poisons has produced."

Smith-Jones: "How do you manage to keep up your mental energy so well?" Smith-Brown: "My wife gives me a piece of her mind every morning before I start to work."—Harlem Life.

Sleep

BY FLORENCE HULL.

The most widespread and constant disobedience to the laws of health is our habit of sleeplessness. The recklessness with which even those amongst us whose attention is most often called to this matter keep ourselves awake night after night, when our nervous systems are almost shattered for want of rest, is appalling. Those whose occupation in life is pleasure are able to sleep during the day if they stay up all night. But the great average class, who must work and who like to work and who are ashamed to be idle, very seldom try to rob the day-time of its golden hours, but after a sleepless night get up and go about their business goading their jaded nerves with stimulants or keeping up by a strong effort of will, until they find, by the time they are ready to take the rest now become imperatively necessary, that the habit of sleep has deserted them, in some cases never to return.

There is no royal remedy for insomnia. Victims are seeking it with gold and with tears the world over. The only cure for the disease is a return to ways of right living and to harmonious relations with nature. Human constitutions are very adaptable and can be made to get used to almost any set of circumstances, but they can not so easily be made to get unused to them. We can establish for ourselves certain rules of diet and exercise and rest, and by regularly conforming to them keep ourselves in fair condition, provided the rules are moderately sensible. But irregularity is destructive. We can not dine one day at four o'clock and the next day at six and the next day at seven without injuring our digestion. We can not retire to bed one night at eleven, the next at midnight and on the third night an hour later or earlier and expect sleep to visit our pillows when we choose to summon that coy blessing. There ought to be a regular hour for going to bed and a regular hour for getting up in every family, and nothing, save an emergency of life or death, should interfere with it. Make the hour what you please, only keep to it invariably. Some persons require more sleep than others. Goethe needed and took eight hours every night. Bonaparte required but three. But usually, the more work one does, whether the effort be muscular or nervous, the more sleep he should have. Eight hours is, for the average man or woman, none too much.

Many persons feel that their duty is done when they go to bed. They do not at first try to get to sleep. They "are not sleepy." So they begin to think, to plot, and plan, and romance with their eyes shut, and before they know it their pillows grow hot and they feel cold, and their abused brain has all its faculties in lively action, and then begins the tossing and turning and weary seeking for repose that has so effectually been driven away.

Beside going regularly to bed one wants to go regularly to sleep, and in order to bring this about not a single bit of thinking should be done after one's head is laid upon the pillow for the night. The first thought that intrudes itself is the advance guard of the enemy and must be driven away at once. We must not temporize with the duty of sleeping. Whatever preparations have to be made should be made with the mechanical regularity of clock-work. If the house is heated by furnace or steam, the register or valves should be shut, the light ought to be put out, fresh out-door air admitted by opening the window—fully in Summer, a few inches in Winter—and then no fears nor premonitions of evil, nor business perplexities should obtain one second's admission into that chamber sacred to Morpheus. With the morrow may come the morrow's cares.

The habit of sound sleep ought to be established in childhood.—Congregationalist.

In Memoriam.

Rev. A. A. Honston, son of Aaron and Esther Honston, was born in Mecklenburg county, N. C., Aug. 14 1816, and died at Abbeville, Miss., Oct. 1, 1895. When about eight years old he, with his parents, moved to South Carolina. He professed religion at Pleasant Grove Camp Ground, this State, Aug. 17, 1835 He joined the M. E. Church at Blair, Lancaster district, S. C, soon after. In the following November he received church letter and came to Lafayette county, Miss. Here he found no church organization, but held on to his letter and religion, uniting with the church at first opportunity, when he was made class leader. In 1840 he united with the Methodist Protestant Church, and was retained as class leader. He was licensed to preach Sept. 18, 1843; joined the Conference in November, 1844, and was appointed to travel Itawamba circuit, to make the circuit of which required about two months. For several years he was president of the North Mississippi Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church. He was a delegate to the convention at Montgomery, Ala., which met to consider the union of the Methodist Protestant with the M. E Church, South. He, with others, afterward came into the Memphis Conference of the M. E. Church, South, and, being in ill-health, took supernumerary relation. Upon the death of Rev. E. Jackson he supplied Water Valley station, and was for some years thereafter effective, doing able and successful work. He has for some years been greatly afflicted.

Bro. Honston was happily married to Miss M. E. Barry in the year 1842, whom he says "has been a good preacher's wife" and a great stay. She was constant and untiring in her ministry of love to him to the end. Such devotion is rarely seen.

Bro. Honston was always ready for any work. He could take up a collection, preach a funeral sermon, or conduct revival services with equal ease and success. His power and usefulness as a preacher is evinced by an item from his diary, which says: "I have conducted many precious revivals; have received into the church over three thousand members, and witnessed many more conversions." He gave God all the glory, and continued to praise him until life was gone. When he could preach no more, he would sing. When he lost the power to sing, he whistled the sacred tunes; and when he could do neither, as he passed into the arms of death, he clapped his hands in the praise of his heavenly Father, and thus passed into the glory-land. Truly, a great man has fallen. May God, in tenderest love, console and sweetly comfort his aged companion, and lead safely all his sons and daughters to heaven, where the family circle may be complete forevermore! EBEN P. JAGO, P. C.

Abbeville, Miss., Oct. 8, 1895.

OBITUARIES.

WILKINSON—Mrs. EVIE REED WILKINSON, the daughter of T. D. and M. L. Reed, was born in the city of Meridian on March 5, 1874. In that city she was brought up and partly educated in its graded schools, until she entered the State Female College, at Columbus, Miss., in 1892. On the first day of November, last, she was married to Mr. M. H. Wilkinson, of Amite county, Miss., in Gloster, Miss., in the Methodist Church, and in the presence of a large audience of witnesses, by her grandfather, Rev. W. B. Hines.

Mrs. Wilkinson was a woman of vigorous mind, and acquired knowledge easily and rapidly. Thus she became intelligent and fluent in communicating her intelligence to those with whom she had intercourse. She was largely social in her nature, and she and her friends and associates were warmly attached to each other. Her husband was fondly devoted to his wife, and she fully reciprocated his love. Perhaps no husband was ever more affectionately devoted to a wife. The nobility and unselfishness of his affection was expressed in his language near her closing hours when he said, "I would die for her if I could save her."

But this union of hearts and lives was of short duration—ten months. "The king of terrors and the terror of kings" has thrown down his dismal pall between those loving hearts, with desolation unspeakable.

Mrs. Wilkinson suffered unspeakable pain in her head about six months. But, notwithstanding such suffering, she seemed to have no fear of death, but told all her friends the Lord had forgiven all her sins, and she desired to die. On Sept. 12, about five o'clock P. M., in the presence of her friends and many others, she breathed her life out into the hands of her glorified Savior. Our holy religion is the greatest good our heavenly Father could give a fallen race like ours, and hence when we take it to ourselves, personally and experimentally, it becomes to us the wisdom of God—"the best means to procure the best end." Thus the great currents of thought and of heart are turned from the perishable and fixed upon the imperishable, and thus our lives are lifted up into harmony with one high nature, and harmonized with God's great design in our creation and redemption.

WM. B. H.

THOMAS—On Tuesday morning, July 23, 1895, near Delhi, Richland parish, La., God transplanted the spirit of MATTIE AMELIA, eldest daughter of John O. and Lillien E. Thomas, from this world of trials to blossom in his presence forevermore.

One more tie in heaven! One more standing on the heautiful shore with the saluted father, grandfather and sister to welcome the loved ones as they cross the "valley of death" and enter into the realms of eternal bliss!

Mattie was born Sept. 2, 1882, and in her short life, by her loving ways, had made many true friends. At school she was much loved by her teacher and school-mates. She intended to join the church this Summer, and often spoke of the meeting that was only a week or two off; but God, in his infinite wisdom and power, saw fit to take her as she was, and after a brief, but severe illness bore her soul triumphantly away, leaving a vacant seat at Sunday-school, a vacant chair at home a home made sorrowful by the lack of her merry voice and laughter; leaving an aching void in the hearts of her bereaved mother, grandmother, sister and brothers, which time, love and submission unto the will of God alone will heal. May he pour the balm of comfort into their souls! May they draw closer and look with unsteadfast hope unto him, the author and finisher of all things, who said, Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of Heaven.

H. B. C.

YARBROUGH—T. YARBROUGH was born in Marion county, Miss., March 1, 1852, and died near Liverpool, La., Jan. 8 1895. He leaves a devoted wife, five children, and aged parents, three brothers and one sister, to mourn his loss; but weep not, dear ones, for Tom, for he is now enjoying that beautiful home and sweet rest that the Savior has gone to prepare for those who are faithful. He had been a member of the Methodist church since early in life, but did not feel assured of his acceptance with God until about a year before his death.

Though a great sufferer, he bore all his afflictions with patience. Just two weeks before his death his oldest daughter was called to the glory-land, yet he did not complain. The last few days of his life was spent praying and talking with loved ones around him. He was often heard to say, "Lord, if it is thy will, take me now;" and again he would say, "Thy will be done."

Ah, yes; we know it is hard to give them up. We know there is a vacant chair and a voice that's hushed whose places can never be filled. But, oh! think, loved ones, of the joy and gladness when we all shall meet and clasp hands to never say farewell. May we all live so we can meet in the sweet by-and-by.

M. A. Y.

OLIVER—Mrs. FRANCES M. OLIVER was born in the State of Alabama in the month of August, 1818, and died at her home in Girard, La., Oct. 5, 1895. She was married in February, 1864, to Mr. J. M. Oliver, with whom she lived for several years, during which time there were born unto them two daughters, one of whom still survives.

As a mother, she was a model, leaving an example worthy of imitation to those who have committed to them the care of children. As a neighbor and friend, liberal and thoughtful, and will be greatly missed by those around her. And, lastly, as a Christian, like Mary, "She hath done what she could." When the great separation takes place, and the human family is divided into but two classes by the great Judge, methinks I shall see this individual on the right hand of the King, to whom he will say, "Come, ye blessed of my Father." "I was hungry, and ye gave me meat." . . . "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto me.

BAR—LULA TERESTINE BAR was born in Natchitoches perish, La., March 19, 1884; departed this life July 15, 1895. She was the daughter of Bro. John B. Bar and Sister S. A. Bar.

Little Lula could not remember her papa, who died when she was so young. She was taken sick at school, where she loved to be. It was her greatest pleasure to go to church and to Sunday-school. She was a member of Davis Spring Sunday-school, Wesley circuit, La. She was bright, pleasant and loving in all her ways; a kinder child could not be found.

May God bless and comfort the bereaved mother and brothers and sisters, and help them to so live that they may meet their loved ones in the home beyond the skies!

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The New York Police Board went half a million more than they got last year. The extra expense is for the spies.

It is said that the Dr. John Hall, the eminent Presbyterian divine of New York, is the richest clergyman in the world.

The German brewers of New York have refused to put up for the Tammany campaign fund, and it is considered a terrible blow for Tammany.

The governor of Arizona says that the output of gold of Arizona, for the current year, will be more than $10,000,000. Last year it was $4,000,000.

An extensive fire occurred in this city on Oct. 18. Starting in the National Rice Mill, it nearly wiped out a whole square. Loss, nearly $500,000.

All the postal stations in the city are now in working order. Letters between city districts now make quick time, and much delay is saved in general distribution.

It is stated that Bishop Vincent, of the Methodist Church, says that the bicycle saves young people from falling into many bad habits and advises the ministers to buy one.

The National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution met on Oct. 18, in the Congress Hall of the Woman's Building at the Atlanta Exposition. There were 600 women there attending the congress. Among them are some of the most distinguished women in the United States.

A project has been drawn up for the parade of the 10,000 Confederate veterans living in New York City. A monument in memory of the Confederate dead buried there is to be raised in the vicinity of the city by the New York Camp of Confederate Veterans, and the turn out of the 10,000 is to take place on the day of its dedication.

According to the latest reports from Washington, Secretary Carlisle has notified Senator Manderson, who represents the Oxnard Company, whose claim for bounty was rejected by Comptroller Bowler, that unless he desired to be heard upon a motion filed by him some time since, in opposition to Mr. Bowler's action, the whole matter would be referred to the Court of Claims, which would convene on the twenty-eighth instant.

The decision of the government at Washington that there was no law to prevent the exporting of arms and ammunition on board merchant vessels, when carried as merchandise, is a very important matter for the Cuban insurgents. This ruling by the authorities at Washington will enable the Cubans to purchase arms and ammunition in the United States for delivery in Cuba. The arms and ammunition are very badly needed, as the patriot army, while having an abundance of men, is but poorly provided with arms and munitions of war.

Algiers, the fifth district of this city, was devastated by a fire on last Sunday. Nine and a half squares are in ashes. It is estimated that there were about 200 houses burned, and, with the furniture and personal effects, which were consumed, the total loss foots up the enormous sum of $600,000. And this is largely a complete loss, for not all of the buildings were insured and very little of the furniture. Twelve hundred people were rendered homeless. Immediately after the fire the great crowd of visitors broke down the bridge leading from the Algiers ferry-house to the boat, and precipitated a hundred persons into the river. A woman is reported drowned, two children are missing, and over twenty people were injured. Measures for the relief of the destitute people of Algiers are under way. The city started the fund with $5,000, and the people are giving liberally.

FOREIGN.

It is said that the press and public have been besieging the Brazilian Congress, now in session, to recognize the Cubans as belligerents.

The Spanish government has appropriated 800,000 pesetas (about $60,000) for the purchase of astronomical instruments for the Madrid Observatory.

A dispatch from Shanghai, China, announces that an explosion occurred on the sixteenth on board a steamship loaded with troops, and that six hundred of them perished.

The enthusiasm which has been aroused in Alsace-Lorraine by the presence there during the past week of the Emperor and Empress of Germany has pleased his majesty greatly.

A ferry-boat having sixty passengers on board collided near Cairo, Egypt, with a steamer which was at anchor. The ferry-boat capsized and fifty of those on board of her, mostly workingmen, were drowned.

Montenegro is to have a standing army which will be composed of all the population fit to bear arms. Every man in the country is liable to military duty under the laws, but hitherto the prince's bodyguard of 100 men has been the only organized force kept up during peace.

In consequence of Venezuela not offering apology or reparation for the Urban incident, the Marquis of Salisbury has taken steps to inform that government as to what reparation Great Britain requires. The ultimatum is couched in forcible terms and points out that Great Britain will not permit Venezuela to overstep the boundaries marked by the sources of the rivers Cuyuni and Amacura, but is willing that the question of the other disputed territory should be submitted to arbitration.

Shiloh Camp Meeting.

MR. EDITOR: The Shiloh Camp Meeting began at 7 P. M., on the eleventh instant, and closed on the evening of the sixteenth. The attendance was larger than for many years past, if not the largest gathering ever present. It was estimated by a church official that about 3,000 different persons attended at some part of the meeting. The congregations remained good to the very last, and the most attentive hearers I have seen anywhere. The prejudice against the wire fence and the gate fee has about given away. Improvements have been made this year. A new preachers' tent has been erected, so the preachers have almost home-like comfort. There was not as much demonstration as formerly, though they have not forgotten how to shout yet. Eight joined the church, and there was a goodly number of conversions. There was no effort made to secure the number accurately. The preaching was good. There are plans for enlarging and improving the camp. Rev. K. S. Eaches, who is in charge of the circuit now, is a fine preacher for a young man, is doing a good work, and has the confidence of the people. We had the following traveling preachers besides the presiding elder and preacher in charge: R. A. Sibley, Sr.; R. H. Barr, W. P. Jones. Local preachers: Louis Kendall, J. F. Robinson, T. C. Clark, C. T. McKee, C. C. Griffin, Amos Kendall, W. P. Donald, W. B. King.

The Shiloh community is far superior to many sections of country. They have now a large and permanent school under the management of Prof. McKee, which is doing a needed and good work. The camp ground was probably built in 1831. During the war and for some years after there were no camp meetings, but about fifteen years ago it was rebuilt during the pastorate of Rev. Jno. H. Evans. It is now so large that the hotel and tabernacle must both be enlarged to accommodate the people who attend. C. MCDONALD.

Notice.

MR. EDITOR: I have built a nice church at Athens, Miss., the old county site of Monroe county. I would like for you to put a notice in your paper asking for the sum of $25 to save a $900 church, named Robert Paine Memorial. Anyone so choosing can send donation at once, care First National Bank, Aberdeen, Miss. W. D. WENDELL.

Notice.

I will on Nov. 1 (D. V.) remove my publishing interests, "The Soldier," and my book business, from Columbia, S. C., to Louisville, Ky., where all orders should be addressed.

L. L. PICKETT,
Proprietor "The Soldier."

Makes Him Feel Young.

"I have used three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla every year as a blood purifier, and it greatly improves my health. I am thirty-five years old, and feel as young as when I was eighteen." —Nathan Stokes, Room 36, Sugar Shed "A," New Orleans, La.

Hood's Pills cure indigestion, biliousness.

The Sultan had signed the Armenian reform scheme demanded by the powers. According to the latest information received from Trebizond, Armenia, 400 persons were killed during the recent rioting there. The grand vizier has issued an order holding the governor of Trebizond responsible for all loss of life hereafter through political or religious disturbances.

The church members who are more solicitous about next year's preacher than about this year's debts need to pause in the hurly-burly of life, and examine somewhat minutely into their code of ethics.—Holston Methodist.

Timely Warning.

The great success of the chocolate preparations of the house of Walter Baker & Co. (established in 1780) has led to the placing on the market many misleading and unscrupulous imitations of their name, labels, and wrappers. Walter Baker & Co. are the oldest and largest manufacturers of pure and high-grade Cocoas and Chocolates on this continent. No chemicals are used in their manufactures.

Consumers should ask for, and be sure that they get, the genuine Walter Baker & Co.'s goods.

CAMP MEETINGS.

The Fall Camp Meeting will be held Oct. 25 to Nov. 4, at Cameron, La.

The beauties of the southwest coast of Louisiana brought into service. Rowing, fishing, sailing, and—better still—the best of preaching. Good board and lodging furnished to visitors at the most reasonable rates.

The preaching will be done under the Holiness Tent, and will be red hot and from the heart.

The doctrine of entire sanctification as a second work of grace will be taught throughout the meeting, and seekers will be urged to press into the experience by faith.

The route is via Lake Charles, thence by steamboat (at reduced rates) to Cameron.

For further particulars address Rev. P. D. Van Valkenburgh, Patterson, La.; Benj. Chadwell, Chm. Ent. Com., Cameron, La., or Rev. D. C. Rawls, Y. M. C. A., New Orleans, La.

Any friends inclined to help meet expenses can remit any amount to Jas. A. Wakefield, Treas. Finance Com., or to Rev. W. P. Van Valkenburgh, P. C., Cameron, La.

The New Prospect Camp Meeting, located nineteen miles north of Ocean Springs, will begin on Friday before the fourth Sunday in October. The preachers are cordially invited to attend, and will be entertained free. Hacks will be run from Ocean Springs by Mr. O'Kelly. The public generally are invited to attend. All will be provided for well by Bro. James Roberts at reasonable rates.

TO-DAY.

What can I do to-day?
Not praise to win, or glory to attain;
Not gold, or ease, or power, or love to gain,
Or pleasure gay;
But to impart
Joy to some stricken heart;
To send a heaven-born ray
Of hope, some sad, despairing
Soul to cheer;
To lift some weighing doubt,
Make truth more clear,
Dispel some dwarfing care;
To lull some pain,
Bring to the fold again
Some lamb astray;
To brighten life for some one,
Now and here—
This let me do to-day.

Letter from Italy.

The moment one passes from Switzerland to Italy, there is a striking change in scenery, people, customs—everything. Turin was the first place at which we stopped after leaving Geneva. It is situated on the left bank of the Po, and commands a fine view of the Monte Rosa chain of the Alps. The 400,000 inhabitants live in great, flat, unornamented houses, as they do everywhere in this land. The home, as we know it, is externally non-existent in Italy.

The Royal Palace is the centre of interest in Turin. The interior is magnificent. Each chamber contains a wealth of tapestry, painting, sculpture, and elegant furniture. "The banquet halls" have been deserted since the capital was removed, but the old mansion is still kept up in kingly style. It is built facing the Piazza Castello, near the Palazzo Madoma, which was built by William de Montserrat in the thirteenth century. The stores in Turin are very interesting—all after the arcade plan. Along the streets swarm the motley multitude; dozens of priests and nuns in different garbs; hundreds of dirty, repulsive beggars; the grand dame out for an evening promenade; the exquisite, in silk hat and opalescent smile; the artisan, the tourist. All is nonchalant, picturesque, Italian.

From Turin we went to Genoa, then to Pisa, where we stayed only one afternoon and a night. But in that time we visited the leaning tower, climbed to the top of its marble stairway, from which we gained a splendid view of the surrounding country, and afterward spent an hour, or more, in the great cathedral in which hangs the famous lamp that Galileo watched swinging to and fro, and thence gained his inspiration. It is an artistic bronze ornamented with cherubs, and is as large as an ordinary chandelier. The cathedral, which dates from the early part of the eleventh century, is built entirely of white marble. The only noted work of art it contains is a picture of St. Agnes, by Andrea del Sarto. Back of the grand altar is a peculiar piece of sculpture, representative of the temptation in the Garden of Eden. Adam stands on one side of the apple tree and Eve on the other. Around the tree is coiled the body of a serpent with a woman's head. This interpretation of the tempter was a revelation. We had often heard that the devil appeared to Eve in the shape of an Indian, as an angel of light, and in other guises, but never as partaking of the nature of a woman. Alas! poor woman! and—alas! for a religion that will tolerate such barbarisms!

The women of Italy always go upon the streets bareheaded, except, of course, those of the upper classes. But never do they enter a Catholic Church with their heads uncovered. As they enter the doors, they throw a lace scarf over their heads, or, if very poor, a handkerchief laid three-cornered. The men remove their hats as in other lands; only the ecclesiastical dignitaries retain their caps. The women preserve a dignity in all ranks that is noticeable, and a striking modesty; but the men are openly indecent in their manners.

At Genoa we took lunch and saw the celebrated statue of Columbus, which is about the only thing to be seen in that city of any special importance. Here begins the wonderful road along the Riviera. We gain our first sight of the Mediterranean, and for many miles skirt close to its rock-bound coast. But the beauty and enjoyment were marred by the fifty tunnels through which the train passed before reaching Spezzia, the headquarters of the Italian fleet. Soon we passed through Viareggio, which is famous as the place where Shelley's body was found after he was drowned. It was cremated when Lord Byron was present, and was afterward interred, as was Keats, in the English cemetery at Rome. We had our last view of the Alps at Turin. Then we traveled through a comparatively flat country covered with vineyards and thick with mulberry trees. The latter are raised for leaves on which the silk worms are fed that furnish material for the great industry at Novi. Before Genoa is reached we approach the Apennines, and for a long time speed through their magnificent heights and smiling valleys. This range of mountains is not so grand as the Alps, but very imposing and beautiful.

At eleven o'clock at night we boarded the train at Pisa for Rome. In our compartment were two ladies of the W. C. T. U. company beside myself, an old Italian woman, and two foreign men. We had to make ourselves as comfortable as circumstances allowed, which meant that some slept sitting upright, some with head on seat and feet on valise, while others watched and slumbered not. At twelve the two men drew out their bottles and drank heavily, then lighted their cigars and smoked. This interesting performance was repeated at short intervals until the day dawned. There was a streak of sunlight through the reeking air, short staccato snorts from our companions in distress, a rubbing of eyes, a stretching of muscles, an exchange of miserable glances, an outlook through the open window to the blue waters of the Mediterranean, soon a dash across the muddy Tiber, and we were in Rome—Rome, the eternal city, and the seven hills that have lighted the world with glory, but now sit in pathetic darkness.

How May We Increase the Missionary Interest?

INCREASE MISSIONARY KNOWLEDGE.

Without knowledge there can be no interest. That of which we know nothing we care nothing. Our deepest interest centers in those subjects of which we know the most; increased knowledge brings increased interest.

It is election time. A new party is organized. It wishes the interest and support of the people. How is this to be secured? By informing the people of its need, its influence, its principles, its purposes. To this end newspapers are established, tracts and books circulated, "button-holing" engaged in, campaign orators sent to harangue the people of every city, village and country school district. This is called a campaign of education. The politician would rather have antagonistic interest than total ignorance, for ignorance means indifference, and indifference is a more formidable enemy than bitter opposition. He increases political interest by increasing political knowledge.

A manufacturer desires to introduce a new article to the trade. How does he do it? By informing the people of its usefulness. Sign painters go up and down the land. Country fences, bridge timbers, bill-boards, the sides of sheds and barns are made to sing the praises of this new article of commerce. Even nature's beauties are marred by glaring advertisements. Small boys stand upon the street corners and thrust hand-bills into the hands of every passerby. Newspapers are filled with "display ads." Traveling agents go to retail dealers, and in person urge the advantages of handling this article. The manufacturer believes in advertising. He increases commercial interest by increasing commercial knowledge.

The children of the kingdom can learn some things from the children of the world. Christians are indifferent to foreign missions because they know little or nothing of foreign missions. Congregational Christians who do not know what A. B. C. F. M. stands for, can not be expected to be interested in a thrilling history which commenced with the prayers of three college boys behind a hay-stack, and continues in the bloody scenes now being enacted in China.

No truly converted man or woman can prayerfully and thoughtfully read "The Life of John G. Paton" or "The Life and Letters of Joseph Neesima" or "Mackay of Uganda," and afterward be totally indifferent to the cause of foreign missions. No disciple of Jesus can understand in its fullness the meaning of the Savior's great commission and turn a deaf ear to the Macedonian cry of those beyond the sea. American Christians are not hard-hearted. They are ignorant of the need and suffering of the heathen world. They are ignorant of God's movements in history. They have narrow views of God's redemptive purposes toward the world. They are leaving large parts of their Bibles unread and unstudied. They have not a scriptural idea of the Christian's opportunity, work and reward. Increased knowledge of these things among converted men and women must mean increased missionary interest.

INCREASE MISSIONARY INVESTMENTS.

"Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also."

I am riding through the country. I pass comfortable farm-houses, fruit-laden orchards, commodious barns and granaries. I seek sleek horses and cattle, beautiful fields of corn and wheat. I have an interest in all this, because I have a general interest in thrift and beauty. But I come to one farm. My interest ceases to be general; it is particular and intense. This house and barn are more convenient than others. The apples from this orchard taste sweeter. I see finer points in these horses and cattle and hogs. The corn in this field is more green and stately. The golden hue of this wheat field is brighter. And why? Because they are mine. My money paid for these things. My money, my time, my thoughts, my efforts have been invested in this farm. The interest in my investment is greater than my interest in the investments of other people. The greater my investment the greater my interest.

So it is in missionary enterprises. If a certain missionary enterprise is wholly, or in part, supported by my money, the interest in the enterprise becomes personal.

If the enterprise has been projected as a result of my own thought and plans, the interest is still greater. If I give my best thought and effort continually to this work, it becomes the great interest of my life, about which all other interests center. Increased investments of money, time, efforts and prayers in definite missionary work always increases the missionary spirit.—The Church Calendar.

Liberalism and Spiritual Religion.

Whatever may be said in favor of the "free handling" of the Scriptures, by literary critics, and the fresh light it throws on their meaning, scarcely anyone will maintain that the current German style of biblical criticism is likely to promote spiritual religion, or revivals in which sinners are converted to God. Of course, if any theories are duly attested, we must accept them, whatever the consequences may be; but the character of the results of any religious teaching should receive due consideration. If the fruit is not good it is a strong presumption against the truth of the teaching. Even a secular paper like the New York Tribune plainly says: "It is plain that the men in the churches who have become the critics and investigators of religion must necessarily be out of sympathy with revivals; and as a matter of fact, the present wave of revivalism in this and other cities is sustained and impelled by those who look upon the critics and investigators as profane and blasphemous persons, who are trying to undermine the faith."

This is putting the case rather too strongly. "Profane and blasphemous persons" may be an overstatement; but the assertion is substantially true. Rationalist critics look upon earnest Christian workers, who labor for the conversion of sinners, with contempt, and many earnest, evangelical Christians regard the extreme higher critics and their theories with grave distrust. Neither of these classes may be quite just to the other; but however that may be, the "liberal theology" is not revival theology. The theorizing evolutionists are not evangelistic workers.

The main element in every revival of spiritual religion is the believing acceptance of the divine authority of the warnings and promises of the Bible. But those who do not recognize the personal agency of the Holy Spirit, who regard the Scriptures as simply the record of the evolution of the religious ideas of an ancient people, and who explain away all that is not in harmony with their theories, are not likely to prove, by personal experience, that the gospel message is the power of God to the salvation of everyone that believeth. Those who deem themselves oracles will not honor the oracles of God. Those who hold that Isaiah and Jeremiah, Paul and Peter, were inspired only in the same sense in which Zoroaster and Buddha, or Plato and Milton, were inspired, will not receive as divine truth, possessing obligations for the conscience, what prophets and apostles say about sin and salvation, duty and destiny.

What sober reasoning would lead us to expect is confirmed by the actual facts of human experience. The conclusions of the advanced critics respecting the Bible are in virtual agreement with the Unitarian ideas of the Scriptures. But the preaching of the Unitarians produces no revivals. In Germany and Holland, wherever the theories of so-called liberal criticism have been taught and received, spiritual religion has declined, and revivals are no longer witnessed. No mere humanitarian sentimentalism can produce the repentance of sin and faith in Christ, which are essential conditions of scriptural conversion. All theories that tend to lessen faith in the truth and authority of the doctrines of the Bible weaken the force of the preacher's appeal to the conscience. It has been well said: "There is nothing so abjectly weak in dealing with the world's great sin as theological namby-pambyism. There is nothing so effective in dealing with sin as stern truth plainly preached, with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven." It is as certain as anything can well be, that the whole drift of rationalistic speculation is against the growth of evangelical Christianity and spiritual religion. Men who in early life have been trained in evangelical theology, and tasted the good Word of God, after embracing lax theories about the Bible may still retain the impulses of their early faith; but those who early imbibe low ideas of the inspiration of Scripture are not likely to be promoters of revival work. If we minify and explain away God's recorded interpositions in former times, we weaken the grounds of faith in him at the hearer and answerer of prayer in our own experience.—Guardian.

An encouraging omen is the formation in St. Louis of a Civic Federation, similar in its essential features to the one that has brought about such gratifying results in Chicago. The object of this organization, which is non-sectarian and non-political, is to correct abuses in municipal affairs, secure as far as possible the separation of municipal issues from State and national politics, and unite the various forces that are working to advance the governmental, industrial, moral, and philanthropic interests of the city, so as to prevent different societies from overlapping and interfering with one another's efforts. Some of our most substantial business men are at the head of the Federation, which should be heartily supported by all good citizens.—Central Advocate.

The Review of Reviews, for September, calls attention to the change in European sentiment on the liquor question, as shown especially in the establishment of the French monopoly of the manufacture and wholesale supply of strong liquors, in the work of the Belgian commission, and in the still more important action taken by Russia in setting up a government monopoly of the entire wholesale and retail traffic in liquors throughout the empire. "Everywhere in Europe," says the editor of the Review, "the fact is becoming recognized that liquor selling is not only an unbecoming business, but one that is socially and politically dangerous, requiring new and rigid regulation, or else total suppression."

The president of a Liquor Dealers' Association, which has indorsed the Tammany ticket in this city, says: "I will not support any man who is not in favor of my business. I am a liquor dealer first, and a Republican afterward." In other words, his patriotism is devotion to his business. He is a rumseller first, a citizen second.—Independent.

The man who can not read a chapter from the Bible in the pulpit without stopping half a dozen times to retranslate an unsatisfactory passage is not far from the kingdom of—destructive criticism.

Much has been forgiven Editor Dana, of the New York Sun, because of his sparkling editorial page. But he has passed all bounds of decency in his late onslaught upon a New York Presbyterian pastor who is conspicuous in his labors for the enforcement of the Sunday saloon law. Dana has been impious enough to accuse this minister of breaking that same law when he administers the sacred communion cup. In so writing he has outraged the sensibilities of every man and woman, Protestant and Romanist. He has pandered to the lowest, most vicious element of New York City—this man who talks so glibly and gracefully of the high calling of "journalism" before college students! It begins to be evident that Dana loves to horrify and hurt people. He loves wrong just for wrong's sake. He is the typical "Degenerate" of America. A man who will write as he has done concerning the communion cup, has sold his honor and his manhood for a mess of bitter pottage.—Mid-Continent.

A majority of crimes at present are directly connected with strong drink; but the Congregationalist cites the case of Turkey to show, what we all know, that crimes would not cease with the abolition of the drink curse. Turkey has had a prohibitory liquor law well enforced for 600 years; yet in no country in the world does so much crime and cruelty exist. Something more than temperance reform is needed. Turkey is what it is because of the character of the people, and the influence of Mohammedanism. Nothing but the influence of Christianity can be depended on to save a people. With us, fortunately, temperance efforts have usually been connected with some form of religious efforts. There are many wicked men who do not drink. We make a mistake when we think that any great reform alone will save the world. Our confidence is in Christianity. "Seek first the kingdom of God." Other reformatory movements should be given a second place.—Journal and Messenger.

Dean Farrar, of Canterbury, has an article in the last Fortnightly Review on the question whether the Roman Catholic Church is increasing in England. He goes into the statistics as far as these are available, and quotes from various Catholic authorities, tending to show that while the church has gained few converts from the educated element, it has lost quite heavily in various directions. The Dean in conclusion, says that he "can see no positive proof that Roman Catholicism, as such, is gaining to any very appreciable extent, although it is perfectly true, and very grievously true, that doctrines once regarded as distinctively Roman Catholic are now taught on every side in the Church of England."—Independent.

According to Henry M. Stanley, the African explorer, the resources of the Dark Continent are enormous, and, with means of quick communication between the sea and the interior, they will develop very rapidly. Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, British Colonial Minister, has recommended the construction of a railroad six hundred and fifty-seven miles long from Mombasa to Victoria Nyanza, the second largest lake in the world. This road is to cost about $8,750,000, and will be built by the British government under the supervision of the East Indian engineers, with a large force of Indian laborers. Work on the road will be commenced in November.—Exchange.

Rev. H. W. Webb Peploe, prebendary of St. Paul's, London, in his address before the ministers of all denominations in Chicago, uttered a timely and important truth when he said, "The ministers must hold closer to the Bible, or lose its power." The sentiment, we are told, "was greeted with long-continued and repeated applause." The Bible is the glory and strength of the pulpit. Its occupant commits a fatal mistake when he ignores the spiritual and divine element in his ministrations.—Presbyterian.

God never calls a man to lead without calling somebody to follow. The man who is convinced that he is called to leadership, but can convince nobody of it, would do well to follow the example of little Samuel and go lie down again.—Baltimore Advocate.

It is marvelous how much can be accomplished by the agitation of a great moral question. It is, indeed, by this method that progress is made in all those directions which promise the higher welfare of the race. The attitude of our people towards the liquor traffic is very different from what it was half a century, or more, ago. Edward Payson's salary was partly paid in Jamaica rum. What church nowadays would even dream of thus discharging its financial obligations to its pastor? There was a time when a pastor would become so intoxicated while making his round of pastoral calls, that he had to go to his study to sober up; but how summarily would a church in our time deal with a tippling pastor? These are simple facts which show our moral progress. This advancement has been achieved by the slow process of educating public sentiment. The present attainment does not represent the work of a day, but of several decades.—Mid-Continent.

Prof. Briggs, who has lately been tried in the Presbyterian Church for heresy, was to have addressed the Brotherhood of Standards, an Episcopal fraternity at Louisville, on the subject of "Christian Unity;" but the fraternity reconsidered the matter, and struck Dr. Briggs' name from the program, considering that Christian unity would not be promoted by a man who caused dissensions in his own church.

Communications.

In the Living Present.

The Bookman treats of the difficulty of making a living by literature. Competition fierce, remuneration small. To-day fiction pays best. Many writers drift into newspaper work. But only few attain to eminence and a large income. The vast majority, after wasting body, intellect and soul, if not given to extraordinary thrift, are in their declining years dependent on the Newspaper Press Fund.

Denver has a genuine sensation. Francis Schlatter, an assuming man, whose photograph resembles the picture usually made of Christ, effects astounding cures by shaking hands and uttering a brief invocation. Daily hundreds of invalids form in line, anxious to meet the healer, as he is called. He takes no money for his services. Protestant preachers declare his cures miraculous.

A writer in Donahoe's, for October assures that Satolli, papal delegate to Washington, is the most prominent candidate for the popedom. At the same time it is stated that Leo XIII. is extremely feeble. The writer adds that the great questions of the future are the social problems and the union of Christendom. These Satolli has for many years made a chief study.

Conceit adheres to some of the best men. It seems incredible, but it is reported as true, by no means as a joke, that Dr. Joseph Parker, of the City Temple of London, was asked by a visiting relative from the interior, please, since he could spend only one Sunday in the city, to tell him who was the best preacher, that he might go and hear him. "Best, you say," replied the complacent Doctor; "best. Well, if you ark who is second best, I will name him. Modesty forbids to mention the name of the best."

The Central Baptist, of St. Louis, declares that the chief reason for comparatively few men attending our religious services is found in the fact that the utterances of divines from the pulpit are frequently sadly diluted, nauseatingly feeble, not to say insipid. Wonder if it is so?

A literary vulture must be the author of a pamphlet which contains the name, address, and circumstances of crime and trial of eight hundred and fifty preachers who, during the last two decades, have been found guilty of immorality. But in our country and in Canada—and to these countries the writer confines his researches—there are 150 000 preachers. That would make annually forty-two clerical criminals, or only one-half per cent. of the whole. A creditable showing indeed.

The Christians of New York will soon have a chance to show their fealty to Christ. Tammany has captured its favorite political party, and boldly clamors for abolishment of the Sunday law. With free Sunday is meant the open Sunday saloons. ICH DIEN.

LOVE.

BY MARIANNE FARNINGHAM.

Oh, love! how wonderful thy power
To beautify all places,
To turn the dark to brightsome hour,
The plain to loveliest faces.
They miss not flowers, nor gems, nor gold,
Nor sun, nor Summer weather,
Who, loving and beloved, may walk
The ways of life together.

Worker of miracles be good
To all within the city;
Awake, sad, lonely ones to joy,
With thy transforming pity.
Love is the boon the people need,
There would be no more sorrow
If love would come, and love would last,
Through every dark to-morrow.

Correspondence.

In the East.

BY REV. D. E. KELLEY.

MR. EDITOR: I left my home at Gloster, Miss., April 7, 1894, for Lebanon, Ohio, for the purpose of attending the National Normal University, where I am pursuing the prescribed course of study of that institution. I am well pleased with the school. There is the best religious influence here that I ever saw. There are many bright conversions among the students, through the influence of the Y. M. and Y. W. C. A.'s, every year. I find here quite a number of students from the Southern States, Mississippi and Louisiana being well represented, both in quantity and quality.

During my stay here I had the good fortune to make the acquaintance of Ed. H. M. Curry, which soon ripened into a warm friendship. Upon finding that I was aspiring to travel and, indeed, had arranged to take a trip during the Summer, he proposed that we go on his usual Summer outing together. I assented. A trip through this most interesting section of our nation, most of the time as a private guest, in company with a gentleman liberally educated and extensively experienced in travel, and who is thoroughly acquainted in all the Eastern cities and Summer resorts, was a rare opportunity indeed.

We — Mr. Curry and myself — left Cincinnati in a Pullman sleeper on the evening of July 8, 1895, arriving next day at Niagara Falls about 8:30 A. M. From Cincinnati to Niagara we were thrown in with the excursion of Christian Endeavorers en route to the Boston Convention. We chanced to be about the only men in the car which we occupied, and fell victim to all the noise that a company of women, many of whom showed their inexperience in travel, could possibly make. Some of them kept up their chatter until late bed-time, making nearly as much noise as the train. Some refused to go to bed at all, thinking it impossible to climb into the upper berth. This amused me. The porter told them they were not permitted to remain up over a certain hour. He relieved their embarrassment somewhat by producing a step-ladder, by means of which they were finally persuaded to ascend to their berths. After all, it was very pleasant, in many respects, to be with these good women. The day was spent very pleasantly and profitably at Niagara, visiting all the points of interest, both on the American and Canadian side. An attempt to describe the wonders of Niagara would be folly; but no one has seen beauty, grandeur and sublimity, awfully and wonderfully combined, who has not seen Niagara.

We left Niagara on a through train for New York City, where we arrived in due time. On arriving in this metropolis of the Western world, in response to previous invitation, we went directly to the princely home of Mr. D Stanson, on Lexington avenue — a New York millionare, and a special friend of Ed. Curry. We were cordially received and royally entertained during a stay of several days. While here we visited many places of interest, including Central Park, in which stands Cleopatra's Needle, the old Egyptian obelisk, presented to this country by the Khedive of Egypt. One feels a queer sensation as he looks upon this ancient monument, remembering that Moses and Pharaoh, and the children of Israel of their day, looked upon the same object. The Metropolitan Museum, also located in Central Park, claimed a good share of our time and attention. This is one of the finest collections of art of every description to be found in any country. We visited St. Patrick's Cathedral, the finest church edifice on the Western continent; Trinity Church, full of historic interest; Eden Musee, with its bewildering wonders; Brooklyn Bridge, the World Building, Wall street, the statue of Liberty on Bedloe Island, and many other interesting places and things. While in New York I formed the acquaintance of some of the first families, and was entertained in their homes.

Our next objective point was Catskill Mountains, in whose cool retreat we were to spend several weeks. Our way to this point lay on the Hudson. We took the Albany day-boat, leaving New York in the morning, giving us a day on this most beautiful, noble, and picturesque of all rivers. A day on the Hudson fills one with feelings not to be transferred to paper or canvas. We landed at Albany late in the afternoon, and took a train immediately for Holcottsville, in the heart of the Catskills. We reached our destination about dark, and were soon comfortably quartered for a few days. We spent about three weeks in the mountains, during which time we visited every point of interest in three counties. We stood upon mountain-tops above the clouds, while thunder-storms roared in the valley below. We stood upon the breezy portico of the 'Kaaterskill Mountain House," which is the largest mountain hotel in the world, and looked over an area of thirty thousand square miles at one sweep of the vision. From this point can be seen the Adirondack Mountains in Northern New York, the Green Mountains in Vermont, the White Mountains in New Hampshire, the Berkshire Hills in Massachusetts and Connecticut, the Warwick Mountains in New Jersey, and the Alleghany Mountains in Pennsylvania. We were very much braced by the cool air and pure water of the mountains, and delighted by the beautiful scenery. The Catskills are said to be the most popular Summer resort in our country. Three hundred thousand tourists spend the heated term in their cool retreats. Every place we visited was crowded with boarders. We also saw much of the home life of the people in the Catskills. It is a great dairy and fruit region, the rich valleys and fertile coves affording fine pasturage. The milk was abundant and delicious. I had never seen apples so plentiful before. Among the many places of interest visited in these mountains may be mentioned the place where "Rip Van Winkle" took his twenty-years' nap. Poor "Rip," I can sympathize with him, for I almost went to sleep before I could get away from the scene. Roxbury, the boyhood home of Jay Gould, was also visited. We saw in the village the old store where he was a clerk when a boy; attended services in the Gould Memorial Church, erected by Miss Helen Gould, which is a beautiful and very costly edifice; also the grave of Gould's parents. Space forbids the mention of other places, but we saw the best of the Catskills, having driven in a private conveyance over three hundred miles in their very heart, and visited more than twenty of their most beautiful villages.

From the Catskills we went to Saratoga, the greatest, perhaps, of all watering-places. Thousands of people of fashion, from all parts of the world, throng this place every Summer. It is a grand, delightful place, and only to see it broadens one socially and intellectually; but to remain awhile and drink the wonderful water improves one physically and mentally.

We went from Saratoga to Albany, the capital of the State of New York. The two most important sights in Albany are Washington Park and the new Capitol Building. The last-named has cost up to the present twenty-five millions of dollars, and at least ten millions more will be required to complete it. It is ranked with the wonders of the world.

From Albany we went to Otego, a lovely little town nestling in the beautiful Susquehana Valley, in the cool embrace of the Western Catskills.

MR. EDITOR: Please allow me to report the following: Three ladies of the North Mississippi Conference are to send $5 by their pastor to the meeting of their Annual Conference. Will Bro. Porter (R. G.) receive it with any other amounts, and send immediately to me at Yazoo City, so we may have it in our settlement with Bro. Cammack? Bro. Porter, please, sir, help me; and brethren and sisters of the North Mississippi Conference, please help in this important work. Send amounts by your pastors to Bro. Porter, and he will send it to me. Have received from Mrs. R. J. Cammack, of our own Conference, $1.

Now, brethren and sisters, the time is short; the Conference will soon be here. What we do must be done quickly. We have done very little up to date. What are we going to do? The Lord has prospered us, and times are much better now, and will be. Let's make a thank-offering to the Lord for his goodness and mercy to us. Let's give liberally to the Indian Mission in Mississippi. Let's offer them the Bread of Life as we have the opportunity. "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver." Please send amounts by your pastor to me at Conference. Now, don't forget it, and may the good Lord bless every giver!

These Resolutions.

MR. EDITOR: My attention has been called to resolutions in your last issue, signed by nine Methodist ministers, saying that it is unlawful to permit unlicensed persons to occupy the pulpit of our church, or to have control of the services held therein, or on any property owned by said church. Now if this be true, the men who signed these resolutions, and every Methodist pastor I have ever known, have been violators of this law of the church. The church issues no license to stewards, class leaders, Sunday-school teachers, candidates for the ministry, and others, whose duty it is—and I thank God their privilege as well—to hold religious services, read the Scriptures, comment on them, teach and preach—if they feel like it—in the church, and out of it; and in former days they preached the doctrine of sanctification. During the seventy years that I have been an earnest listener to the doctrines of the Methodist Church, I have not heard of an objector until within the past few years. I have heard that some of the brothers who signed the resolutions have said that they are sorry they did so. It is enough to make them sorry. It is a misrepresentation of the laws and usages of the M. E. Church, North and South. The brethren, in publishing such resolutions, are placed in the difficult and unpleasant attitude of having to produce the law, or retract.

Have We a Church?

This question may seem sensible or silly, pertinent or impertinent, according to our point of view. To look at the outside only, or to consult statistics, we should unhesitatingly answer in the affirmative. With our hundreds of thousands of members, our missions reaching well-nigh around the globe, our Conferences, our Bishops, our preachers, our publishing interests, etc., we seem to be a flourishing and powerful body. It is when we look nearer and behold the open contempt and violation of our laws—evidences of which come to us from every quarter—that we realize the danger which threatens; and if not checked, will inevitably precede our dissolution. History, sacred and profane, teaches us that any organization, whether of Church or State, which first disregards, and then countenances, violations of law, will assuredly fall. It is the "house divided against itself." To the Jews was given the first and perfect law—the Ten Commandments—and it was in proportion to their obedience, or disobedience, that they prospered or failed. It required no miracle to destroy Ahab or punish Jezebel. Their mad disregard of justice raised up human enemies ready to execute God's decree. So in the history of other peoples like consequences followed like negligence or defiance, for no community, from the family to the nation, can escape destruction, except it be under the dominion of law, for "law is liberty," and the lack of it license. It seems trite to say, "If a law is bad, alter it;" but it is advice men are seldom willing to take. It is so much easier to break than to change a law. One requires little effort, the other "patient continuance in well doing" and earnest work; yet there can be no question which is the nobler course. As long as a law stands in our Discipline, which is our code, so long are we, as honest men and women, bound to obey it. Every member of the church, who has a right to be called one, has promised, in the sight of God and the congregation, to be subject to its discipline; and the question is not what we, as individuals, prefer, or even what we believe to be best, but what the Discipline directs. The Head of the church says, "Think not I am come to destroy the law. I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill;" and Paul, speaking by the Holy Ghost, says, "The powers that be are ordained of God." How, then, can we, as Christians, afford to destroy the law, disobey these powers, and violate our solemn oath?

TREASURER'S REPORT FROM MARCH, 1894, TO MARCH, 1895.

MR. EDITOR: Please pardon me for troubling you again to publish my report; but so many complaints have come to me about the many errors in my report in the published Minutes of our last session, I must ask you to set me right before the auxiliaries. I furnished a correct report to our secretary for publication, so it is not my fault that the amounts are wrong and many auxiliaries not reported at all. Please publish this note, and I hope all the members of our W. F. M. S. will read it and see the correct report from each auxiliary.

The Dead Line.

The Outlook concedes that there is such a bourne in the ministry as the "dead line," and that it is more obvious than in any other profession, for the reason that the gospel minister's peculiar office is to impart life. Everything turns, not on his years, but on his ability to fulfill the functions of a giver and diffuser of the more abundant life which Christ came and returned to make possible and real.

As long as a minister can arouse and reinforce "that which is really life" in men, so long they seek him. That which has kept the great preachers in their places and their ministry has been their power to awake in men the sense for unseen and eternal things, and by the preaching of a living Christ to bring them to God. That power reaches the deepest springs of the soul, and lays a life-giving hand on every faculty. The men who can do this know no "dead line" except that which actual physical disability draws, in this as it does in all other callings. The great masters of pulpit eloquence testify to this, from the days of Paul to the days of Wesley and Finney and Phillips Brooks and Henry Ward Beecher. And every reader probably can recall to mind men in the ministry—not widely noted, it may be, or ranked among the great—whose labors ceased only with the loss of physical strength, because they so really ministered to life, and in so many ways served the truest and highest interests of men. Sometimes it is by the vigor of their intellectual life, kept fresh by assiduous and wise study; sometimes by warmth of heart and unselfishness; sometimes by their eminent purity and force of spiritual character. In whatever way it may be, they bring to men the contact and supply, not of a higher human life, but of that which Christ alone brought and ever renews. They are felt as vital with a divine life, and for that life men go to them.—Exchange.

This suggests to me what little things may give sick and nervous people annoyance. A distinguished minister told me that he found it necessary to guard himself most carefully when in the sick-room. He would not sit in a rocking-chair, for fear that he would hurt the nerves of the afflicted by its motion. He kept watch over the movements of hands and feet, and head and tongue. He guarded his lips, and was very careful about the tone of his voice. He never remained long, and was careful to maintain a spirit of cheerfulness. He talked but little, and what he did say was most carefully guarded. I need not say that this man came into the chamber of suffering as a ministering angel.—United Presbyterian.

The Preacher and His Model.

Some time ago a good man put this book in the hands of a preacher and asked him to read it, and then give it to another preacher with the same request that it should be handed to another and another.

I am glad that it fell into my hands so early. But as it will hardly fall to the lot of every preacher to read that special copy, and as it is a good book well worth preserving in a preacher's library, I will quote only one passage, with the hope that it may excite a desire in some to see more of it. The author, Dr. James Stalker, who has been a pastor for a long time, speaking of his work with individuals, and confessing that he had made a great mistake in neglecting it too much, says: "We make the impressions in the church, but we do not follow them up to see that the decision is arrived at and the work of God accomplished; and so they are dissipated by the influence of the world; and those who have experienced them are perhaps made worse instead of better. It is a very significant thing that is said of the pastor in our Lord's parable—that he sought the lost sheep 'until he found it.' We seek—we even seek laboriously and painfully—but we frequently leave off just before finding."

A minister told me that on the Saturday evening before his first Sunday in his first charge, the experienced minister who was to introduce him to his people the next day was strolling with him in the vicinity of the village and talking to him about his duties, when they chanced to pass a plantation of trees. Pointing to them, the aged minister asked: "If you had to cut those trees down, how would you go about it? Would you go around the whole plantation, giving each tree a single blow, and then go around them all again, giving each a second blow?" "Well, no," he answered; "I think I should attack one tree and cut at it till it came down, and then go and do the same to a second and a third," etc. "Well," said his experienced friend, "that is the way you must do here. After you have been settled a short time you will discover which families and individuals are most impressed by your first efforts, and you must devote yourself to these susceptible souls till you have won them thoroughly; and then in their enthusiasm for yourself and their willingness to work for the congregation, you will have the best foundation for a successful ministry."

Perhaps this incident may also have an intrinsic value to those of our preachers who, after the Annual Conferences, will be seeking their new homes.—W. C. K., in Richmond Advocate.

It takes two people to make a good sermon—a good preacher and a good hearer. Too often this partnership relation in preaching the gospel is not recognized. We have seen lazy-looking souls drag their unwilling frames into church, loll down in the first seat they reached as if they had accomplished a remarkable feat and paid the preacher a grand compliment by their presence. When it came to the sermon, they braced themselves back with a determined air of indifference and dared the speaker to command their attention to anything he might venture to say. Not only did their manner make it difficult for them to be interested, but they made it next to impossible for him to be interesting. One or two eager listening faces are worth as much to the preacher as an hour spent in careful preparation. A house full of good listeners will take all the laziness out of a preacher, and next Sunday he would not venture to look hungry people in the eye and give them a stone for bread. We know kind hearts who never hear a poor sermon; they are such intent listeners that they put merit into a poor discourse; ability to listen to a sermon is a mark of civilization. Heathens can not.—The Central Baptist.

It is almost as presumptuous to think you can do nothing, as to think you can do everything. The latter folly supposes that God exhausted himself when he made you; but the former supposes that God made a hopeless blunder when he made you, which is quite as impious for you to think. This false humility which enfeebles and paralyzes, in distinction from the true humility which stimulates, comes from an overthought about self, and so is really pride. Any man who is good for anything, if he is always thinking about himself, will come to think himself good for nothing very soon. Hence the best thing to do is to stop thinking about self, to shake off this poisoning self-consciousness, this oversense of one's own personality, to forget self by becoming absorbed in the desire to serve God and bless our fellow-men. Duty and love are two powers which will rescue us from this bondage—duty to him above us, love to those around us. Here is our hope for all noble and truly humble work. This puts us into right relations with others, and frees us from those false relations which cripple and harm.—Phillips Brooks.

The Crowning Century.

We are living in the closing decade of the greatest century of our era. Faith and unfaith have contended in the arena for the precedence. Faith has an immense backing in her great past. That past forms a presumption in her favor. The system which can live through the changes and storms of eighteen centuries must be presumed, to have in it the seeds of immortality. What is more remarkable than this is the continuous growth of the cause through so many ages. In our own century the increase has been more than in several earlier ones. It is the missionary century. The doors of the nations have opened. The area of Christendom has vastly expanded. The Dark Continent and the isles of the seas are extending their hands to the Lord Jesus. All has not been accomplished, but a noble beginning has been made toward the world's evangelization. In these great years unbelief has taken upon itself to proclaim a pessimistic gospel and the decay and failure of Christianity. These men have often called themselves scientists and philosophers. Their misconception of the gospel discredits their assumptions of wisdom. Not to know the advance of the gospel is to assert their own blindness and narrow understanding. The age of miracles in a new form has been renewed. In its material interests and moral enterprises the world has made greater advances in ours than in the eighteen preceding centuries, and all this has been the creation of Christian thought and enterprise. Christianity is the leverage which is lifting the world to a higher plane. Whoever speaks a word against such a scheme is speaking against truth and reason. Christianity speaks for itself, and furnishes its own best evidence. The gospel has never failed to rebuke those who have risen against it.—Zion's Herald.

Resignation to God's Will.

This is a subject of the greatest importance—indeed, it is perhaps the most positive proof of a state of real holiness. We find a beautiful illustration of this in the life of Fenelon. It is thus given:

"A most remarkable instance of Christian resignation was discovered on one particular occasion in the conduct of Archbishop Fenelon. When his illustrious and hopeful pupil, the Duke of Burgundy, lay dead in his office, and the nobles of his court, in all the pomp of silent sadness, stood around, the Archbishop came into the apartment; and, having fixed his eyes for some time upon the corpse, broke out at length in words to this effect: 'There lies my beloved prince, for whom my affections were equal to the tenderest regard of the tenderest parents. Nor were my affections lost; he loved me in return with all the ardor of a son. There he lies; and all my worldly happiness lies dead with him. But if the turning of a straw would call him back to life, I would not for ten thousand worlds be the turner of that straw in opposition to the will of God.'"

A noble example. It excites our admiration. Under the circumstances it flames with light, and is worthy of a place in Christian annals.

However it is compassed, the Bible must be read more and studied more and taken more deeply into life by every Christian man. We can not do without it. It is the very heart of our faith. It contains in the germ the whole of our religion. It is the character of our religious liberties in the deepest sense of liberty. He who reads and knows it can never be made a slave of traditions, or hierarchies, or creeds. It is the perpetual inspiration of the faith of the church. The victims of unbelief are not the Bible readers. We have known Christian metaphysics to inspire doubt, but never the Christian life. It is the unfailing guide to the progress of the church. Cast as it is in the life form, it reapplies itself continually to the changing horizons of thought and society, and it can not become antiquated or obsolete any more than a deed of heroism or a mother's love.—Selected.

Courage does not find truest expression always in words. Sometimes there is more heroism in holding the lips than in speaking. Denunciation is not a sure sign of an intrepid spirit. And pulpit denunciation is vastly easier than a face-to-face talk with a wrong-doer. Few men, however wicked they may be, care to assault a preacher. Public sentiment is against it. A congregation stands between the opponents. The faithful pastor who talks to his wayward members face to face is braver than the peripatetic who hurls anathemas from a platform, and goes on his way rejoicing.—Exchange.

One reason why there is so much grumbling these hard times is because it is about the only business that requires absolutely no capital to begin with.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. Robert Randle, Shiloh, La., Oct. 14: "We have held four protracted meetings on this circuit with gratifying results. Forty-five have been added to the church, and there have been seventy-five or eighty conversions. The church has been greatly revived and is doing good work. I have two or three more meetings to hold, and am looking to the Master for still greater results. To God be the praise!"

Rev. J. W. Raper, P. C., Nettleton circuit, Aberdeen district, North Mississippi Conference, Oct. 18: "We are through with our protracted meetings for this year. The Lord has done great things for us on this charge, for which we are glad. We have had about one hundred conversions this Summer, and eighty-one additions to the church on this charge. We are indebted to the following brethren for their efficient service: S. M. Thames, our beloved presiding elder, who did some good preaching, and held our third Quarterly Conference at Pisgah; H. C. Parrott, local preacher of the Oxolona circuit; B. R. East, local preacher of Saltillo circuit; Thomas Tayler, of the Nettleton circuit; T. H. Dorsey, of the Fulton circuit; J. E. Snow, of the Amory circuit, and L. T. Sargent, of the Tremont circuit. We think that charge will make a full report this year for the first time in its history. All the glory and praise be to God!"

Rev. E. S. Lewis, Rosedale, Miss., Oct. 21: "Our Conference comes on space, and we are striving hard to be in readiness therefor. This has been a year of unusual activity in the Greenville district, of which we are a part. Three new churches will be reported at Conference, one new parsonage, and a goodly number of conversions. We are not doing anything worthy of special notice here. Have added about fifteen to the church, have kept our League and Sunday-school going, and are doing what we can for the Master. Our League takes sixteen copies of the Epworth Era, and enjoys it. Our assessments will not be paid in full; they are beyond all reach. But there is some satisfaction in the fact that we will raise as much this year for the Conference claims as was raised the two past years combined. Rev. J. M. Bradley is able to return to his work at Lula. Rev. J. L. Bowling has gone to Missouri, but his work is being filled by the preachers of the district. We think the work of the district will not fall behind last year's report."

PALMER CAMP MEETING.

The Palmer Camp Meeting, according to announcement, began on Friday night, Oct. 4 and closed on Monday, Oct. 14. The meeting began under grave disadvantages, from which it never fully recovered; but through much prayer and preaching difficulties gradually gave way and a good measure of success and blessing attended us. The congregations on Saturdays and Sundays were quite large, and were very good and remarkably well behaved during the entire meeting. Sister Summers, of Thibodeaux, La., whose graceful touch, sweet voice, bright face and strong faith are a blessing to any meeting, was in charge of the music, and ever and anon "Hallelujahs" and "Amens" were sounded forth in response to the sweeping expressions and beautiful strains of the music. At times the altar service became a scene of victory and rejoicing, and timidity and order were lost amid the triumphant manifestations of the glory of God. There were thirty-three accessions and about fifty conversions. To God be all the praise.

The following preachers attended the meeting: Revs. C. A. Powell, P. E.; J. G. Sibley, C. F. Emery, R. Selby, J. M. Pugh, J. H. Holland, G. W. Hoff, G. R. Ellis, R. A. Breland, J. L. Jordan, W. G. Evans, and Michael Cox.

E. T. BRELAND, P. C.

RALEIGH CHARGE.

I closed my fourth protracted meeting for Raleigh charge, Brandon district, Mississippi Conference, several days since, which resulted in 42 accessions, a number of very bright conversions, and the membership of the church wonderfully revived. The church, spiritually, is in fine condition. Financially, we are several degrees below zero. I am afraid, from present indications, our reports will be found wanting. However, I am using all diligence to clear the decks by the time we meet, at Yazoo City, in December. The four meetings held were successes, without the aid of traveling evangelists, and the doubtful methods which have marked such performances; and whenever our pastors instill into the minds of their flocks that the efforts of such instrumentalities, male or female, are indispensable to a revival, they will at once be shorn of their strength in a measure, dwarfed in the estimation of their charges and become failures in the ranks of our itinerant Methodism, which was born in a revival and can not live without them. I am under many obligations to Rev. C. McDonald, P. E.; R. H. Barr and R. A. Sibley, Sen., for faithful and efficient services rendered. Not least to our young Roman, J. J. Childre (Icost), who went into the battle at the beginning and remained to the end.

Our new church edifice at Raleigh was dedicated on Thursday, Sept. 19, by Rev. J. McDonald with an appropriate discourse and our impressive ceremonies contained in the Discipline. Our congregation hailed the completion of the building with delight, who had been worshiping in an old, dilapidated school-building for many years. We have also another church-building in course of erection at Taylorsville, which will give tone to our Methodism in that vicinity.

The much-water fraternity of this section of Mississippi are with consent pulling for the shore, and the unceremonious methods by which they are disposing of the old Bible and Decalogue, with the entire absence of the Holy Ghost, and its operations upon the hearts and consciences of men, will soon relegate them to the shades of oblivion forever. "Ichabod" has long since been written on the history and perpetuity of hard-shellism, for its anti-missionary spirit. A similar fate is in waiting for any people or church who can with impunity thus dispose of four-fifths of God's Word and the grand instrumentality, whose office in our world is to make an application of the truths and promises of that blessed Book to the hearts and consciences of a race who know not God, and the Comforter of God's people everywhere.

Rev. J. W. Ellison.

Death has again visited us and taken from our ranks one of our truest and best.

On the morning of Sept. 11, at Millsaps College, near Jackson, Miss., our beloved Bro. John W. Ellison quietly and peacefully fell on sleep. For several years his health had not been strong. The disease with which he suffered worked slowly, but surely, developing into that much dreaded and insidious malady, Bright's disease. Early in the year his health began rapidly to fail, but such was his energy that he ceased not to preach, filling all of his appointments to within a few Sabbaths of his departure.

Yielding to the inevitable, and hoping to regain his health by a season of rest from the pastorate, and that he might educate his only son, he had made arrangements to live on the campus at Millsaps College. Leaving his home in Cato (where he had served as pastor for two years) in feeble health, the fatigue of the trip was so exhausting as to cause a relapse from which he could not recover, arriving at Jackson Saturday before his death, on Wednesday. All that skillful physicians, thoughtful friends and a loving wife could do was done, but to no avail.

In the death of Bro. Ellison the Mississippi Conference has lost a true man, a faithful itinerant and one of her best preachers. His name appears on our Minutes first, as having been received on trial from the Yazoo circuit at the Conference held in Brandon, Miss., December, 1872, and at this Conference he was appointed as pastor in charge of the circuit from whence he came, thus demonstrating from the very beginning his excellency of character and worth as a man. He was reappointed to the same charge the following year.

He was born and reared near Deasonville, in Yazoo county, by Methodist parents—his father having built a church which bears his name to this day—in the year 1845, June 20. Thus it will be seen that he was little past fifty years of age, and in the Conference twenty-three years. During these years he was faithful to every trust committed to him. A logical Bible preacher and most excellent pastor.

Though a mere boy, when the sound of war was heard in the land, he enlisted as a soldier among the very first; and during the four years of fratricidal carnage he followed the fortunes of Gen. Robert E. Lee in Virginia.

Bro. Ellison truly deserved the name of a "self-educated man." He was recognized as a man of no mean ability. His logic was good, and his speech was correct. He was the author of two small works on the subject of Baptism, from which this writer, at least, derived many profitable thoughts and satisfactory conclusions on the subject discussed.

After services in the First Methodist Church in Jackson, conducted by Bishop Galloway, and the local ministers, his remains were carried to Deasonville and buried in the family cemetery of his sainted father.

"Servant of God, well done,
Rest from thy loved employ;
The battle fought, the victory won,
Enter thy Master's joy."

Catholicism in South America.

Dr. H. C. Morrison, senior secretary of the Board of Missions, in the Review of Missions, writing of the Roman Catholic Church in South America, says as follows: "Meantime this monster is set to oppose and prevent the spread of the gospel. It is under malicious determination to hold its millions under its power, and keep its heel upon the neck of their liberty; and that under the specious name and guise of 'the church.' Nothing more quickly provokes this so-called 'church' than the sight of a colporter offering the Word of God to her people. It has not been ten days since we took the hand of a man in the employ of the American Bible Society, who, while selling Bibles recently in a Brazilian town, was set upon by a mob, his Bibles and Testaments, amounting to hundreds, taken from him and publicly burned. When he called upon the town authorities for protection and redress, they replied, 'The books were burned by the order of the priest, and his power and authority are above ours.' My readers, let us look these facts in the face—facts which we have seen in person—and see if we can then feel ourselves in the sight of God quit of South America? These millions are near us, not in heathenism, but in a state which is little if any better, and they are doomed to this dark destiny so long as we hesitate or fail to give them the gospel. They are not Chinese, neither African, but they are Americans. They dwell in our hemisphere and bear her name. They have a land as fair and with resources as great as our own. They have a heritage in Christ and his gospel as large as ours, and we hold that heritage in trust for them. Can we be safe in longer withholding that which alone will make them free? Can we shelter longer behind the plea: 'The Roman Catholic Church will give them the gospel?' Never! Never! They neither give the gospel themselves, nor do they suffer others to give it. Our duty is plain and imperative. The fight is on. There is no compromise. It is the cry of Americans to Americans, calling to us for that light and liberty which make our land the world's envy, and our homes the Edens of earth. We are not contending with the prudent, conservative Romanism of our country. But it is Romanism in power, Romanism with her mask off, Romanism in true colors. It is the lion of the tribe of Judah against the dragon of the pit. 'Who, then, is on the Lord's side?' Who is ready to 'go or send?' Our schools and universities are turning out young men by the multitude who are ready and called to go forth and preach Christ. Our home Conferences are crowded, running over, and still they come. Will not the Holy Spirit, through the economy of the church, turn a multitude of these young men to the whitening harvest in the Land of the Southern Cross?"

A Great Chance to Make Money.

I am having splendid success since I took your advice and started in the Dish Washer business. I never clear less than $10 a day, and have over $3,000 in bank now, made in business during the last year. I can't see why every man or woman, that wants to accomplish anything, don't try this business. Before starting, I examined all the Dish Washers closely, but find the Climax much the best. You can get all needful information by addressing the Climax Mfg. Co., Columbus, Ohio, and you can make from $10 to $20 a day anywhere, in town or country, as every family is anxious to have a Climax Dish Washer. You don't have to canvass. They do the work completely; you can wash and dry the dishes in two minutes without putting the hands in water, and being so cheap, every family will have one. There's millions in it!

A READER.

The work of a man who is always toiling is sure to lose its freshness. It is a great advantage to the mind of any public speaker to permit it to fallow—to come into contact with new views, new scenes, to throw off for a time the burdens of responsibility to get away from the grind of every-day toil. Our view, indeed, is that if a pastor of a church were disinclined to take a holiday, it would be distinctly in the interest of the congregation—a paying investment in every sense of the word—to insist on his doing it.—London Advertiser.

Blood Poisoning

Mrs. Mary E. O'Fallon, a very intelligent nurse of Piqua, Ohio, was poisoned while assisting physicians at an autopsy 5 years ago, and soon terrible ulcers broke out on her head, arms, tongue and throat. Her hair all came out. She weighed but 78 lbs., and saw no prospect of help. At last she began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and at once improved; could soon get out of bed and walk. She says, "I was cured by Mrs. M. E. O'Fallon.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

and am now a well woman. I weigh 128 lbs., eat well and do the work for a large family. My case seems a wonderful recovery and physicians look at me in astonishment, as almost like one raised from the dead."

HOOD'S PILLS cure liver ills, constipation, biliousness, jaundice, sick headache, indigestion.

PUBLISHER'S NOTICES.

We invite special attention to our new sewing machine offer. This machine is a most excellent one in every respect. We have never made a better premium offer. Let no one confound this machine with any one previously offered. It is a different machine altogether. Take notice that we prepay freight and guarantee entire satisfaction.

The Holman Bible for $1 65.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.65 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to Nov., '96. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two full years in advance, i. e., up to Nov., '97, can get this Bible at $1 35.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2 45 instead of $1 65. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2 45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We are now prepared to fill orders for Bibles (both kinds) promptly.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

Thursday, October 31, 1895.

"Preaching in an unknown tongue" was not a peculiar characteristic of the first century. Many a preacher of the present day preaches sermons which, though thoroughly orthodox and full of vigorous thought, are almost as unintelligible to a large proportion of their hearers as if delivered in a foreign language. It is a calamity to a preacher to lose the vocabulary of childhood and of the common people.

Though the High Church party in the Protestant Episcopal Church is still largely in the ascendency, the Low Church party is on the increase and is making itself heard. In the recent Convention, at Minneapolis, the Low Church party fought vigorously for an amendment providing for the admission into the church of all congregations that will accept the Apostles' Creed and submit to the reordination of their ministers. They were defeated, but they showed a strength which is quite significant.

Bishop J. P. Newman, of the M. E Church, has a lecture which he has delivered frequently of late entitled, "America for Americans." The lecture is said to be a very fine one. One sentence in it has attracted much attention, viz, "The problem has not yet been solved as to whether the emancipation of a race by Abraham Lincoln was a benediction or a malediction." If one of our Southern Methodist Bishops had used such language, the Northern Methodist press would have howled worse than an incarcerated canine; but as it is, we have not heard even a whine of disapproval.

The prize fighters are like Noah's dove; they find no place for their feet to rest upon. They have been kicked out of Texas and Arkansas. They have talked of Tennessee, Kentucky, Indian Territory and Mexico; but from the powers that be in each of these commonwealths the wires flashed back the news, "Better not come." This fact is full of significance. It indicates a marvelous growth of public sentiment in the right direction. But a few years ago the "bruisers" could engage in a contest almost anywhere. With the Louisiana Lottery dead, pugilism dead and the liquor traffic outlawed in large sections of our country, who will dare affirm that the former times were better than these?

Our Leisure Hours.

One of the best indices of the type of civilization that prevails in any country is the character of its amusements. How do the people spend their hours when they are "off duty?" What are their sports, pastimes, recreations? What are the activities of those hours that intervene between business and slumber? What about their Sabbaths, their holidays and their leisure time generally? Get a correct answer to these questions, and you will know much concerning the charactor of a people. Read a description of a bull-fight, and learn that this is the popular amusement of Spain; at once the Spanish people sink in your estimation to a very low place in the scale of refinement and civilization. Witness the war-dance of an Indian tribe, and you need no further evidence to convince you that they are in a state of barbarism. We do not need to be told that the habitues of a New York cock-pit are low, vulgar and brutal.

Apply this test to our people generally, and what is the result? How do our citizens generally spend their leisure time? Are their amusements and recreations elevating in their character, or do they tend to intellectual and moral retrogression? Let us suppose a case. Suppose that in any average town or city two entertainments are given the same night—one a chaste, beautiful, instructive, entertaining lecture with the spotless character and illustrious record of one of Nature's noblemen behind it; the other a fourth-rate circus, or a low-grade minstrel show: which would be more largely patronized? Who does not know that in most communities the show crowd would outnumber the other ten to one, even if the lecture were given "without money and without price?" What does such a fact indicate in regard to our place in the scale of culture and refinement?

Take another test. Though the South has not much to boast of in the way of public libraries, yet there are many of our Southern towns which have public libraries containing the standard works in all the various departments of literature, and which are constantly receiving fresh supplies from the press of our own day. What use is made of these literary treasures? The number of persons who levy regular contributions upon this repository of knowledge is exceedingly small. Moreover, investigation will reveal the fact that a very large percentage of the books that are most read belong to the department of light fiction. These facts would be of little moment were we at liberty to suppose that a multitude of private libraries are being well used. But such is not the case. The patronage of the public library is an index to the reading habits of the people. Leaving out of the account the reading of newspapers and mere professional reading, reading occupies but a very small part of the time of our people.

What, then, becomes of our leisure time? What becomes of the hours between supper and bed-time? How much of it is given to mental improvement? It may be granted that recreation is necessary. A bow will lose its elasticity if always bent to its utmost tension. So the mind needs relaxation. But this is entirely compatible with a steady advancement in literary culture. There is time enough for both recreation and instruction. After all that is said about "the press of business," most men have leisure enough for necessary recreation and a considerable slice of every day left for intellectual improvement, if they will to have it so. Moreover, it must not be forgotten that recreation and instruction go hand in hand; in other words, that reading is itself a recreation. No man makes a more egregious mistake than does he who supposes that reading is a drudgery, and all literary pursuits a pleasureless task. This is the case only with him who is a novice at the business. The man who has formed a reading habit finds in that his greatest pleasure. Through the medium of books he holds communion with the good and the great of all ages and climes, and hears them speak in their best moods and their loftiest strains. They commend to him their noblest thoughts and highest aspirations. In such companionship he finds a pleasure infinitely superior to the pleasures of the wine cup or the card table. As high as heaven is above earth, so high are the pleasures of intellect above those of sense. Is it not our duty to cultivate these higher powers of our nature? How do we degrade ourselves when we spend the few precious hours that God allots us here in pleasures akin to those which the brutes enjoy, while we allow our higher powers, those which ally us to angels and to God, to lie dormant and uncultivated!

Other motives also should prompt in the same direction. Suppose a case: Two young men of equal endowments leave school and engage in business at eighteen. One of them devotes his leisure hours to amusements of one kind or another. The other makes it a rule to read a book every week. Will there not be a vast difference in the two at the age of forty? The one will have read twenty-two times fifty-two, i. e. — eleven hundred and forty-four-books; and if his books have been judiciously selected, he will be a well-informed man, one whose judgment will be prized and whose influence will be felt in any circle in which he may be thrown. But what of the other? However companionable he may be, he will be empty-headed and frivolous, his opinions on any matter of public concern will be unimportant, and his influence will be comparatively insignificant. Which of these two careers would a wise parent choose for a youth just merging into manhood? Such a question is answered in the asking. A wise father will always counsel his son to prefer knowledge to pleasure, instruction to amusement.

A New Phase of the Question.

Like Banquo's ghost, the local-preacher-evangelist question may be seen bobbing up almost anywhere and any when. It appeared in rather a novel fashion at the recent session of the Los Angeles Conference. Rev. A. C. Bane, of that Conference, asked a location for the purpose of engaging in evangelistic work. After deliberation, the Conference refused to grant the location. He then asked to be transferred to the Pacific Conference, hoping to secure a location at the hands of that body. Bishop Wilson refused to transfer him. He, therefore, remains in the Los Angeles Conference, and is assigned to a pastoral charge.

Pending the discussion of the case the following questions were propounded to the chair for official decision:

When an itinerant preacher publishes to the world and the church his purpose to locate and enter the evangelistic work—

1. "Is the proposed work compatible with the duties of a local preacher?" The Bishop's decision was: "Not according to the terms of our Discipline."

2. "Is the Annual Conference to which he belongs compelled to grant him a location?" The Bishop's decision was: "No."

We are pleased to learn that the attendance at East Mississippi Female College is steadily increasing. The enrollment has already gone beyond one hundred. The boarding department is fuller than at any time within the last five years.

Bay St. Louis.

We spent last Sabbath at Bay St. Louis. We had the privilege of preaching, morning and night, in Bro. Harmon's new church. The windows are not yet in, and it is unceiled; yet, though unfinished, it is in use. It is built according to one of our church extension plans, and of ample dimensions to meet the wants of the community. When completed, it will be a beauty, a real ornament to the town. Bro. Harmon is to be congratulated upon his success in his difficult field. Besides building this church, he and his zealous little flock have built during the present year a neat little mission church in the suburbs of the city and also made important improvements on the parsonage property. We know of no church which has accomplished more in proportion to its resources. We made headquarters at the parsonage. We are under obligations to Bro. Harmon and family for many courtesies extended. We also enjoyed the generous hospitalities of Bro. and Sister Toulme, of the Crescent Hotel.

BOOKS.

MEMORIAL ADDRESS ON DR. A. B. MILES, delivered at the Annual Meeting of the Charity Hospital Alumni Association. By Dr. E. L. McGehee.

By courtesy of the author, a copy of the above-named pamphlet lies upon our table. It gives a brief outline of the remarkable career of the distinguished physician, and puts special emphasis upon the Christian virtues that adorned his character. The memory of such a man is worthy to be had in everlasting remembrance. His professional achievements were remarkable. Coming to New Orleans at twenty years of age as a medical student, with meagre financial resources and without friends, he placed himself in the short period of twenty years in the very front rank of the profession, and left behind him a record of which any practitioner of the healing art might feel proud. His private life also is worthy of universal emulation. His virtues were numerous and manifold. He did not belong to that class of physicians who take pride in proclaiming their unbelief in the Christian religion. The Bible was to him the Word of God. He read it daily, and sought guidance from above in the affairs of every-day life. The story of his life is here well told by one who was his professional admirer and his personal friend.

THE CHURCH: WHAT IT IS AND WHENCE IT IS. The same being an historical outline of its origin, progress and doctrines, gathered from sacred and profane sources. By Rev. J. A. Parker, of the Louisiana Conference, M. E. Church, South. Second edition. Revised and abridged for Sunday-schools and Epworth Leagues. Nashville, Tenn.: Barbee & Smith. Price, 75 cents.

The above is the full title of a neat, well-bound 12 mo. of 179 pages just from the press. The title is accurately descriptive of the work. It gives an outline history of the church from the beginning, with special reference to polity. In form the work is catechetical, consisting of 1,040 questions and answers. The questions are well framed, and the answers are clear, concise, and comprehensive. It is an admirable work to put into the hands of our young people, as it will give them a vast amount of information which everyone needs, and which can not be found elsewhere, so far we know, in a form so compact. The author announces in his preface that he has nearly ready for the press another work, in which he gives in similar form a history of Christian doctrines. We hope the work will have a wide circulation.

Rev. T. F. Gleon has resigned the editorship of the Holston Methodist, and the vacancy has been filled by the election of Dr. E. N. Price. Bro. Price is not a novice in journalism, having previously edited the same paper for a number of years.

Boys Wanted.

Some people think boys are very troublesome things. I once heard an intelligent man say that every boy when he gets to be twelve years old should be put in a penitentiary and kept there until he is of legal age. Alas! for the world when that suggestion is carried out! Many persons are with boys as an old gentleman was with his patience. When he was found by his friend in a very petulant mood, and was exhorted to "have more patience," he exclaimed that he had as much patience as he wanted. Many families have as many boys as they want, and we sometimes see families where they apparently have more boys than they want. Such a condition is bad for the not-wanted boys.

Now, though we have quite a large family of boys at Centenary College, we have not as many as we want. We have room in our dormitories and lecture-rooms and hearts for a few more. We are not dissatisfied with the character of our boys, either. They are clever, in the American and in the English sense of that word, and are doing good work; but we want some more good, clever fellows to adopt into our growing family.

I have thought that we could get these wanted boys in this way: The Louisiana Conference is to meet here on Dec. 11. Every preacher is, or ought to be, interested in every boy on his work. Every preacher is, or ought to be, interested in the prosperity of his college. The prosperity of the college and the prosperity of the boys are linked together. The college wants the boys, the boys need the college. Now, let the preachers mediate between the two and bring them together, and thus secure the prosperity of both. In plain terms: Let each preacher, who is coming to Conference, do his best to bring along from his work a boy, and place him in school here. That will help the college and help the boys and help the Conference and help the Church and help the State and help the world. And who would not do a work that widens its good results in that way?

C. W. CARTER.

Centenary College, Jackson, La.

Millsaps College.

Please let me say through the ADVOCATE to the Methodists of Mississippi and to the friends of our college generally that the development of our work calls for enlarged facilities. We need another building, and when the Annual Conferences meet we will submit a definite plan for meeting this demand. In the meantime it is important that all the outstanding notes given for our endowment fund shall be collected. Very little has been said of these notes for the past year, but now, with improved times, it is hoped that they will be cheerfully settled. I hope the pastors will use every effort to have the assessment made by the Conferences paid in full. Every dollar will be needed. With the decks cleared, we will start out on the new year with splendid prospects for development in every department of our work.

Our present session is full of encouragment. The students have never worked better, and the enthusiasm in favor of the college was never so great.

W. B. MURRAH.

NOTES.

The tent meetings at the corner of Liberty street and Louisiana avenue are increasing in interest. Quite a number of persons have professed conversion.

Judge L. H. Estes, of Memphis, has just closed a meeting of great power at Milan, Tenn. He is one of the notable laymen of Southern Methodism. He fills an important judicial position, and yet finds time to do a good deal of revival work. His Summer vacation is spent largely in protracted meetings.

The meeting at Grape Street will continue during the present week. The attendance is large, and there is considerable interest.

A revival meeting is in progress at Dryades Street Church, conducted by the pastor, Rev. F. S. Parker. The meeting begins with a good attendance and a favorable outlook.

Dr. Coley, of the New York Cancer Hospital, claims to have discovered a serum treatment for cancer which has been very successful so far, though it has not been tested a sufficient length of time to decide whether the cures effected are permanent. Dr. Coley is not a quack, but a regular physician in good standing.

Mr. George Muller, of England, the founder of the famous orphanages, has received for all purposes since the beginning of his work just $6,869,180. He has never told a soul of his needs, either of his own personal needs or of his needs in benevolent work. He and his wife together have simply laid the needs before God. Mr. Muller has just observed the ninetieth anniversary of his birth.—Exchange.

Rev. A. McDonald, pastor of a Congregational Church in Jacksonville, Fla., recently preached a sermon in which he expressed great sympathy with the Cuban revolutionists, and bitterly denounced the Spanish government. This having come to the ears of Senor Cruz, a Spanish vice-consul at that place, he has announced it as his purpose to prosecute McDonald in the United States Court for a violation of the neutrality laws. The public will await the result with interest.

A Thomas Paine exhibition is to be held in London in December. It will include early editions of Paine's different works, portraits of Paine and those of his adherents, together with those of his opponents. We suggest that among the exhibits he included a series of photographs of the benevolent institutions organized by Paine and his followers since his day, and that these be placed in contrast with those organized under Christian auspices during the period since Paine's death in 1809.—Exchange.

Since the publication of Bishop Thoburn's letter in favor of a Diocesan Episcopacy, a Bishop of one of the colored Methodist Churches informs the good Bishop and the rest of mankind, through the columns of the Independent, that his church has already taken the proposed new departure. Bishops are assigned to a district for four years. The colored episcopos is naturally very much pleased that the example set by his church is thought worthy of imitation by a white episcopos.

Bob and Alf Taylor, the distinguished brothers from Tennessee, gave their unique performance, "Yankee Doodle and Dixie," before a large audience in Washington Artillery Hall, in this city, on the twenty-third. To say that the audience was pleased would be an under-statement of the facts in the case. The people were delighted, and showed their delight by frequent rounds of hearty applause. Bob and Alf are the most taking combination ever on the rostrum, especially when they are addressing an audience "away down South in Dixie."

Does this, from the Cumberland Presbyterian, not apply to some outside of that branch of the Presbyterian Church? "A queer sort of ruling elder or deacon is he who undertakes to discharge the duties of his office without the help of his own church paper. A blind leader of the blind, indeed, must he be who tries to teach before he has been taught; who endeavors to make loyal Presbyterians out of other people without himself being loyal enough to read each week the current history, the needs and the requirements of his denomination. Strange, passing strange!"—Mid-Continent.

The Spiritualists have just held a National Convention in Washington City. In their resolutions, among other things, they extended the hand of consolation to Mr. Debs, scored the "efforts of bigots and fanatics to engraft on the Constitution of the United States of America a recognition of their God," and objected to Sunday observance "so far as it was based on any law recognizing it as God's holy day," the object being to allow everyone to do as he pleased so long as he did not infringe the rights of others. A paragraph of eulogy was included on behalf of Thomas Paine as "the first champion of reason and personal liberty, an apostle of freedom, a conscious force for good in the affairs of men at the present day." Very significantly, too, it was moved that the National Spiritualists' Association affiliate itself with the International Parliament of Religions, whose headquarters are in Chicago. A committee was appointed to take steps to that end.—Mid-Continent.

PERSONALS.

Rev. G. C. Kelley, of the Louisville Conference, has been transferred to the North Alabama Conference.

W. H. Morrow, a widely known lawyer of Nashville, Tenn., died at his home in that city on the fifteenth.

At the New Orleans Preachers' Meeting, last Monday, Bishop Keener delivered an able address on "The Work of the Holy Spirit."

Dr. O. F. Evans has been transferred from the Memphis Conference to the Holston Conference, and stationed at Centenary Church, Chattanooga, Tenn.

In the absence of Bishop Haygood, Dr. David Sullins presided over the Holston Conference the first two days. On the third day Bishop Duncan arrived and presided until the close.

Dr. John O. Keener, president of Southern University, has been in the city several days on a visit to the home folks. Drs. Keener and Morrow each made an entertaining talk at the preachers' meeting.

At the recent session of the Tennessee Conference the following transfers were announced: W. M. Leftwich, to the Virginia Conference; W. B. Patty, to the Illinois Conference; and W. B. Kance, to the China Mission Conference.

Rev. James Morrow, of Pennsylvania, one of the secretaries of the American Bible Society, is making a brief sojourn in the city, en route to California. He is making headquarters during his stay with his father-in-law, Bro. J. H. Keller.

At the recent session of the Tennessee Conference the following transfers were announced: J. R. Curtis, from the Los Angeles Conference; W. B. Taylor, from the East Columbia Conference; and D. S. Thompson, from the Texas Conference.

Rev. Andrew Jackson Potter, widely known as "the fighting parson," dropped dead in his pulpit at Tillman, Texas, on the twenty-second, a revival meeting being in progress at the time. A large part of his ministerial life has been spent on the frontiers. His adventures among Indians and desperadoes gave him the sobriquet by which he is known throughout Southern Methodism. He was devoted to his calling, and absolutely destitute of fear.

Gustin Kearney, eldest son of Col. W. G. Kearney, died at his father's residence near Flora, Miss., on the nineteenth. He was bright, well-informed, polished in manners, and of pleasing address. He was also thoroughly generous and unselfish, and was, therefore, universally popular. He had been a member of the church since his twelfth year. He was a brother of Miss Belle Kearney. The bereaved ones have the sympathies of their numerous friends in Mississippi and Louisiana.

We glean the following items from the Wesleyan Advocate:

Rev. Wiles Pierce, of the Pacific Conference, has been transferred to the North Georgia Conference, his old home. He is a nephew of Bishop Pierce.

Rev. W. C. Davis, of the South Georgia Conference, has been transferred to the North Georgia Conference.

Robert McIntyre, a prominent Methodist layman of Savannah, Ga., whose death occurred a few days since, after providing liberally for his widow and other relatives, made the following bequests: Trinity Church, Savannah, of which he was a member, $25,000; Wesley Monumental Church Savannah, $10,000; Emory College, $1,000; South Georgia Conference Orphans' Home, at Macon, $3,000 He also made several smaller bequests to religious and benevolent institutions. We rejoice to chronicle such evidences of devotion to the Master. "He being dead, yet speaketh."

Louisiana Conference.

At to-day's Preachers' Meeting the Revs. T. K. Faunt LeRoy, C. M. Lyons and H. H. Ahrens were appointed a committee to provide homes for such members of the Louisiana Conference as, en route to Jackson, La., shall be compelled to spend a night in New Orleans. Let all such brethren promptly notify this committee.

Help the Cubans.

The Board of Church Extension has received, upon the appeal published last Spring for aid for the Cuban Missions at Key West, Ybor City and Cuba City, Florida, only about $500. We urgently need $2,500 more. We still lack $300 of having enough to relieve the mission at Key West. With $800 in hand we can, we trust, make the work there an assured success. Shall we not have it at once? The situation at the other two points is no less urgent, and the prospect, if we enter these open doors, is no less promising than at Key West. May we not form a Gideon's Band, and 250 of us contribute $10 each until $2,500 is raised for these foreign missions on our own shores?

We are in earnest. There ought to be 250 Methodists among our membership of 1,400,000 who will do that much for these poor exiles of an oppressed race. Give $10 for yourself, and a like amount for your wife or your children. If you can not give so much, give what you can. Ask your neighbors to join with you in making up the sum and send it at once. The case is urgent. Make remittance by postoffice money order or banker's draft to Mode of Baptism.

Conference is now within a month of us. How little has been done this year, and how much must be done before Conference! Our Ministers' Institute convened here Oct. 15 and 16 Two-thirds of the pastors in the district were present. The preaching and discussion of the various topics were good to the use of edifying. Methodism was greatly strengthened in our town.

The sermon on the Mode of Baptism, by the Rev. M. H. Honoll, was so strong and convincing that our people clamored for more of the same kind. Whereupon he was arranged with by the pastor to return and preach a series of sermons on the "Subject and Mode of Baptism." He came last Tuesday, and closed out last night. The like was never known to Amory before Congregations fine, interest and attention perfect, and the good done for God and Methodism can not be reckoned until the judgment. He is the strongest and most scriptural preacher, and displays the kindliest spirit and even temper I have ever seen. Persons of the exclusive immersion theory claim that they are convinced that the doctrines believed and taught by the Methodists are scriptural, and that Bro. Honoll's argument is unanswerable.

I heartily endorse his manner, methods and spirit, and than commend him to the brethren where such doctrines are needed to be stressed. He will not hurt, but strengthen the cause in the pastor's hands. While he draws all effusionists to himself, the church and to God, he antagonizes and offends none of the immersionists. Bro. Honoll is not seeking notoriety, and would not impress his brethren that he has made or even desires to make controverted doctrines a hobby. He has made these subjects a study for his own satisfaction, and for the good of those whom he may be sent to serve. And while he has no desire to travel at large, yet when the interests of his own charge will admit of his leaving, he will give to any pastor and his flock the benefit of his research and close study on this subject.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

THE CONVERSION OF PAUL.
(Acts ix, 1-18.)

1. Paul was an honest opponent of the Christian religion.

(1) Not all unbelievers are wicked men. Prejudice resulting from education or early environment confirms them in their views. Convince them—specially by your life—that they are wrong.

(2) That men differ from us denominationally is no proof of their perversion. They may be as true as we are.

(3) Even ourselves have reason to rejoice with trembling. Are we right? Not egotism or conceit, but the Bible should make reply. Yes, we should be charitable to all who differ with us.

2. The Lord deemed well miraculously to convince Saul of his error and to convict him of his sin.

(1) Ordinarily the Word of God is to lead men to repentance. In vain some—deluded—look for miraculous exhibitions in their case.

(2) Paul was dazzled by a supernatural light, the brilliancy of which deprived him temporarily of eyesight.

(3) Now he heard a supernatural voice, "Saul, Saul," etc.

(4) Tremblingly the convicted man inquires: "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" Do? Yes, restitution and repentance give the sinner considerable work—work he only can perform.

(5) Proof of thorough perturbation of his soul is found in the fact that for three days and nights he remained without food.

3. Paul's conversion, though less public, succeeded rapidly. Its genuineness has never been assailed.

(1) The mission of Ananias confirmed Paul in the assurance that his previous experience was not the outcome of hallucination. God had wrought a second miracle in sending this man.

(2) Conversing with Ananias, Paul was filled with the Holy Ghost. Every true conversion is nothing less than that.

(3) His eyesight was restored to Paul at the same time.

(4) He was baptized—that is, joined the church, professed the Christian religion.

Programme for Literary Meeting of the Epworth League.

7. Lecture by an invited guest on: "Home among Different Nations."
8. Hymn 54.
9. Brief lecture by the pastor: "A Happy Home a Sure Preventive of Intemperance."
10. Recitation: "Homesick," by David Gray.
11. Hymn 26.
12. Benediction by the pastor.

League Dots.

Leagues are multiplying wherever Methodism has been planted. There is rustling among the dry bones.

Leaguers will have a watchful eye on the stewards that the preacher is being paid in full.

Leaguers know that Walter Scott, dying, called the Bible "The Book." With all reading, the Bible is not neglected.

In the Epworth League prayer meetings the members are trained to pray in the congregational prayer meeting, and to speak in love-feasts.

Of all our Christian Advocates, "The Texas" devotes most space to the Epworth League interests. The editor is a brother of our pastor in Carondelet Street Church.

Nearly all Protestant denominations have fallen in line and organized Leagues among their young people. The latest is the "Luther League" among the Lutherans.

A Chance to Make Money!

I have made $1,640 clear money in 87 days and attended to my household duties besides, and I think this is doing splendid for a woman inexperienced in business. Anyone can sell what everyone wants so buy, and every family wants a Dish Washer. I don't canvass at all; people come or send for the Washers, and every Washer that goes out sells two or three more, as they do the work to perfection. You can wash and dry the dishes in two minutes. I am going to devote my whole time to this business now, and I am sure I can clear $5,000 this year. My sister and brother have started in the business, and are doing splendid. You can get complete instructions and hundreds of testimonials by addressing the Iron City Dish Washer Co., 145 S. Highland Ave., Station A, Pittsburg, Pa., and if you don't make lots of money, it's your own fault.

MR. EDITOR: I desire to say through the columns of your paper that some time ago I made an appeal to its readers for a little help in the way of building a parsonage on this mission charge, and am sorry to say that it was never responded to, but by one young lady, Miss May Russell, of Humphreys, Miss. May God bless Miss May a thousand times for this kind deed! The dollar she sent will help to buy the flooring for our parsonage. I am little surprised at the kind people of Mississippi. I was raised and educated in that State, and I am witness to the fact that our church is on far better financial basis than that of the Indian Mission Conference. We have our house started, and I believe the Lord will help us. May God bless you and your many readers! In Christ,

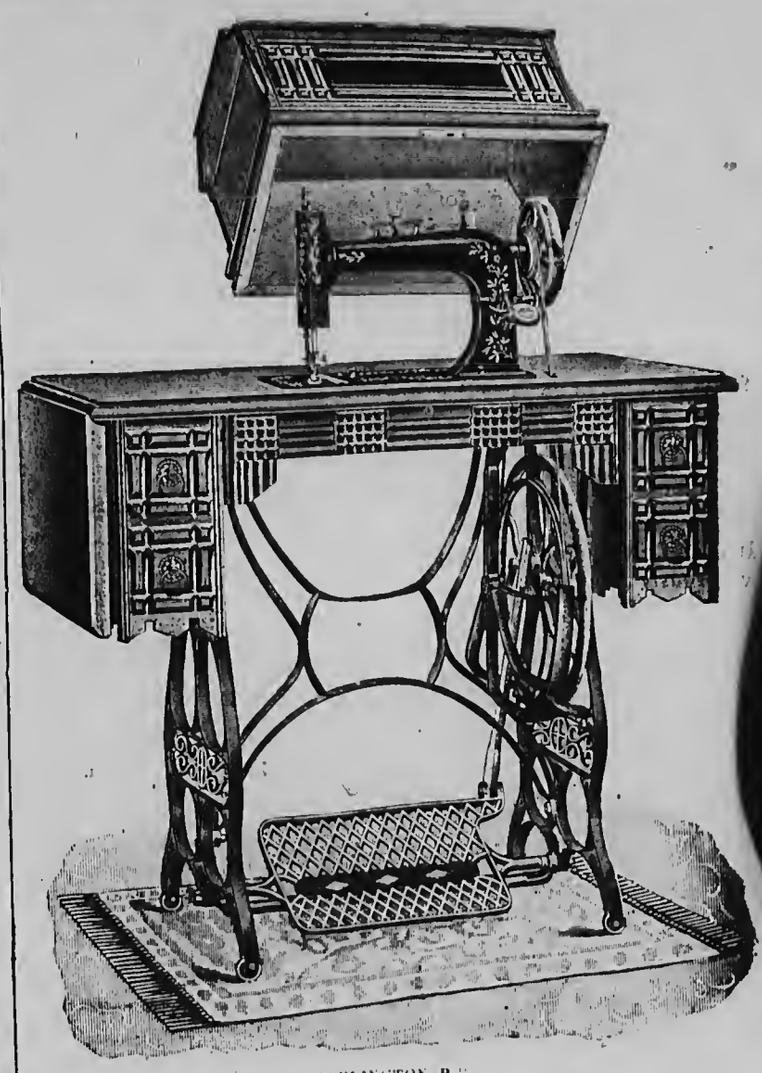
Our Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



"ARLINGTON B."

The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, possible take up, convenient foot-rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned, and protected by a hard finish. It has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearings polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—THE "ARLINGTON B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short scarf and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE.—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

OUR OFFER.

To anyone, not now a subscriber to this paper, who will send us $20 50, we will send the machine and the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE one year. To old subscribers we make the following offer: Pay your subscription to January, '97, and send us $18.50 additional, and we will send you the machine.

We allow purchaser to test the machine for ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

TO AGENTS:

We will send this machine free to any preacher or other person who will send us twenty new subscribers with the cash—$40.

BUILDING.

We are building every day
In a good or evil way,
And the structure as it grows,
Will our inmost self disclose—

Till in every arch and line
All our faults and failings shine;
It may grow a castle grand,
Or a wreck upon the sand.

Do you ask what building this,
That can show both pain and bliss,
That can be both dark and fair?
Lo! its name is Character.

Build it well, whate'er you do;
Build it straight, and strong, and true,
Build it clean, and high, and broad;
Build it for the eye of God.

Don't Let the Dust Gather.

BY DORA B. GOODALE.

I feel like saying to every woman—to the busy, hard-worked, restricted women, to those full of hope and charm who are just setting out on the journey, to the apathetic ones who are nearing the end of it—I feel like saying, Don't let the dust gather.

Don't let the dust gather on your ideals. They are the best part of your mental furniture.

Don't let the dust gather on your enthusiasms. An enthusiastic desire is in itself a kind of fulfillment.

Don't let the dust gather on your vows—your church vows, your marriage vows. They are as real, as binding as when the good Bishop laid his hand on your head; as when you stood at the altar with the man that you loved.

Don't let the dust gather on your blessings. A diamond covered with dust seems no more than a stone.

Don't let the dust gather on your favorite study. Get down the Latin or algebra—above all, the history.

Don't let the dust gather on your accomplishments—if you can help it.

Don't let the dust, the imperceptible dust, gather day by day, to clog and smother the things that you value. Activity is youth, health, life itself; disuse means stagnation and death. Enthusiasm is contagious—it is like fire, and will communicate itself, whether or no; love quickens the vital current; some sort of love—it may be the love of lepidoptera or the Eocene period—is what

"Always makes us young,
And always keeps us so."

"The more you do the more you may do"? Of course! the more you do the more you must do, and the more you are able to do. The busiest people have the most time; and, to state the other side of the paradox, the people who do the least are the "busiest." One of the delightful, refreshing, inspiring, glorious things about human nature is its power of expansion—that power which we sometimes doubt, which frequently startles us, and which makes it impossible to set a limit to the capacity of the meanest soul. We don't know what we might do with our bodies. "Our bodies are our gardens," says Shakespeare, "to which our wills are gardeners;" but what very indifferent gardeners? The bank clerk's discriminations of touch, the tea-taster's discriminations of palate, the musician's refinement of ear, the sailor's or Indian's eyesight, the sinews and joints of the gymnast—these things are all marvels to us, it seems hardly possibly that members and organs very like ours are susceptible of such development. And as we are physically, even so and much more are we spiritually. Every report of the force of circumstances is really a tribute to the force that we possess in ourselves—the variety, adaptability, richness of the human elements. When we feel and believe what a treasury we have in our own hearts, minds and wills; when we cultivate and cherish them, we shall then know better how to arouse ambition and strengthen faith in those about us.

As we grow older, I think we care less for work for the work's sake; that is, for its immediate results, so small a part of God's plan! and care more for it for its reactive effects on ourselves and others. To be working, to be alive, is a good apart from what we can do. Man excels in concentration and force; grant woman her peculiar excellence! A gracious woman is beloved as the sun; and like the sun, she shines by reason of what she is.—Advocate and Guardian.

Good Humor in the Family.

Good humor is rightly reckoned a most valuable aid to a happy home life. An equally good and useful faculty is a sense of humor or the capacity to have a little fun along with the humdrum cares and works of life. We all know how it brightens up things generally to have a lively, witty companion who sees the ridiculous points of things and can turn an annoyance into an occasion for laughter. It does a great deal better to laugh over some domestic mishap than to cry or scold over it. Many homes and lives are dull because they are allowed to become too deeply impressed with a sense of the cares and responsibilities of life to recognize its bright and especially its mirthful side. Into such a household, good but dull, the advent of a witty, humorous friend is like sunshine on a cloudy day.

While it is always oppressive to hear persons constantly striving to say witty or funny things, it is worth while seeing what a brightener a little fun is, to make an effort to have some at home. It is well to turn off an impatient question sometimes, and to regard it from a humorous point of view, instead of being irritated about it.

"Wife, what is the reason I can never find a clean shirt?" exclaimed a good, but rather impatient husband, after rummaging all through the wrong drawer. His wife looked at him steadily a moment, half inclined to be provoked; then, with a comical look, she said: "I never guess conundrums; I give it up." Then he laughed, and they both laughed, and she went and got his shirt, and he felt ashamed of himself and kissed her; and then she felt happy, and so what might have been an occasion for hard words and unkind feelings became just the contrary, all through the little vein of humor that cropped out to the surface.

Some people have a peculiar faculty for giving a humorous turn to things when they are reproved. It does just as well oftentimes to laugh things off as to scold them off. Laughter is better than tears. Let us have a little more of it at home.—Religious Herald.

Keep Sweet.

"It is impossible but that offenses will come, but woe to him by whom the offense cometh."

Offenses spring from peculiarities of individuals, and may have a significance, or they may not; they may be intended, and they may not. Therefore, the Christian should endeavor to keep sweet under all circumstances, trying and perplexing as the case may be. It is always safe to study well the motive of the supposed offender before we pronounce it as an offense, for it may be a lack of education, or a lack on your part to understand the motive of the supposed offender. "Supposed," we say, because we are persuaded that fully nine out of every ten of the offenses which arise and cause so much bitterness, so much chill and so much discord in our social relations, are only supposed or imaginary, and if we could only keep sweet long enough for just a little prayer, just a little thought and a little study, the whole thing would vanish as the darkness before the rays of the morning sun.

If your pastor gives more of his attention to certain other members than he does to you, or if he never calls on you to lead in prayer or take any special part in the services, do not be offended, but keep sweet; the pastor is supposed to know the temper of his congregation better than you, and to know whose prayers are acceptable and will prove edifying. You can keep sweet and pray in secret, that you may receive your reward openly. By all means keep sweet.

Do not be oversensitive or imaginative. Imagination causes fully one-half of all our sorrow and woes, while prejudice steps in and throws in our faces almost all of the remaining half. Thus we see that our real troubles are very few indeed.

Keep sweet and you will be surprised to know how few really bad people there are in the world, and still greater will be your surprise to learn how very few real sorrows, how few real offenses, how few real slights and real troubles you do have anyhow.

Then, by the grace of God, always keep sweet.—Selected.

How Woman May Be a Blessing.

My observation, which has been extended in other lands as well as our own, leads me to declare that the best wives and mothers are those who are actively interested in benevolent and missionary enterprises. I have discovered no lack of wholesome food and comfortable clothing in their homes, but have invariably found an intelligent and wise administration of affairs on their part, while the whole atmosphere of the home was that of unselfish interest in great and noble projects, from the oldest down to the youngest.

"Sojourner Truth," the celebrated colored woman who lived to be something over a hundred years old, was asked the secret of her long life. She replied: "I don't know exactly, but I rather think it is because I haven't worried out my life thinking on small subjects." That is just what a woman does who acts on the principles that she has all she can do at home; she worries out her life thinking on small subjects. The cares that infest the day and rob her of her sleep at night will be so many cankers, eating their way into her very life.—New York Voice.

Trials of Married Life.

There is something peculiarly precious in the beautiful sentiment of the appended paragraph. The little slip from which we reprint it is colored with age. Thirty-three years ago, after the death of our loving father, we found in his pocket-book these treasured words which now, after the hand that noted them has mouldered back to dust, we send out upon a new mission of loving cheer and inspiring mercy:

Married life has its trials and sorrows. Tempers may prove incompatible, and call for forbearance. Fortune may be chary of favors and enforce self-denial. Children may be ungrateful and sting the poor heart that has pillowed them. Sickness may come and haunt a household for years. But ask the poor man struggling along with his debts, and the weary woman, toiling early and late, accomplishing the ruin of all her beauty and buoyancy, if they would be placed apart could competence be given to them, and all their trials brought to an end. The answer would be: "There is something sweeter in this companionship of suffering than anything the world can offer from its storehouse of joys outside of it, and something which would make even severer trials than ours only iron bands to draw us more firmly together."—Lutheran Observer.

To live always in the present tense is the enjoyment of sweet communion with God, and to live without sin is certainly the privilege of a Christian. To so teach and live is to secure God's highest favor. To teach and live otherwise is to grieve the Spirit.

It seems to me that five minutes of real thankfulness for the love of our dear Savior is worth a year of hard reasoning on the hidden parts of our redemption. —Dean Alford.

BY FLORENCE HULL.

Just before a fire dies down it gives out the most heat, and to the casual eye seems to be at its brightest. So, too, at the periods when our vital energies are about to succumb to fatigue we are frequently deceived into believing ourselves unusually strong, under the stimulus of a feverish excitement which shows itself just before the reaction sets in. One only learns after considerable experience to associate a peculiar feeling of elation and buoyancy with the approach of an indisposition. Probably there has been an unheeded hour of fatigue, nature's first, faint warning, and when this has passed by the subsequent stage of fever, with its agreeable excitement, was unconsciously entered upon.

When we feel like doing something wonderful, instead of following out the inspiration, it would be a proof of wisdom to take a hot bath and go to bed for an hour or so.

It is safe to treat excitement as a premonitory symptom of some form of headache, and instead of permitting it to wear itself out until the stage of acute pain is reached the rational remedy of a counter irritant ought to be applied. Agreeable excitement, when very strong, may only be succeeded by that mental weariness some persons call "blues." But it may, if prolonged, pass into a condition of acute nervousness, like hysteria. Now, while we want to feel that we are really alive, we don't want our keenness of sensation to turn into agony, and, in order to prevent its doing so, we must learn to recognize in ourselves the point where strain comes.

Whenever we detect a decline in our self-command, a tendency to be over-impulsive and high-spirited, we may know that soon we shall be cross or out of sorts. The counter irritant indicated is quiet. If we can not compel ourselves to rest we ought to seek the aid of a hot bath, even if it is the very middle of the day. It may not always be practicable, but I have often seen an attack of illness averted by an hour in bed after a plunge into water at 110 degrees Fahr.

When this is out of the question, the person who feels himself becoming "hot-headed" should at least go off alone for a little while and bathe his face in cold water, resting afterwards in a position as nearly prone as possible. Headache or aching of the muscles can nearly always be relieved by the application of hot water, with subsequent rest. One of the beneficial effects of heat is that it quiets the nerves. And one must allow a certain amount of time for every remedy, however slight, to take hold of his system.

Hot water bathing does not agree with some persons, so they avoid it at all times; and the same with cold water and with everything else. But what can not be used habitually may be employed with excellent effect as a remedy. What everyone needs to do is to intelligently adapt to his own particular case the simple, general curative principles. At the first suspicion of the coming on of a cold the capilliaries need to be flushed, and this is accomplished by drinking freely of cold water. "Gorge yourself with water," advised a physician once. The slightest chill indicates the prompt application of heat, either dry or moist. Aching eyes should be bandaged with hot water, and the peculiar sensation women sometimes call by the name of "fidgets in the back or limbs," often the precursor of neuralgiac troubles, can ordinarily be at once relieved by a bath and a rest.—The Congregationalist.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

GRAHAM PUFFS.—Beat the yolks of two eggs in two cupfuls of ice water; then add gradually, beaten well meantime, three and one-fourth cupfuls of Graham flour. Continue the beating, after all the flour has been added, until the mixture is light and full of air bubbles. Add last the whites of the eggs, beaten to a stiff froth, and bake at once in heated irons. —Picayune.

The will of God respecting us is that we shall live by each other's happiness and life, not by each other's misery * * * men help each other by their joy, not by their sorrow.—Ruskin.

OBITUARIES.

McKNIGHT—"Little JEWEL," baby girl of Mr. and Mrs. Jno. H. McKnight, first opened her eyes to the light of this beautiful world, near Arcola, Miss., June 30, 1892. The golden bowl was broken, the silver cord loosened, and her spirit, too pure for this earth, ascended to the "great white throne," near Uniontown, Ala., Aug. 25, 1895.

Only a gleam of light, a ray of sunshine, a pair of beautiful dark blue eyes framed in with a wealth of golden curls, that came into your hearts and home; then it was dark the light out, and the watchers softly whispered, "she is dead," and the angels bore the spirit of "Little Jewel" back to God.

Dear parents, she is sleeping now "safe in the arms of Jesus," in that beautiful "home not made with hands," "watching and waiting for you." Though her death causes a great shadow to fall over your lives, and you miss the pressure of the baby fingers, the patter of little feet, the little voice that made the sweetest music in your hearts; yet God saw fit to take the "little bud" from earth and transplant it to the garden of "his kingdom," where it will bloom forever.

"To woo us from earth her life was lent,
To lead us to heaven her death was sent."

So live that "some sweet day, by and by," you will clasp her again to your hearts, where there will be no more partings, no more sad good-nights.

Thank God for the Christian's faith! We lay our "little darling" in the cold, dark grave. But we shall see her again, "when she will shine in her beauty," a bright "Jewel" for His crown. "MANIE."

HICKS—Sister DORA HICKS was born Sept. 4, 1872, and died Oct. 14, 1895, aged twenty-three years and one month. She was a member of the M. E. Church, South, about twelve years. She was a faithful, consistent member of the church, and her life was worthy of imitation. She loved the church; ready at all times to do what she could to advance the cause of Christ. She was an obedient daughter, a loving sister, faithful, true and gentle wife; always cheerful, endeavoring to make home bright and happy.

We all will miss her so much. We are prepared to drop a tear of sympathy with her bereaved husband and darling little babe, and her dear brothers and sisters and many friends, who are left behind to mourn our loss; but rejoice at her gain. Heaven is brighter by her going, while we are made sad by her leaving.

We don't understand these things. She was capacitated to do so much good; well equipped for the duties and responsibilities of life, being a graduate of our best schools in North Mississippi, and a thorough Christian. While we do not understand these things, we meekly, humbly bow our heads to the all-wise Father, who never makes a mistake, and say Thy will be done! H. P. CROWE.

Cleveland, Miss.

FRIDAY—Mrs. NAUCISSA J. FRIDAY, wife of L. D. Friday, died Aug. 20, 1895, near Sturgis, Miss. She was the daughter of Henry and Millie Gillmer. She was born in Pickens county, Ala., Sept. 31, 1831. Her parents moved to Itibb county, Ala., where she was married to L. D. Friday, Nov. 6, 1849. They moved to Mississippi in 1851, where she united herself with the M. E. Church, South, and has ever since been a consistent member. An affectionate Christian wife, and a mother devoted to the interest of her loved ones, gone to rest from her labors. She leaves her husband (a devout man of God) and three daughters and son and many relatives and friends to mourn her departure. We can realize that "the Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away;" let us say in our hearts, "Blessed be the name of the Lord!"

Her Christian life will be a blessing to those who knew her. She awaits our coming in the city of God. May God bless and comfort the bereaved family, and finally grant them a ranion in the haven of rest! Her pastor,
J. W. TREADWELL.

Sturgis, Miss.

LOWERY—Mrs. M. J. LOWERY died at Crowville, Sept. 29, 1895.

As the many friends gathered into the church to solemnize the last rites of the one departed, they found that thoughtful and loving hands had been before and tastily draped the interior. Our eyes beheld the different things in the church, which add to its beauty and comfort, and we remembered that she was among the foremost in piecing them there.

She was a widow in the prime of life, and had a commanding influence in the community where she lived. She has acted as steward in the church, and in that position has been very efficient. She was kind and ever ready to help in time of need. The relatives with whom she lived sadly miss her. The Lord, in his wise providence, has seen best to call her away, although we could not see how we could spare her. We sometimes wonder why one so dear to us is called away in the bloom of life; but if we are his own, can we not say: "The Lord hath given, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord"? I. L. BRONSON.

GLENN—Mrs. NANNIE E. GLENN was born Aug. 16, 1855, and died at her home near Hernando, Miss., Sept. 18, 1895.

She was the daughter of Jno. W. and Elvira Johnson, and was happily married to W. L. Glenn, Dec. 24, 1874. We tenderly laid her to rest in the Baker's Chapel Cemetery.

She was reared by deeply pious parents, who spared neither time nor effort to impress on the mind of their daughter the vital importance of earnest piety and early consecration to God and the church, and, as a consequence, at the age of fourteen she gave her life to the Savior, and united at once with the Methodist Church at Baker's Chapel.

As wife, neighbor and Christian, her daily living was an illustration of the work of the Holy Spirit. The remembrance of her in her community will long be as ointment poured forth.

Her final moments were such as her life might have led one to expect. While her sun set at the noon of life, it went down in a halo of glory, shedding its heavenly beams upon a sorrowing community. All is well with our sister. Her day dawns in heaven.

Weep not, my dear brother, your loving companion has only gone before to await the coming of those left behind. An elapse of a few years of faithful toil at best will assure a reunion in that place where parting is no more. May we all meet in the "sweet by-and-by!"
A. J. JONES

BELFOUR—Capt. GEO. L. BELFOUR was born in Copenhagen, Denmark, 1822; died Aug. 29, 1895, at 11:30 P. M., at Whitestown, Miss.

About forty years of his life was spent on the sea. He was twice married. He leaves a wife, daughter, many relatives and friends to mourn his departure. He became a Lutheran when young; but, feeling a desire to be in church relations while attending the meeting at Topisaw in 1875, he became a member of the M. E. Church, South. Capt. Belfour was a man who had quite an attraction for young men, and was always ready to give them a word of good advice. He left his beautiful home in Biloxi to visit his daughter's home in Texas. While there it is said the good impressions made on the minds of the young will likely go with them through life.

Shortly after coming to Whitestown, where he was enjoying a visit to his relatives, he was attacked with very severe fever, which resulted in his death. He was followed to the cemetery by a large procession of sympathizing friends. There we committed his body to the ground, but his spirit had gone to the God who gave it. The Lord bless the bereaved ones! J. T. ABNEY.

CROOKER—JESSIE CROOKER died at her home near Crowley, La., on Sept. 11, 1895, aged twenty years.

She was talented and full of hope and life, and every prospect stretched out brightly before her; but a mysterious Providence called her suddenly away. She was modest and refined by nature, and her good qualities grew brighter with closer acquaintence. She united with the church more than two years before her death. Her profession of faith in Christ was bright and clear. She had expressed her purpose of consecrating all her talents to the service of God. Thus great possibilities of Christian usefulness seemed to lie out before her; but God had other plans of his own. During her last sickness she wanted to talk of God and his service. "To God and the word of his grace" we would commend her sorrowing friends in their deep affliction.
W. WINANS DRAKE.

PYBURN—Mrs. FANNIE A. PYBURN, wife of H. P. Pyburn, and daughter of A. R. McDonald, was born Nov. 18, 1868, and died Sept. 23, 1895.

Sister Pyburn was a consistent member of the Missionary Baptist Church, which she joined August, 1892. She was a loving and dutiful daughter, a tender and thoughtful sister and a devoted wife. In few words she shed sunshine and cheer upon all with whom she came in contact. May her loved and stricken friends follow her Christian example, and meet in the "better land!" J. H. BROWN.

GRIFFIN—Died, near Walnut Lane, Union parish, La., little CLAUDIE GRIFFIN. He was born July 24, 1892, and died Aug. 10, 1895. He was the little son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. W. Griffin. He was a bright and promising child. He leaves a sad home here on earth to find a happy home in heaven, where he is a shining angel.

Weep not, dear parents, for the one that has gone before you. I. A. R.

CORNELL—The following resolutions were passed by Waterproof Sunday-school:

Whereas, We have learned with grief that it has been the divine will of our Father to call to his throne our late sister, Mrs. MARY CHAMBERLAIN CORNELL, and the happy relations which have existed between our deceased sister and the Waterproof Sunday-school of the M. E. Church, South, render it proper that we place on record our appreciation of her services and interest as a true, constatent teacher of the Sunday-school, and her exemplary Christian womanhood; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Waterproof Sunday-school of the M. E. Church, South, that, while we bend to the sad decree of our heavenly Father with dutiful submission, we none the less mourn the death of this noble woman, who went about doing good, as our pastor's wife and Sunday-school teacher.

Resolved, That in the death of Mrs. Cornell the M. E. Church, South, has lost a valuable co-worker, who was untiring in duty as a minister's wife, faithful as a friend and noble as a Christian; willing to lend a hand to the weary, an ear to the distressed, and a word to aid the mission of the church; devoted to the cause of Christ, the interest of the Sunday-school, and the duty of a woman; was wise in counsel, gentle in ministration, and upright in example.

Resolved, That this Sunday-school offers heartfelt sympathy to the family of our deceased sister in this, their deep affliction.

Resolved, That these resolutions be entered upon the Minutes of the Sunday-school; that a copy be sent to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, one to the Nashville Sunday-school Visitor, and another to the family of the deceased. KATE NEWTON, for Com.

San Francisco is said to look with little popular favor on the proposition to hold the National Republican Convention there. It is a matter of $65,000!

The Mormons of Utah are commanded by their church authorities to vote against any Mormon who presumes to become a candidate against the will of the president of the church.

The cotton compress of the Hopson Oil Mill Company, valued at $25,000, together with about 500 bales of cotton and a box car belonging to the Mobile and Ohio Railroad Company, was burned in Aberdeen, Miss., on Oct. 28.

Four Mormon elders, who were trying to establish a church at New Hill, N. C., were formally notified by a number of the best citizens of the neighborhood that the locality was a bad one for their health. They complained to the governor about it.

Charles H. Hackley, the millionaire lumberman of Muskegon, Mich., has given that city $30,000 to build and equip a normal training-school, and promises to see that it has an income of $5,000 a year for its support, both before his death and after.

The Supreme Court of Arkansas has ruled that a railroad company is liable for the acts of its passengers, and has affirmed the judgment of the lower court by which Mrs. Greenthal was awarded $11,000 damages for the death of her husband, who was killed by an insane passenger in a Pullman car on the Iron Mountain road.

Carroll D. Wright, Commissioner of Labor, in his annual report devoted to labor troubles, attempts an estimate of the loss caused by strikes in the United States during the thirteen and a half years ending June 30, 1894. He computes the loss from strikes and lockouts to employers at $94,825,837, and to employees at more than twice as much—$190,439,382.

The museum of the American Board of Foreign Missions has been transferred from the headquarters of the Board in Boston to the Hartford Theological Seminary. It consists chiefly of religious objects, including idols, ritualistic articles and vestments from all parts of the pagan world. There are also manuscripts and inscriptions from Asia Minor of more or less value, including a number of Armenian manuscripts.

The Paris Figaro says that England's "ultimatum habit" is much to be deprecated, and may result in a breach of the peace one of these days.

During the past year forty-seven Japanese army officers committed suicide. It is considered in Japan the only gentlemanly way of getting out of any disgrace.

Another French ministry has been driven from power by revelations of dishonesty among public men in France, in connection with the management of large corporations.

It is said that Pope Leo grows weaker every day. Each week seems to add to the emaciation of his body. The merits of rival candidates for the Papacy are now being discussed and wrangled over.

For some weeks past the progress of the revolution in Cuba has been very slow, even the daily accounts of unimportant skirmishes have been lacking. Aside from sensational reports giving the details of a hot engagement, in which 800 Spaniards are reported to have fallen, there has been no important engagement for more than a month.

Fierce disturbances, accompanied by serious bloodshed, are reported to have taken place at Erzingjan, Turkey. Sixty Armenians are said to have been killed. The Turkish government has sent a circular note to the representatives of the powers and to its representatives abroad, announcing that the outbreak was provoked by the Armenians.

The sensational developments with respect to the reported treaty between Russia and China have served to create a serious war scare in Europe, and particularly in England. Should the reported facts as to the treaty prove true, it is safe to say that Great Britain would promptly aid Japan in resisting Russian aggression in Corea.

Russia has made a demand upon Japan to evacuate Corea unconditionally, and although it is stated that the Japanese have agreed to retire, it is not believed that they have any intention of so doing. It is said that a fleet of fifteen Russian warships have sailed from Vladivostock for Chemulpo, Corea, and it is also reported that the Japanese fleet has been withdrawn from Formosa, and has probably sailed for Corean ports.

Cumberland Presbyterian: "It is indeed full of touching incidents calculated to quicken the faith of all who read it."

Pres. Franklin College, New Athens, O.: "This is one of the best and most interesting books we have ever seen."

Central Congregationalist: "Many of the incidents are exceedingly pathetic, and can scarcely fail to stir any tender heart to tears. It is a rich mine of illustrations for a preacher, and deserves to be in every minister's library, while no Christian heart can fail to be deeply interested and profoundly stimulated by it toward faith in God."

Methodist Recorder: "It is a well-bound book, full of incidents and illustrations for public speakers, and will encourage every reader to greater faith and more earnest prayer."

Christian Herald, edited by T. DeWitt Talmage: "Mr. S. B. Shaw has done a wise thing in making a compilation of Notable Answers to Prayer. Such incidents encourage the desponding Christian and are useful to Christian workers in leading their hearers to pray for themselves."

Christian Arbitrator: "Some of the incidents are very touching; we could only read them with tear-dimmed eyes."

The book contains 320 pages, and when open measures 8½ by 12⅛ inches, and is beautifully bound in full cloth.

It is equally adapted to the learned and unlettered.

Young and old, saved and unsaved, all read it with delight. Leaders of the various Christian denominations commend it highly.

OUR OFFER.

We will send the work, postpaid, to any address on receipt of publisher's price—$1; to preachers, 75 cents. We will do better than this for our subscribers. Any subscriber who will pay his subscription up to January, '97, can have the work sent to him, postpaid, for 50 cents, provided he has not had the benefit of any previous premium offer. Those who have had the benefit of a previous offer should write us for terms. Better still: Any subscriber who will pay his own subscription up to January, '97, and send us one new subscriber at the regular rate—$2—will receive a copy of the work free. Remember that delays are dangerous, and write at once.

Wanted.

A position as governess. Best recommendations. Teach instrumental music and elocution, besides a thorough English course. Address,

O. P., This Office.

To Whom It May Concern.

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of Mul-en-ol. I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all true that is claimed for it and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds and all kinds of sores, it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. It is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine that is worthy of a place in every household. W. C. BLACK.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

For Over Fifty Years

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

West Monroe, La.

After an absence of nearly two months, spent in Memphis, Tenn., at my father's, I reached home on Oct. 4 somewhat improved in health. I am now hard at work trying to regain lost ground. If the health of myself and wife continues good, we hope to do some good work for the Master between now and Conference. The people here are very considerate of us, which is a great incentive to hard work in their behalf. I have just completed some improvements on the parsonage property. WM. G. EVANS.

Rev. E. H. McNabb.

Rev. E. H. McNabb, a local elder on McNutt circuit, died yesterday morning (twenty-fourth instant). A good and true man is gone. A large congregation attended his funeral. The day before we buried his little boy, about two years old. A more extended notice of our departed brother will be forthcoming. K. A. JONES.

Would You Be Brilliant?

The attention of the readers of this paper is called to the new physiological discovery, Memory Restorative Tablets, compounded by the Memory Elements Co., 1 Madison Ave., N. Y.

These Tablets are highly endorsed for permanently increasing the memory and intellectual power, and for mental fatigue, nervous exhaustion and nervousness. They are composed of an extract from certain portions of the brain and their prompt action is quite astonishing; no brain-worker can afford to be without them, for memory is the mother of wisdom. Everybody should recognize the priceless value of a good memory which is the supreme genius. It can now be readily acquired. Testimonials prove that dull and backward students, and others, become quite brilliant and intellectual after taking these Tablets for a few weeks. The great benefits to be derived from them appeals to the intelligence of everyone; moreover, they are endorsed by the medical profession and scientists as being a marvelous triumph of modern science. They cost but $1 per vial, postpaid. Send for their interesting circular.

CAMP MEETING.

The Fall Camp Meeting will be held Oct. 25 to Nov. 4, at Cameron, La.

The beauties of the southwest coast of Louisiana brought into service. Rowing, fishing, sailing, and—better still—the best of preaching. Good board and lodging furnished visitors at the most reasonable rates.

The preaching will be done under the Holiness Tent, and will be red hot and from the heart.

The doctrine of entire sanctification as a second work of grace will be taught through out the meeting, and seekers will be urged to press into the experience by faith.

The route is via Lake Charles, thence by steambont (at reduced rates to Cameron.

For further particulars address: Rev. F. D. Van Valkenburgh, Patterson, La.; Bunj. Chadwell, Chm. Ent. Com., Cameron, La., or Rev. D. C. Rawls, Y. M. C. A., New Orleans, La.

Any friends inclined to help meet expenses can remit any amount to Jas A. Wakefield, Treas. Finance Com., or to Rev. W. B. Van Valkenburgh, P. C., Cameron, La.

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

In Bright's Disease of the Kidneys, Uric Acid Diathesis, Calculi, Nervous Disorders, &c.

Dr. Graeme M. Hammond, of New York, Prof. of Diseases of the Mind and Nervous System in the New York Post-Graduate Medical School and Hospital:

"In all cases of Bright's Disease of the Kidneys I have found BUFFALO LITHIA WATER of the greatest service in increasing the quantity of urine and in eliminating the albumen. In certain cases of Melancholia, accompanied by excessive elimination of Urates and Uric Acid, it is often the only remedy necessary. In Gout and Rheumatism it is highly beneficial. I have long regarded BUFFALO LITHIA WATER as the most valuable mineral water in use.

Dr. Allard Memminger, Professor of Chemistry, Medical College, State of South Carolina:

"I have used in my own case and prescribed for others, BUFFALO LITHIA WATER for Uric Acid Trouble with excellent results, and I regard it as the safest, surest and most agreeable way of removing from the system this most pernicious derivative of Uric Acid, the retention of which is followed by so many distressing symptoms, embracing Gout, Calculi of the Kidney and Bladder, Herpetiform Neuralgic affections, cases of Mental Depression and Nervous Irritability and Nervous Asthma, caused by the irritating action of Uric Acid on the bronchial tubes."

Dr. Harvey L. Byrd, of Baltimore, Prest. and Prof. of Obstetrics and Diseases of Women and Children in the Balt. Med. College, Formerly Prof. of Practical Medicine, etc.:

"BUFFALO LITHIA WATER has an ascertained value in Bright's Disease. A knowledge of its action in that disease thus far would seem to warrant the belief that it would in many instances, at least in its early stages, arrest it entirely, and in its more advanced stage prove a decided comfort and palliative."

This Water is for sale by druggists generally, or in cases of one dozen half-gallon bottles $5.00 f. o. b. at the Springs. Descriptive pamphlets sent to any address.

HEAVEN.

There is no place where earth's sorrows
Are more felt than up in heaven;
There is no place where earth's failings
Have such kindly judgment given.

For the love of God is broader
Than the measures of man's minds;
And the heart of the Eternal
Is most wonderfully kind.

Correspondence.

Letter from Italy.

Our first morning in Florence was spent in the Uffizi Gallery and the Pitti Palace studying the great works of Titian, Raphael, Michael Angelo, Andrea del Sarto Correggio, Albrecht Durer, Paul Veronese, and other masters. We were surrounded by an overwhelming display of riches, and yearned to spend months, instead of a few short hours, in their midst. The most famous chef d œuvres in statuary that we saw were the Venus de Medici, Apollo, the Wrestlers, the Dancing Faun, the antique group of Niobe and her children, and Canova's bust of the first Napoleon. In painting, the Madonnas, Adorations of the Magi, Descents from the Cross, Virgin and Goldfinch, the Holy Family, Christ's Head, Salvator Rosa's and Ruysdael's landscapes, the Magdalens, and portraits of men and women world renowned. Room entered into room endlessly, each containing productions from the very best artists of the Tuscan, Dutch, Flemish, German, French, Italian schools. In Florence we feel that we are stepping on sacred ground. The very air is full of inspiration. Every spot is rife with tender interest.

To-day we visited the church of St. Marco, where Fra Savonarola thundered forth his heroic utterances, and the monastery where he was sheltered. The latter is celebrated also for being the abiding-place of the noted painters, Fra Angelico and Fra Bartolommeo della Porta. On the walls of each little cell are frescoes done by them. In the room that Savonarola occupied is shown the vestments that he once wore, his books, a portrait in oil of his strong face, which is wonderfully like that of George Eliot, and a representation of the crucifixion. In an adjoining room is a large painting of the funeral pyre of this gifted, fearless Dominican, who was martyred for the love he bore his country.

To the right of the entrance to San Marco is a wooden image of Jesus, which was made in the thirteenth century. The look of agony on the face is the most terrible I have ever seen. At the base of the image are hundreds of votive offerings, and at either side innumerable rosaries, one of which hangs from the neck of the figure. Exactly opposite, across the aisle, are images of the sacred family. Mary and Elizabeth are dressed in gold brocade, as if for a ball or dinner party, and the infant Christ and John the Baptist are equally gorgeously arrayed. On the fingers of the Virgin are dozens of rings slipped there by her worshipers, and at her feet are countless silver hearts and jeweled gifts. It is all so pathetic! I have never seen anything so deeply touching as the humble devotion of European Catholics, the prostrations upon the floor, the kneeling for hours before shrines, the patient waiting at the confessionals. Poor, simple-hearted men and women! surely their reward will be great in heaven. Florence is interesting above all things as having been the birthplace of Dante, the divine poet, as he is lovingly called in Italy. He died in banishment in 1321, and his native town has never been able to secure his body, but magnificent monuments have been erected to his memory. In the church of Santa Croce there is a splendid statue of him above a sarcophagus. On the left is an immense female figure representative of Italy, star-crowned and sceptred; to the right a beautiful Beatrice, his guiding light, drooping over an open book, holding a laurel wreath in one hand. In a square opposite the cathedral is another monument of Dante. Near this is a large Italian house, frescoed on the outer side, which is pointed out by guides as the home of Beatrice. The dwelling of the immortal author of the Inferno is in a narrow street several squares distant. A flight of steps, exceedingly steep, leads to a small room decorated with marble busts of Dante, containing his old arm chair and a laurel wreath under a glass hung on the wall. Here an old man livens and paints figures of the poet sitting under trees, and tries to sell his productions to every hero-worshiper who walks into the bare little chamber. Elizabeth Barrett Browning lived in Florence for years, and wrote. She died here in 1861. Michael Angelo lived here, too, and Cellini, and Galileo, and Leonardo da Vinci, and Raphael, and Machiavelli; Rossini, Andrea del Sarto, Giovanni, Amerigo Vespucci, and Alfieri. Alas, "Onida" is here now.

Santa Croce is called the Italian Pantheon, and could with equal propriety be named the Italian Westminster Abbey. In its hallowed precincts lie many of Italy's most brilliant sons. Beside the monument to Dante there are the tombs of Michael Angelo, Alfieri, Machiavelli, Alberti Corsini, Niccolini, and Galileo. The frescoes are very fine, and the paintings, many of them, were done by some of the old masters. Santa Croce was the admiration of Ruskin's heart. Florence is the fairest city we have yet seen in Italy. It stretches out for miles upon hills; its principal streets are broad and beautifully paved; the houses, public and private, are of the true Italian style of architecture, which is always plain and severe, but large and imposing. There is an air of cleanliness and progressiveness about everything that is surprisingly delightful. The stores are unusually handsome, and will compare with our great American establishments very favorably. Electric lines run through the city and upon the adjacent heights. Altogether, we feel at home here, and have a respect for the Florentines surpassing any we have yet had for any of their countrymen or women. BELLE KEARNEY.

Cotton States and International Exposition.

We will now enter the Government Building, which occupies the most imposing position on the grounds. It sits on the highest terrace, and overlooks the plaza and lake and all the other buildings. Descending from it are broad flights of steps, five in number. To sit in front of this building and view the immense throngs of people as they pass from place to place, the beautiful terraces that I have several times mentioned, the lake, the buildings beyond the lake, over into Midway, seeing the steam as it jets out from the pipes of Machinery Hall, where the great engines are throbbing and pulsating with life, and notice the many-colored flags floating from the different structures—is a vision grand to behold. And yet many do not seem to notice it. Hundreds, as soon as they enter the gates, remind me of the moths and insects attracted into a room by the glare of light, which, on finding themselves shut in, are bent on getting out. They bump from one side to another, around and around they go, till finally they find an exit, and away they go, having seen nothing. I find those in the buildings who remind me of a kind of butterfly, which floats from flower to flower, gathering nothing—all show and variety, carrying away nothing, storing up nothing. There is a small class that I will compare to the bee. They find something to extract, and take from everything they see. They store it away, and go home loaded with the riches of the works of man. I was standing beside an exhibit in the Smithsonian department a few days since. It was the analysis of a man, of which I shall speak in this letter. I saw people by ones, twos, threes, dozens and scores, glance at it and pass on. Finally an intelligent-looking old gentleman came up, looked for a second, and was turning away. I called to him, and asked if he knew what the exhibit was. "No," said he. "Come," I said, "and I will tell you of it." I finally left the old gentleman studying and learning from a small exhibit that he was about to pass.

Let me say right here, Mr. Editor, to those who contemplate coming—and all should come, if they can, by any means, get here—that this exposition is a study, and not simply to amuse. It is emphatically so with this exhibit which the government has made, and made it the most comprehensive one that has been put forth. True, you could see everything in it in Washington, but to do so you would have to visit every department, and then all that is here would not be seen.

All well remember the beautiful display of live fish in tanks at the World's Fair. Here it is even more beautiful. When you study, even a little, the science of fish culture as is here displayed, you are astonished at the proportions it has assumed. The stations operated by the government are scattered from Maine to California. In this exhibit everything used for catching fish, from the crude forked stick, with a thorn as a barb, up to the finest nets. To show the wonderful resources of the service, there is a net shown made of seal-skin string, built beautifully. There is a wall on which is placed a specimen of every fish that inhabit the waters from the Gulf to Cape Horn. This is a study for hours. Models of ancient and modern fishing-vessels. On a table covered to represent the sea is shown the whales, and the manner of harpooning them. It is impossible to embrace one-fiftieth of this exhibit in a short letter. I must call the attention of the children to the largest sea lion in the world, and to the rocky cliffs, with the goats lying so naturally on them. Here is the armadillo. What a wonderful armored animal it is! Now we have come to a cage of birds of paradise—the most beautiful things imaginable. We can look at them a long time. Now we are in another department. Look at this; it is embryology. See the large egg, made of some material. The shell, membranes, arteries, veins, everything is shown, largely magnified. Here we find the eggs as they are seen by any who dress fowls—little things. We trace one of them, as it is developed, entirely through, until the little chick is standing by the side of his house. Here we find comparative anatomy. How interesting it is to watch the grading up from the lowest animal life to quadruped, to biped! This is not evolution at all, but it shows the hand of our builder, who is God.

We have passed many exhibits, from which much could be learned; but here is one we must contemplate for a while. This is where I stopped the old gentleman, and finally left him. In a glass case, about five feet long and one foot wide, three feet high, we find the analysis of a man whose weight is 154 pounds. In the large jars is the water contained in the body. The chemical elements of a body is chemically composed. The elements are divided into three groups, viz: water, organic compounds (animal matter), and inorganic compounds (mineral matter). Let's see what we are composed of, and how much of each ingredient. Water, 96 pounds; hemoglobin, 24 pounds; fats, 24 pounds; mineral matter, 10 pounds; total, 154 pounds. There is of phosphate of lime, 8 pounds; carbonate of lime, 1 pound; chloride of lime, 7 ounces; phosphate magnesia, 6 ounces; chloride sodium (table salt), 6 ounces; potassium, 5 ounces. There is a jar containing 9 pounds of gelatine, and one containing 15 pounds of albumen.

There is much in the department of prehistoric anthropology, but I will leave that, though it is very interesting.

Here is the department of arts and industries. In it are many wonderful curiosities. Among them I will mention a case of carved ivories from Japan. It is the most beautiful work I ever saw. True to life. The carvings represent a large number of native mechanics before the introduction of any European implements—the carpenter, the mason, the armor-maker, the lantern maker, the umbrella maker, the cooper, etc.

Next to this is a collection of Japanese pottery dating back 660 years B. C. The introduction of the potter's wheel dates back to Giyoki, a priest of Idsumi, in 724 A. D. The first glazed ware was made in 1223 A. D. The first porcelain was made in 1513. The first decorated china was made in 1640. This department is full of study. Near this exhibit is a collection of two hundred musical instruments, showing the development of this art. The first is a rude musical bow of Mashonaland, which is used only to mark time, and is audible only to the player who holds one end between his teeth.

The department of oriental antiquities and religious ceremonials is full of interest to the Bible student. Many things, so hard to understand by the Sunday-school teacher and scholar, is here made plain. Here is a bust of Rameses, the Pharaoh of the Exodus. The tower of Babylon is modeled; casts of the Moabite stone, etc. The ancient religion of the Jews is represented by some important objects of Jewish ceremonial. Another case contains gems of Palestine, with a model illustrating the method in which the gems were placed in the high priest's breastplate. There is also a collection of coins struck in Palestine, as well as those which appeared in Bible times.

In the department of technology you will be very much interested. Here are models of boats from the bark canoe to a fine steamer. A model of the "Sally Constant," which landed the English settlers at Jamestown in 1609, is of interest; so is that of the "Mayflower." The various models of the first steamboat and railroad cars and locomotives, in connection with the first railroad that was built for traffic in the United States. It was in South Carolina. What a wonderful evolution has taken place! To the thoughtful student there is a day's study here. The South Atlantic States first sent a steamboat across the ocean. It left the port of Savannah, and the railroad from Augusta to Charleston was the first built. Now it would be called an elevated road, as it was built upon stilts.

I have now written this long letter, and have shown you but a few of the things to be seen and studied in this department of this educational building.

The crowds are getting large. Everybody goes away more than delighted, and are sorry if their time is limited. Don't plan to make your stay of a few days only. You can't see the Exposition in less than a week. There are no exorbitant charges in Atlanta. You can live well on one dollar and fifty cents a day, and even less—say, one dollar. Get it out of your head, if it is there, that this is a local fair. Not by any means is it such; but an international one.

Yesterday was Atlanta Day. Every store closed. Good people bought thousands of tickets and gave them to the poor. How they did enjoy the sights! B. H. CATCHING.

A New Code! Where Are Our Laws?

BY J. A. PARKER, D. D.

"Confusion worse confounded" seems to be our doom, as a church, at present. Clearly, we are drifting away on the tide of dictation into some unknown sea. The laws enacted by the General Conference are being amended, repealed and interpreted by self-constituted courts, organized under official guise, and so constructed as to suit the whims of each of these correcting tribunals, whether individual or collective.

Several years ago, and under the laws of "our church" just as they exist to-day, an "unlicensed person"—a woman—had "control of the services held" at Seashore Camp Ground—"other property of said church"—at which Mrs. Chopin, an "unlicensed" person, was the principal speaker. Mrs. Snell and Mrs. Kells were both present. Later—and I think at the same session—Mrs. Juliana Hayes (of precious memory) held another "service," which she "controlled," in the interest of the Woman's Missionary Society. This seems all to have been according to law at that time and under those circumstances, and was clearly all right and proper anywhere.

Divers and sundry "services" have been held in all our great city churches, from Baltimore to San Francisco, which were "controlled by unlicensed persons," with the consent of Bishops and pastors. This was never objected to till poor, downtrodden paragraph 120 appeared in our code.

Now, however, we have an exposition of law coming up from Seashore district, where Mrs. Chopin, Mrs. Snell and others were permitted to "hold services" in the interest of the W. C. T. U., which declares it is "contrary to the law" of our church "to permit unlicensed persons . . . to have control of the services held therein, or in any property owned by said church." (Italics my own.) This is said to be the law, and the violation of the law by doing any of these unlawful things constituted ground for the removal of a preacher "in the absence of the Bishop" (?).

Now, I submit that if Breland violated any law by allowing Mrs. Snell to "have control of services" held at Palmer Camp Ground, the same law was violated by a great ecclesiastical corporation, of which Bishop Keener is president, when Mrs. Lyons and Mrs. Hayes were permitted to "have control of services held" at Seashore Camp Ground in the interest of most worthy causes, one of which is unknown to the code of our church.

Look at the first "whereas" to the resolution passed by the "pastors and local preachers" of the Seashore district, Mississippi Conference:

Whereas, It is contrary to the law of the M. E. Church, South, (1) to permit unlicensed persons to occupy the pulpits of our church, (2) or to have control of the services held therein, (3) or in any property owned by said church.

This preamble assumes the very question in dispute, and is, therefore, merely assertive and mandatory.

Where is the law which says "unlicensed persons" shall not "occupy the pulpits of our churches?" Where is the law which forbids "unlicensed persons" to "have control of the services held therein?"—i. e., in our churches. Where is the law which forbids such services by such "unlicensed persons" in "any property owned by said church?" I can not find these laws in our Book of Discipline, and I do not believe they are therein at all.

The Seashore district authorities seem to recognize the fact that the presupposed "law" does not exist, for in the second preamble they say:

And, whereas, In violation of said law, and in open disregard of the expressed opinion in writing delivered in this case by Bishop J. C. Keener, and officially communicated by the presiding elder, Rev. C. A. Powell, at the Quarterly Conference to the preacher in charge of Palmer Camp Ground, etc.

Unless the promulgators of this new code propose to rely on this preamble as justification for the first preamble, I see no earthly use for its presence here.

To all this I wish to say:

1. Had this "opinion" of Bishop Keener been handed down while presiding over a Conference having jurisdiction of the case, it would have been "law" in that case, but in none other till passed on by the college of Bishops at an annual meeting.

2. A Bishop's "opinion," whether verbal or written, given privately or in the interval of a Conference, is not "law," however wise it may be.

3. There are only two ways of making "law" in our church: a. Laws enacted by the General Conference; b. Episcopal decisions approved by the college of Bishops.

Now, whence came this law which Breland is said to have violated? Its promulgation might save some more of us from trouble. Some preachers propose to go by the law, and such have a right to know where to find the law. But putting another "skein" of these homespun laws in with this Seashore "hank," it looks strange that under these homespun laws the presiding elder could "change the preacher," seeing "the Bishop is officially present when he can be reached by letter or telegram,"* and only "in the absence of the Bishop" the presiding elder can change a preacher in charge!

A few weeks ago we were confronted with a law which gave the presiding elder control of the pulpits of his district, whether the preacher in charge would consent, or whether he would not. Now we are confronted with a law which gives control to the preacher in charge and subjects him to removal for permitting "any unordained persons to occupy the pulpits of our churches."

Referring back to the preambles in question, I not only deny the existence of any law which forbids "unlicensed persons" occupying our pulpits, or having "control of services" held in "other property" under the control of our church, but I affirm that by the common law it is wholly with the pastor as to who shall conduct the services. This is especially true of our camp meeting exercises, which in all the past have been a sort of free-and-easy assembly of Christian people, where the laymen—and laywomen, too—were put forward and made leaders; given "control of services," and thereby trained for more efficient work at home. Our houses of worship, together with our "pulpits," are dedicated to the "worship and service of Almighty God," and this worship and service is not restricted by any provision for license, sex, or creed.

Where is the pastor who would presume to say to Mr. D. L. Moody: "No, sir; you are 'unlicensed.' I can not permit you to occupy my pulpit, nor hold services in our college chapel or 'other property belonging to said church.' No, oh, no!"

Under the enactments of the Seashore district, if Evangelist Moody were to pass that way, and Dr. Andrews should permit him to occupy his pulpit in Vicksburg, his presiding elder might send him over to the railroad shops, or somewhere else, as a punishment for his sins. The very thought is obnoxious. It is generally known that no one has more persistently opposed the evangelistic movement than I, nor has anyone more earnestly resisted the residue theory. I believe that both are unfortunate innovations of the long-established doctrine and customs of our church. But great as these may be in their distracting influences in the church, malconstructions and maladministration of the law is worse and much more far-reaching in its evil influence. The interpretation of a law contrary to the intent of the law-makers is an unheard-of thing outside of recent Methodist jurisprudence. When men—not only "unlicensed," but licensed as well—against whose moral or official character no word can be said, may be shut out of "our pulpits, or other property owned by" our church, merely upon the ipse dixit of some official, without formal trial and conviction by a court of competent jurisdiction, it is time to call a halt. If there was any reason, of a moral or even a social nature, why a person in regular standing in the church might not "have control of services held therein," that reason, or reasons, should constitute the basis of action.

To those who appeal to Wesley, it is needless to affirm that "unlicensed persons"—except by his personal endorsement—constituted the corps of his army of "helpers." To those who look to St. Paul, it seems that he had "unlicensed" persons to "labor" with him "in the gospel; with Clement also, and other of my (his) fellow-laborers." (Phil. iv, 3.) Either this, or he licensed "those women"—I do not know which. Either horn of the dilemma will let Breland out.

*An episcopal "opinion."

In the Living Present.

Italian macaroni has suddenly ceased to be extensively used. It has come to light that manufacturers, for purpose of flavoring, added bone flour. Said flour is supposed to have been made of bones secured from over-stocked charnel-houses.

The British Medical Journal warns against excessive use of borax. Found in combination or raw powder on most toilet tables. Externally used it causes eczema, when internally used it produces kidney disease. Physicians should be slow in prescribing the drug.

Of all countries Mexico has prospered and progressed most during the last few decades. President Diaz may be dictatorial, but he has created order out of chaos. The recent completion of the necessary drainage system at the capital marks an epoch in the history of that country. The City of Mexico is now as healthy as Boston. Railroads are multiplying. Farm products increase and find ready market. Very recently Roman Catholicism has made an effort to regain lost prestige.

On the thirty first of October it was 378 years that Dr. Martin Luther nailed the famous ninety five theses to the door of the Castle Church in Wittenberg. That is regarded as the initiation of the great Reformation. It was here that the cradle of Methodism, too, was built. Reading Luther's expositions of sacred texts, John Wesley was awakened; hearing Luther's preface to his commentary on Paul's Epistle to the Romans read, he was converted.

Thought well of Texas. Governor and Legislature deserve credit for excluding prize-fights. But on the twenty-ninth of October twelve thousand men, women and children, according to telegram, approvingly witnessed a lynching so brutal, not to say satanic, that the bare conception produces doubt as to the Christianization of our country. A negro man, after committing a heinous crime, near Tyler, was seized and slowly roasted to death. Repeatedly the fire on the funeral pile was extinguished in order to prolong the victim's suffering. It is hypocritical to charge such barbarity to detestation of Criminal Courts. Such courts, as a rule, make short process with negro criminals. ICH DIEN.

But the singer's heart sang sweeter?
I wonder if ever a rhyme was rung
But the thought surpassed the meter?
I wonder if ever a sculptor wrought

Or if ever a painter, with light and shade,
The dream of his inmost heart portrayed?

Correspondence.

In the East.

(Concluded.)

We returned to New York via Middletown and Shawn-Gunk Mountains. We remained in New York City a few days, pleasantly located at the superb home of Mr. John McConnell, a friend of Ed. Curry's.

We left New York City the second time for Long Branch and Asbury Park, by ocean steamer. We reached our destination safe and in due time, after a slight attack of seasickness on my part. We spent the time here very pleasantly, enjoying all the luxury of sea breezes and ocean bathing. Long Branch is one of the oldest and most aristocratic seaside resorts in our country. Asbury Park, situated only eight miles from Long Branch, is a newer place, but very popular. Near Asbury Park is Ocean Grove, the celebrated camp-meeting place. Here we attended some grand services in the large and beautiful tabernacle; heard some of the most eminent preachers of Methodism.

Our next objective point was Princeton, N. J., a historic town and great educational center. We were met at the depot by Mr. Elijah Leigh, who is president of the First National Bank of Princeton, and is truly one of Princeton's most princely men. While here we visited the college buildings and museum. Princeton College has the finest college buildings in the world. We visited the cemetery, where we saw the graves of Jonathan Edwards, and Aaron Burr, the murderer of Alexander Hamilton. We have seen it stated at different times in books that there is no stone to mark the grave of Aaron Burr. This is a mistake. There is a plain stone bearing a modest inscription, in which no reference is made to the unfortunate duel that ended the life of one of America's greatest men, and fixed upon Burr the hatred and contempt of the American people. Burr was a nephew of Jonathan Edwards, and lies at the feet of this scholarly and revered man. We drove from Princeton to Newtown, Penn., crossing the Delaware river at Washington's Crossing, the spot where General Washington crossed with his army on that cold December night before the battle of Trenton. We returned by way of Trenton, where we spent the day, and visited the State House and prison. While in the vicinity of Princeton we visited the house that was the headquarters of Washington and Lafayette. The original rooms occupied by them still remain.

From Princeton we went to Philadelphia, where we were the guests of Dr. B. F. Conlter, an excellent man. Ed. Curry has many friends in this city, who made it very pleasant for us. While here we visited old Independence Hall, the Pennsylvania Museum, Fairmount Park, Wanamaker's big store, the new city building, the Zoological Garden, and other places of interest. We also had a delightful voyage down the Delaware to Cape May on the steamer "Republic," and also over the Reading railway to Atlantic City. Both of these are very popular Summer resorts. Cape May is said to have the finest beach in the world, and is five degrees cooler than any resort within one hundred miles. My visit to these places and Philadelphia were both pleasant and instructive.

We went from Philadelphia to Newark, Del., where we spent some days very pleasant and profitable with friends. Newark is a beautiful little city, the location of the State College of Delaware. The country around is fertile, thickly settled, and in a high state of cultivation.

From Newark we went to Baltimore, the great commercial metropolis of Maryland. Here we were the guests of Dr. John Thorne. Baltimore is an energetic city of near six hundred thousand people. It carries on an extensive foreign commerce, second only to New York. Ships from all the countries of the world crowd the capacious harbor. While here we visited many places of interest and beauty. We visited the tomb of Madame Bonaparte, wife of Jerome, who was a brother to Napoleon Bonaparte. She was a Baltimore girl, the daughter of a wealthy merchant. Her name was Elisabeth Patterson. The marriage took place while Napoleon was in the height of his glory, very much against his imperious wishes. He would not suffer her to land anywhere on the continent of Europe, and forced his brother to abandon her. She died in Baltimore, her native city, at the age of ninety-four. She was buried in Green Mount Cemetery. We visited David Hill Park, which is extensive, beautiful, and grand; Johns Hopkins University, the Peabody Institute, and many other important places.

From Baltimore we went to Washington City, the capital of the nation, the pride of the American people. While here we had every possible advantage. Ed. Curry's many substantial friends, whose hearts and homes were opened, made everything pleasant for us. Washington is certainly the most beautiful city I have ever seen. The many grand public buildings, the broad streets and avenues, the beautiful trees and parks and fountains and statues, all combine to give the city an air of indescribable beauty and grandeur. The sight of the Capitol, as it stands in all of its imposing grandeur, inspires one with feelings of patriotism never experienced before. I can not describe the buildings, but we took it in systematically, going through every department and seeing everything. The other goverment buildings are objects of much interest, and claimed part of our time. We visited the White House, the home of the President, and were politely shown through all its magnificent apartments. The rooms are stately, beautiful, luxurious. The Washington Monument, towering like a giant above everything else, is an object of sublime beauty never to be forgotten by the beholder. It is upwards of five hundred feet high, and twenty-four feet square at the base. It is ascended on the inside by means of an elevator in the center and a flight of stairs around the edge. The view from the top is extensive and picturesque. You can see several miles of the Potomac river, Arlington Heights, the home of General Lee, Alexandria, Va., and you get a general bird's-eye view of the city. The National Museum and Smithsonian Institute are places not to be neglected. Months could be spent here in profitable scientific research and delightful and instructive recreation. We visited Mt. Vernon, the home and burial-place of General Washington. We visited the navy yards, and saw them making the large guns. The largest ones shoot a ball weighing twelve hundred pounds to a distance of seventeen miles, requiring five hundred pounds of powder for a discharge. We enjoyed fine drives in every direction. The one to the Soldier's Home and through the grounds was exceedingly beautiful. While in Washington I had the pleasure of meeting two young men, Messrs. Clark and McMillian, of Kosciusko, Miss., my own native and beloved State. Our stay in Washington, as everywhere else, was very pleasant, entertaining, and instructive. We bid farewell to our Washington friends, boarding a train on the picturesque P. and O. railway, were soon comfortably quartered in a Pullman sleeper flying westward at the rate of forty-five miles an hour. We passed through the beautiful scenary of the Blue Ridge and Shenandoah Valley in Virginia before dark. We retired to bed early, and when we arose next morning we were nearing Cincinnati, at which point we arrived in due time, and saw Lebanon the same day. Although my trip had been everything one could desire, yet I must confess I was real glad to get back to Lebanon, for it seems like home to me.

One more—and I might say the most pleasant feature connected with my trip that I should like to mention—is the splendid, spiritual Methodist congregations that I visited and worshiped with, having had the pleasure and honor of preaching five different times in some of the very best pulpits. I became partially acquainted with the customs of our "Yankee" Methodist brethren, and am glad to say I found them to be a very cordial, earnest people. It is my judgment that they adhere more strictly to "old-fashion," pure, unadulterated Methodism than we Southern Methodists do.

As I traveled through the large cities, and saw the grand work being done by the Y. M. C. A., the Christian Endeavor, Epworth League, and our consecrated missionaries, I felt like exclaiming, "Salvation's rolling on."

In all we were absent two months; touched eleven States, including the Dominion of Canada and District of Columbia; traveled in all nearly four thousand miles; visited the leading cities, Summer resorts, art galleries, scientific museums, colleges, parks, public buildings, and historic scenes of the East. Puzzled—Badly Puzzled.

I am badly puzzled to know why certain officials discriminate in regard to the unlicensed persons who occupy Methodist pulpits. It is a known fact that in the Winter of this year Miss Tucker, of Tennessee, occupied the pulpit of the Rayne Memorial M. E. Church, South, New Orleans. She must have done so with the consent of the pastor. I believe she would not have entered that pulpit uninvited. If ever a condemnatory word has been uttered either against the pastor or Miss Tucker, it has not yet reached the ears of the public or gone to the press. Why this discrimination in favor of Miss Tucker and against Mrs. Snell?

To say that Mrs. Snell preaches and Miss Tucker talks is puerile nonsense. If Miss Tucker did not preach, what did she do? It reminds me of the boy who said to his father, "Papa, if c-h-a-r-k-o-a-l don't spell charcoal, what do it spell?"

Quibblers! quibblers! Are we degenerating into quibblers? It is not unknown that Miss Belle Kearney addressed one of the largest audiences assembled in New Orleans this year in the Louisiana Avenue Methodist Church. Were Bishop Keenar and other officials ignorant of these facts?

If Rev. E. T. Breland violated the law of the church by inviting and insisting that Mrs. M. M. Snell conduct the Palmer Camp Meeting, what about the pastors of the above-named churches? If Breland was moved because, it is claimed, he violated the law, why were not the pastors of Rayne Memorial and Louisiana Avenue moved? Why all this flurry over the Breland-Snell case, and absolute silence concerning the Parker-Tucker and Lyons-Kearney cases? High-Church Methodism is High-Church nonsense. NOLAN B. HARMON.

Annual Session of the W. F. M. S. at Crowley, La., Oct. 11-14, 1895.

The following was read before the convention:

A few weeks ago I received a letter from our president requesting me to write a paper, to be read at our annual meeting. I felt sure she had made a mistake in calling on one so weak and incapable, and my first thought was to refuse; but, remembering our motto, "She hath done what she could," after "taking it to the Lord in prayer," I wrote to her that, with God's help, I would do the best I could. And while I do not presume to measure arms with you, my learned sisters (for I have come up to this meeting to get wisdom), still God has a work for each one of us, no matter how humble or how small our sphere; and Jesus has done so much for me, I am willing—yea, anxious—to do anything to show the love that burns in my heart for him, and poor, perishing souls for whom my Savior died.

Not feeling competent to do justice to any particular subject, my paper must take the form of a letter. While the woman in the Bible was commended by Jesus as having done all she could, the query often comes to me, Would he say that of us, were he to come into our midst to day? Nay, my sisters; I fear we are sadly wanting in the spirit of self-sacrifice that prompted this poor woman to give all she had for Jesus.

What means this "wail from the islands of the sea;" these voices from China, Japan, India, Mexico; from "Africa's sunny fountains," and other heathen lands, calling, oh, so piteously, for us to come over and help them; to bring them the Bread of Life ere they sink into Christless graves, while on this side the men and women whom we have asked God to raise up are begging to "go quickly" and tell the glad news of salvation, and there is no money to send them? Is it not because we are hoarding the gold, "God's gifted gold," instead of using it as he designed we should in scattering joy and gladness everywhere? "There is that scattereth, and yet increaseth, and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty." (Prov. xi, 24.) Thus the church is crying, "Oh, my leanness! my leanness!" while the promise is held out that "the liberal soul shall be made fat, and he that watereth shall be watered also himself." (Prov. xi, 25.) Some claim they do not like the Methodist Church, because she has so many collections; and yet we pay six hundred millions of dollars annually for tobacco, that vile poison, while the people of New York pay one million dollars more to theatres than they do to churches. Verily "the children of this world are wiser (more liberal) in their generation than the children of light." It is said an extra penny a day from every woman and child in the M. E. Church, South, would yield about three million dollars per annum, or more than five times the amount received by the Woman's Board during the first thirteen years of its organization. That seems so little to give to him who gave his life for us; still, so few are doing even that, or we would not be confronted with an empty treasury in this, our time of need. Oh, sleepers, awake! The cloud of financial distress is beginning to brighten. Already we feel the throb of new life in the business world, as the reapers are gathering in the abundant harvest. Let us not lag in doing the 'King's business," for it "requireth haste." Souls are dying all around us. "Soon will the season of rescue be o'er." Let us "throw out the life-line ere the winds of temptation and billows of woe hurl them out where the dark waters flow," and they perish because you and I have failed to do our duty.

Let each member of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society but feel their individual responsibility in this matter of bringing the world to Christ, and we would move out in a mighty phalanx that nothing could resist, and soon the "kingdoms of this world would become the kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ." Oh, if we could only get our ladies to take the interest they should in the monthly meetings, how much more we could accomplish! If they could only feel the utter desolation of our poor, degraded heathen sisters, without God and without hope, in this life and the next!

Just here I will relate a dream I had in the early part of the year; and had I not already been filled with the spirit of missions, it would have made me an ardent advocate of the cause the balance of my life. I dreamed that my husband and I were heathens, living across the sea, in far-away China. We had never heard the sweet story of the wonderful love of Jesus; hence our hearts were filled with ignorance and superstition concerning the one true God. We bowed down to idols, hoping they would give us the rest of soul for which we sought. Two innocent children made our home bright, till one day my husband entered the room, and said: "Wife, we can not afford to keep two children any longer; the baby must go." The words struck terror to my soul. But, as heathen women never have a voice in any matter, I said not a word. I saw him approach the bed on which our sleeping darling lay, and deal blows with a hatchet upon the little head, till, all crushed and bleeding, he threw it aside for dead, covered it with a sheet, and went out. In my anguish and grief I cried out, "O God, help!" for even in my heathen blindness I felt there must be a God somewhere who did not believe in such cruelty. But, hark! Methinks I hear a faint moan, and, quickly raising the sheet, I find a spark of life still left in the bruised and mangled form. But just at this moment God, in mercy, permitted me to awake, and, oh, joy, to find I was not a heathen, but a Christian mother; and how fondly I clasped my precious baby to my heart and thanked God for a Savior, the Bible, and my own happy Christian home! But, oh, what a greater longing for the salvation of these poor heathen sisters took possession of my soul! I grasped, as never before, the meaning of the text, "He was touched with the feeling of our infirmities." I had been down to their level, I had felt their woes, and hence could enter with a truer, deeper sympathy into their heart-troubles.

It was not long after this till the mail brought to me the April number of the Woman's Missionary Advocate, and it contained the story of, "No Room for Wong Ling Te," and I seemed to pass again through that awful dream as she told of the baby sister, whose little life was sacrificed because the parents knew not of Jesus; and when she spoke of her journey to the mission school, how she thought she had found heaven when she reached there, and began looking around for the dear old grandmother who had died, longing to know about Jesus, and when her father talked about leaving her, the teacher's face grew sad as she said: "I can not take her; my school is full. I have already turned away seven girls to-day." My heart felt as if it would break with its longing to go quickly and carry the message of salvation, and gather these little ones into the fold. And what could be more pathetic than the closing lines of her story: "I don't know how to pray to Jesus; I wish I did: but every night I say, Please, Jesus, ask your friends in America, that have money, to send some over here, enough to make a place for this stupid child, for, oh, dear Jesus, it makes me feel so bad to be shut out!"

Oh, if we could only impress this individual responsibility upon each woman's heart in our fair land, soon all such plaintive wails would be turned into shouts of gladness, because of the mercy, boundless and free, that would come to every heathen heart.

It is said the need of the mission cause to day is money. But how are we to get it? By ice-cream parties, suppers, etc., appealing to the bazar elements of our natures! No, never! Away with all such methods to raise money to carry on the work of Him who said, "The silver and the gold are mine, and the cattle upon a thousand hills."

It is only by entire consecration of ourselves and our all to Jesus that we will begin to realize that God requires something of each one of us. It is only then that we will find it a privilege "to honor the Lord with our substance." Jesus did not forbid the widow casting in her two mites, though he knew it was all her living. There was poverty in that home, but the time had come for an offering to the Lord, and she gave him all her living. She obeyed her Lord's commands, and trusted him for the rest. God has said: "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, and prove me now herewith, and I will open you the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it." Do we believe it? It seems we do not, or there would not be these waiting ones ready, anxious to go to the fields that are so white unto the harvest, while the church at home withholds the means to send them. Oh, ye women that are at ease in Zion, arouse a'er it be too late! The day of judgment will soon be here, and "what you do to-day you do for eternity, and then you'd give a life to be able to do something for Christ." So let us bring in the tithes of all our Lord has given us—our time, our talents, our money, ourselves; and then, falling at the feet of Jesus, having our lips touched with the live coal from off God's altar, say, "Here am I, O Lord; send me, send me." As for myself, everything I have belongs to Jesus. I have no desire but to spend and be spent for his glory.

Two bright boys are the joy of our home. They have been consecrated to the Lord from their birth, and if he will only call them to preach the everlasting gospel to the uttermost parts of the earth, the loudest "Amen!" will fall from their mother's lips.

Mississippi Conference Parsonage and Home Mission Society.

We have just received, in a neat and elegantly printed pamphlet, the second annual report of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society of the Mississippi Conference of the M. E. Church, South, held at Wesson, Miss., July 28 and 29, 1895. Upon reading the eloquent address of the president, and also the report of the corresponding secretary, we feel not only encouraged to press on in our work, but we feel grateful to our heavenly Father for the good work done, and commend with heart and spirit a work that appeals to all the finer sensibilities of our nature and the happiness of the soul.

Endorsed as our work has been by the Bishops, and the results so far worthy of their endorsement in procuring homes for our preachers, and in aiding the cause of Christ at home and abroad, it will surely enlist not only all the preachers, but the entire membership of the church, because this is a work telling happily upon the destiny of thousands of immortal souls. We can scarcely entertain the thought that any truly converted soul would delay and hinder this work, or limit the Holy One of Israel. "As a family without shelter, so is Methodism in its pastorate without homes; but Methodism properly domiciled is Christianity in earnest."

At the convention "Dr. Atkins advised the workers not to notice and comment on the indifference and failure of the ministry to encourage their work. He thought that with time the preachers would understand it better, and that God would help them and us, and that it will all come right. He called attention to the fact that the prejudice at first existing against the Foreign Missionary Society had almost died out, and prophesied that the same will prove true of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society. He thought that the indifference of the ministry was due to their ignorance of the work, and that their minds and time were full of other important church business."

Some one says of Our Homes: "A single copy is worth the amount paid for a whole year's subscription." Miss Helm suggests that the Conference societies count the number of preachers within their bounds, and appropriate money to send Our Homes to each preacher. It is hoped that the subscription list the coming year may be doubled.

"All our Conference officers should notice the resolution passed at the convention urging Conferences to pledge themselves to secure one hundred new subscribers to Our Homes during the year. All present at the convention made this pledge heartily, and some are already at work to redeem this pledge. This can be done in each Conference. Let every Conference officer work for it. We will publish regularly their success as it is reported to us. Our Homes should have a subscription list of ten thousand before the close of this fiscal year."—Our Homes.

Selections.

Use It for God.

What is in thine hand? A broom? Use it for God. The broom of the domestic servant may be as truly used for God as was the sceptre of David or Solomon. What is in thine hand? A trowel, a hammer, an axe, a chisel, a saw, or some other mechanical tool? Use it for God. Jesus Christ gave dignity to labor; the sweat-beads of honest toil stood on his brow. What is in thine hand? A pen? A pen is mightier than the sword. The pen of Shakespeare, of Longfellow, of Tennyson, of Whittier! Oh, matchless instrument! A pen in the hand of Harriet Beecher Stowe stabbed slavery to the heart. A pen in the hand of George Kennan to tell the story of darkest Russia is mightier than the sword of the Czar of all the Russias. Have you a pen? Use it for God. Perhaps it is a typewriter. Touch its keys; make sweet music that shall echo around the globe. We are all familiar with George Herbert's admirable expression of this thought:

"A servant with this clause
Makes drudgery divine;
Who sweeps a room, as for Thy laws,
Makes that and the action fine."

We need grit and grace to use the old sword, the old hammer, the old fire, the old and always new gospel. Oh, can you not find some poor soul to-day who does not know Jesus? Can you not tell some wanderer about the Christ? What is in thine hand? Wealth? Consecrate it now to God. What is in thy mouth? A tongue of eloquence? Use it for God. The tongue is the mightiest instrument that God ever made. What is in thine hand? A kindly grasp? Give that to some sad soul. Let us consecrate everything to him. The office, the plow, the pen, the needle, the tongue, the hands, the feet, and the heart for Jesus. When the pierced hand of Jesus Christ is laid on the printing-press, on wealth, on learning, on beauty, on culture, on every gift and grace in every relation in life, then the splendor of the millennial dawn will color the eastern sky with its crimson and gold.—R. S. MacArthur, D. D., in "Quick Truths in Quaint Texts."

A large part of our work of winning souls is personal—that is, it is a work between man and man. God has ordained that, usually, when an unsaved person is to be led to the Savior, it shall be done through some human agent. As Andrew found Peter, as Philip found Nathanael, as Jesus found the woman at Jacob's well, so are we to seek after souls, and patiently, lovingly win them to their Redeemer. In point of fact, nearly every regenerate person can trace his religious life to the agency of some individual. Sometimes it is a mother's prayers; sometimes a father's counsel; sometimes the holy living of one of God's children. But even more frequently our religious experience can be traced to a word directly spoken by some one in whose Christian character we had confidence. An unsaved person may sit under the most faithful preaching for years, and remain unmoved, while the simple question, directly spoken, "Are you a Christian?" may do more to awaken his conscience than any number of sermons.—Rev. Geo. Whitman.

Nothing is of more importance, if we would rapidly grow good, than the habit of making all the petty trials, annoyances and griefs of every-day occurrence a means of uniting the will more fully with God's. This is the true mission of trials, and only as we use them to this high and are we using them aright. Alas! most people find it a very long and difficult lesson. Nevertheless, it can assuredly be learned. The trifling disappointments and sorrows, the crossings of our will or inclination which come so constantly, may yield, each of them, but a trifling gain; but the total sum shall be glorious indeed. Every time we utter down deep within a hearty "Amen!" to any of these minute manifestations of God's will, the union between us and God is made a little closer.—Selected.

The more ambitious one is to attain to high excellence in some noble sphere of labor, the more likely he is to be disappointed in his efforts. He sets out with an exalted ideal in his mind, bends every energy to reach it, and then, when he has completed his task, it seems so far below his ideal that he is both disappointed and discouraged. He is almost ashamed of his performance. He regards it as well-nigh a failure—indeed, he has failed to at least satisfy his aspirations. This, however, is a good sign. The man who is satisfied with the quality of his work will never make great progress.

Be not disturbed by infidelity. Religion can not pass away. The burning of a little straw may hide the stars, but the stars are there and will re-appear.—Thomas Carlyle.

Religion makes men useful. The man who is not a blessing to his neighbors in this world is probably not prepared for glory in the world to come.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. J. I. Hoffpauir, P. C., Boyce, La., Oct. 19: "Have just closed a good meeting at Boyce. Held sixteen days. Bro. J. J. Smylie was with us twelve days. Great good was done. No clap-trap. No questionable methods. Nothing but plain gospel preaching. Sinners were converted, backsliders reclaimed, and the church built up. Twelve accessions."

Rev. H. M. Benks, Centerville, La., Oct. 23: "We are moving very nicely. There is a new personage in process of construction, and will be ready for the next preacher. The personage will be at Jena, a very healthy locality, with the advantage of the Jena High School. We have had nineteen additions to the church, about thirty conversions and a number of reclamations. The further advantage of the Jena school is that pastors' children will be entered at half rate."

Rev. H. D. Howell: "The fourth Quarterly Conference for Hattiesburg has been held. The finances somewhat behind, but assurance given that all will be paid in due time. Bro. C. A. Powell, presiding elder, was in his place, and filled it well. In the pulpit he is a faithful and efficient exponent of the Bible doctrine, as believed and taught by the Methodist Church. In the chair he is at home, an able expounder of the law of our church, and favors a mild, but strict enforcement of the Discipline. I regard him as the right man in the right place. He has done a good work, and, I think, prevented much evil that would have resulted, but for his firm and steadfast adherence to law. I regard the condition of our church here as being much better than at any time during my three years' pastorate. We have had no spasmodic (so-called) revival; but a gradual, solid growth. If our people are only true to God and to themselves, Hattiesburg in the near future will rank among the best appointments in our Conference."

Rev. T. W. Boynton, P. C., Fort Jessup, La., Oct. 28: "I wrote a letter to the ADVOCATE just after Christmas, and stated that we were much in need of a Methodist Church at Jessup, and I thought if I could find a few men who had grit, grace and hard money, we would build a neat house for God, in which we could worship the Lord Christ. I found thirteen men who had the grit, grace and some money. We threw off our gloves, threw off our old Derby hat, rolled up our sleeves, went down to the bottom of our pocket-books, and the result of it is we have a beautiful $1,500 house completed and paid for. Our much-loved presiding elder, J. L. P. Sheppard, came and held our fourth Quarterly Conference on Saturday before the second Sunday in this month, and dedicated the church the next day (Sunday). We were in debt only one hundred dollars. This amount was called for, and the people readily responded to the amount of one hundred and twenty dollars. Then the Holy Ghost came upon the people, and, of course, we could but protract the meeting; and the result of it all, we had something over two hundred conversions and reclamations. Now, in conclusion, I want to thank Bros. J. L. P. Sheppard, J. M. Brown, J. B. Williams, S. S. Holliday for their noble work in the meeting. These brethren have endeared themselves to me, and I love them with all the ardor of my soul. Dear brethren of the Conference, do not fish for the Fort Jessup circuit, for I am praying for the Bishop to send me back."

Rev. W. T. Griffin, P. C., North Wesson, Oct. 30: "North Wesson circuit was formed at last Conference, and is composed of Beauregard, Mathews' Chapel, and North Wesson Churches. We have enjoyed a good year, spiritually. Have had revivals of power at each church, received a number into the church, and much good has been accomplished on various lines. We have just closed a revival meeting at our new North Wesson Church. This church was organized since Conference; has now sixty-four members, and will soon have completed as neat a church as any we have seen. We have been hard at work for some time, and got it so we could use it just in time to secure the services of Rev. C. H. Ellis, of New Iberia, La., who was assisting Bro. Hopper near here. He stayed twelve days, and preached faithfully to the edification of us all, and quite a number were converted and sanctified. The meeting increased in power and numbers, and the old-time shouts of victory arose often around the altar. A good number of workers came to our help. We labored under many disadvantages, but had victory. Bro. Ellis left us to help Bro. Crymes at Auguilla, Miss. Certainly no one can object to his teaching on the Wesleyan and scriptural doctrine of perfect holiness, to be lived and enjoyed 'all the days of our life.' The prayers and good wishes of the community will follow him wherever he goes. Rev. H. C. Morrison, of Louisville, Ky., commences a meeting at Wesson Church, Nov. 8. Mrs. Julie T. Chrisman presented the North Wesson Church with an organ, which was Miss Clara's, which is highly appreciated, especially as it was the property of one whose memory is so dear to the whole church."

Rev. M. D. Fly, Potts' Camp, Oct. 29: "I am now closing up my second year in this charge. Have had some fine meetings; considerable increase in all the interests of the church. Have built a good personage. Everything doing well. We have a great many Campbellites up here. They have been blowing all over this country that they had met T. W. Dye in a debate near Coldwater, and W. A. Crum had wiped him out of existence. I wrote to Dye to come up and vindicate himself at Hickory Flat, their grand Mecca. He came up on the fourth Sabbath in October. I introduced him, and stated that I had brought him there to lick Crum on his own dung-hill. I had apprised Crum of his coming eight days before. But Crum did not show his face. He went to the bush, or, at least, he hid himself. Dye made one of the most unanswerable arguments I ever heard by any man for two days, but did not get a taste of the Crum. After we had dismissed and started to the depot we heard that W. A. Crum was at the Campbellite Church. We went to the church and dared him in his own house to meet Dye. Crum said, 'If the pastor and presiding elder would endorse Dye, he would meet him.' We did it with a vim. He again backed out, unless all the Methodists would endorse him. They are the most whipped set I ever saw. We regard Campbellism as nothing but immersed infidelity, and so treat it. When any of you want the Campbellites licked send for T. W. Dye and stand by him; and I will underwrite for its being well done."

Rev. H. C. Murphy, P. C., Anacoco, La., Oct. 24: "I will write you a few lines, and give you a few dots concerning the Anacoco charge, on the Shreveport district. First I will say that the work is a very large one, bordering on the Sabine river, running eastward forty-five miles. So you see we have a great deal of riding to do. We have held three protracted meetings on the work, and have one more yet to hold, that being at Beech Grove, commencing next Friday, at which place and time we will hold our fourth Quarterly Conference. I can report success at our protracted meetings. The churches have been revived, and promise to do a better work in the future. Especially do we report a glorious meeting at Holly Grove. We were assisted by Rev. John Franklin, R. T. Wright, L. V. Hughes and D. S. Sandell, who did valuable work. This meeting resulted in the addition of thirteen to the church. The Lord was with us, and that to bless us. We have received in all during this year twenty additions to the church. I will say that the people are in favor with their preacher, and are looking after his interest, are as good to the preacher and his family as we could wish for. Some are good workers in the Lord's vineyard, while others are indifferent to his cause. Our presiding elder's health has been so that he has been prevented from being with us much this year. We are praying for his recovery. We all love him and very much appreciate his services. This is a poor circuit; but we believe the work will pay its assessment to the pastor in charge, and over. We have built one church on the work this year at a cost of about seven hundred dollars. Have five Sunday-schools on the work, two of which are using our own literature. I feel that the Lord has blessed my labor during this year. Praise the Lord; to him be all the glory! I will bring up subscriptions to the dear ADVOCATE at Conference."

METHODIST JUBILEE AT MACON, MISS.

Sunday, Oct. 27, will long be remembered as a red-letter day in the calendar of Methodism at Macon, Miss. The day was observed as the anniversary of sixty years of Methodism in Macon, and of fifty years' continuous service by Hon. H. W. Foote as superintendent of the Sunday-school.

The whole day was taken up by the special exercises, in a programme arranged by the laborious, versatile and successful pastor, Rev. J. A. Bowen. Four services were held during the day, consisting of varied exercises, of songs and prayers, and short addresses and papers read bearing upon the history of the church. Although it was quarterly meeting occasion, no sermon was preached. Communion was administered as usual, and was most remarkable for the large number of children and young people who bowed at the communion altar.

The church of the past came under review, from its organization in 1835 to the present, 1895, and from the present we were called to a hopeful outlook for the future. Touching tributes were made during the several services to the founders and early pioneers of Macon Methodism. Bro. H. W. Foote, the co-laborer of many of these early fathers and mothers of the church, was present at all the services save at night, at which time the weather was inclement. After a continuous service of superintendent of the Sunday-school, Judge H. W. Foote stands as a monument of Macon Methodism and of the providence and blessing of God, a type of progressive Methodism, wonderfully preserved, still superintendent, and still in the front rank of the advancing columns of the army of the Lord. Many and tender were the tributes paid to him, and the prayers for God's blessing upon him.

Women's work received appropriate and merited attention. The Woman's Missionary Society, by Mrs. H. W. Foote, and the Parsonage and Home Mission Society, by Mrs. Dr. Featherstun, were well represented. Mrs. Frank Skinner read an excellent paper in behalf of the local Aid Society. The Epworth League, senior and junior, had worthy representatives in Misses Fannie Jarnigan and Jessie Bass, and the "Missionary Jewels" by Miss Ada Sessions. Mrs. S. J. Ames paid fitting tribute to the godly women of the church. Dr. Minor spoke of the fathers in Israel and of the triumphant death of one or more of those gone before. Bro. C. B. Ames addressed the semi-centennial, faithful superintendent in commendatory remarks. J. W. Drake, Esq., in behalf of the Board of Stewards, recognized the successful work of their faithful pastor. Judge Foote gave a review of the general history of Macon Methodism. The connectional features of our church had due prominence during the exercises of the day. The choir, lead by their accomplished organist, Miss Fannie Minor, rendered excellent music, in hymns old and new.

The occasion, with its varied exercises, was an inspiration, a Methodist jubilee. May it prove to be an epoch from which shall date a career of new life and increasing prosperity in Macon Methodism. And when the contemplated improvements are complete, the enlarged Sunday-school room, the modernized front of the edifice, with its tall spire pointing heavenward, may the glory of the latter exceed the glory of the former house!

Bro. Bowen has the hearts of the young people, and, as a matter of course, carries with him the fathers and mothers of his church. Happy pastor! happy people! He may stay with them or episcopal lightning may knock him out after the ides of November.

A Chance to Make Money.

I cleared last month after paying all expenses $418 15 selling Dish Washers. They are just lovely to sell. Every family wants a Dish Washer, and it is easy to sell what everyone wants to buy. When people see the Dish Washer they wont be without one. You can wash and dry the family dishes in two minutes without wetting your hands. You can easily make from $9 to $13 per day. Anyone can get full particulars how to sell by addressing the Mound City Dish Washer Co., St. Louis, Mo. Try it and publish your success for the benefit of others.

We invite special attention to our new sewing machine offer. This machine is a most excellent one in every respect. We have never made a better premium offer. Let no one confound this machine with any one previously offered. It is a different machine altogether. Take notice that we prepay freight and guarantee entire satisfaction.

The Holman Bible for $1 65.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.65 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to Nov., '96. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two full years in advance, i. e., up to Nov., '97, can get this Bible at $1 35.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2.45 instead of $1.65. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2.45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We are now prepared to fill orders for Bibles (both kinds) promptly.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

Western Christian Advocate: "It is simply wonderful. No one can read the book without having his faith in prayer greatly strengthened."

Union Signal: "Its high religious tone, its fascinating spirit, and the high rank of its contributors, make it a strong faith tonic and an inspiration to prevailing prayer."

B. Fay Mills: "A wonderful book, an excellent book."

Cumberland Presbyterian: "It is indeed full of touching incidents calculated to quicken the faith of all who read it."

Pres. Franklin College, New Athens, O.: "This is one of the best and most interesting books we have ever seen."

Central Congregationalist: "Many of the incidents are exceedingly pathetic, and can scarcely fail to stir any tender heart to tears. It is a rich mine of illustrations for a preacher, and deserves to be in every minister's library, while no Christian heart can fail to be deeply interested and profoundly stimulated by it toward faith in God."

Methodist Recorder: "It is a well-bound book, full of incidents and illustrations for public speakers, and will encourage every reader to greater faith and more earnest prayer."

Christian Herald, edited by T. DeWitt Talmage: "Mr. S. B. Shaw has done a wise thing in making a compilation of Notable Answers to Prayer. Such incidents encourage the desponding Christian and are useful to Christian workers in leading their hearers to pray for themselves."

Christian Arbitrator: "Some of the incidents are very touching; we could only read them with tear-dimmed eyes."

The book contains 320 pages, and when open measures 8½ by 12¼ inches, and is beautifully bound in full cloth.

It is equally adapted to the learned and unlettered.

Young and old, saved and unsaved, all read it with delight. Leaders of the various Christian denominations commend it highly.

OUR OFFER.

We will send the work, postpaid, to any address on receipt of publisher's price—$1; to preachers, 75 cents. We will do better than this for our subscribers. Any subscriber who will pay his subscription up to January, '97, can have the work sent to him, postpaid, for 50 cents, provided he has not had the benefit of any previous premium offer. Those who have had the benefit of a previous offer should write us for terms. Better still: Any subscriber who will pay his own subscription up to January, '97, and send us one new subscriber at the regular rate—$2—will receive a copy of the work free. The Publishing Committee.

The Publishing Committee met on the thirtieth, all the members being present. The present incumbent was continued as publisher and editor. Dr. W. T. J. Sullivan was appointed to write up the official report, which will appear in our next issue. We enter upon the new year with a determination to make the paper more than ever a blessing to every household into which it enters.

An Anti-Lynching Law

Gov. Atkinson, of Georgia, has recommended to the Legislature the passage of a law designed to prevent lynching. The main features of the proposed statute are, first, the empowerment of the governor to remove from office any sheriff or similar officer who fails to protect a prisoner in his charge; second, making the county in which a lynching occurs pecuniarily responsible to the relatives of any prisoner who may be lynched. It is thought that favorable action will be taken on the governor's recommendation at once. If so, Gov. Atkinson will become famous as the pioneer in a much-needed reform.

A Financial Love-Feast.

One of the most noted outbursts of liberality in recent times occurred at the late meeting of the Wesleyan Conference in England. A debt of $150,000 on the Missionary Society was reported. It was resolved to wipe it out by one masterly effort. One session was devoted to "a financial love-feast." Enthusiasm reached a high pitch, and self-sacrifice found noble expression. Subscription followed subscription in rapid order until at the close of the service nearly $100,000 were promised. Ten thousand dollars of it came from one man and his family. Many of the smaller gifts were of a touching character. A missionary, whose friends had presented him with $100 for his own use, cheerfully laid the gift upon the Lord's altar. One layman, who had intended to take a trip to Rome, gave the $100 which he had laid apart for this purpose. If we could have "a financial love-feast" after this fashion in our city and town churches, it would not take long to raise our Million Dollar Memorial Fund, and lift the debts upon our Home and Foreign Mission Board.—Presbyterian.

A Shallow Criticism.

Not long since a prominent layman, in our presence, passed severe criticisms upon a certain preacher (his pastor) because of the fact that in his prayers he (the preacher) "always tells the Lord how good and how great He is, as if the Lord did not know that already;" and the persons present seemed to think he had made a good point. We said nothing, but thought a good deal. Our thoughts ran thus:

If God's omniscience is a reason why we should not offer unto him praise and thanksgiving, is it not equally a reason why prayer in all its forms is useless? Why should we pray for our daily bread, or any temporal blessing? Does not God know that we have need of these things? Is it possible for us to enlighten him in the smallest degree concerning our physical necessities? And the same principle is applicable in the spiritual realm. What need is there of confessing our sins to Almighty God? Has he not a far ampler knowledge of our sinfulness than we ourselves have? If we are penitent, God does not need to be informed of the fact. His all-seeing eye detects the first faint movement in the direction of sorrow for sin. And so of all our spiritual wants. There is not one of them concerning which God needs to be informed. So, if God's omniscience is a reason why we should not offer unto him praise and thanksgiving, it is equally a reason why we should not pray. Although God knows all our necessities, temporal and spiritual, better than we know them ourselves, yet he commands us to "pray without ceasing." In like manner, although he knows his own greatness and goodness, he is pleased when his children on earth and in heaven offer unto him praise and thanksgiving. Praise and adoration constitute a large part of the employments of the holy angels and of "the saints in light." "Holy, holy, holy, art thou, Lord God of hosts." "Great and marvelous are thy works, Lord God Almighty; just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints." These are samples of the kind of adoration offered unto God by angels and redeemed men.

That God is pleased when his children on earth imitate the example of the heavenly hosts above the Scriptures conclusively show. The Psalms are a repertory of the kind of verbal devotions in which God would have us engage. Those who have never thought upon the subject would be surprised to know how large a proportion of the Psalms consists of praise, thanksgiving and adoration—in other words, telling the Lord what he already knows about his own greatness, goodness, mercy, etc. A mighty stride in the right direction would be made if men generally were filled with the spirit of praise which permeates the psalmody of the ancient church. It is an egregious mistake to suppose that devotion consists solely in praying to God for something which we need. According to the Scriptures praise, thanksgiving and adoration are equally important, if not more so.

Measuring a Bishop by the Almanac.

The Western Christian Advocate, of last week, has an editorial advocating the retirement of Bishops at the age of seventy. We are opposed to such a policy. Some men are more vigorous at eighty than others are at fifty. The man who is physically or mentally incapacitated to discharge the duties of his position should be retired, whatever his age may be; but to superannuate a man who is thoroughly efficient simply because he has passed a given number of mile-posts along the way of life, it seems to us would be a criminal waste of resources, besides being objectionable on other grounds.

The Whisky Fight in New York.

Politics have recently assumed a new phase in the State of New York. A tremendous effort is being made to elect a Legislature that will repeal the Sunday law, or so modify it as to give each municipality the right to settle the question for itself by a direct vote of the people. This movement has been brought about by the recent enforcement of the law against the saloon keepers in New York City. The law has been on the statute books for years; but no attempt was made to repeal it until "the powers that be" began to enforce it. This is more than the saloon crowd can stand. The tocsin of war has been sounded. A banner has been hoisted with the talismanic words, "Personal Liberty," emblazoned upon it. "Puritanism," "Phariseeism," "Trying to make men righteous by law"—these and a host of similar cries rend the air. The State is agitated from center to circumference. The press, as far as possible, has been subsidized in the interest of the whisky ring. The heaven-born gifts of the orator are also brought into requisition. A spectator unacquainted with the facts might suppose that the Empire State is now the scene of a mighty conflict between relentless despotism, on the one hand, and angelic innocence on the other. But all this deceives nobody who knows anything of the wiles of the whisky-devil. It is one of his ancient tricks to "transform himself into an angel of light." He even poses as the champion of the gospel of Christ. The saloon keepers are exceedingly fearful lest ministerial robes should be soiled in the dirty pool of politics, and the church of God (oh, how they love it!) should thereby suffer damage. Demetrius and his fellow-craftsmen become exceedingly zealous for pure, unadulterated religion whenever their "craft is in danger." The nation will watch the result of the contest with deep interest.

John Street Anniversary.

Concerning the anniversary exercises held recently at the old John Street Church in New York, the Pittsburg Christian Advocate speaks as follows:

Three services were held, the writer officiating at the morning hour; Bishop Charles B. Galloway, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in the afternoon, and Rev. S. J. Herben, assistant editor of the New York Christian Advocate, in the evening. Of the first service it is not becoming to speak—in praise we could not, in criticism we would not.

Bishop Galloway's sermon in the afternoon was a most delightful and inspiring discourse. It was full of thought, and of the warmth and fire of the gospel. It instructed and lifted up all who heard it. More than this, the Bishop showed himself a model Christian gentleman, and a Methodist brother in all his associations with the brethren and in all the services in which he participated. The Bishop makes warm friends wherever he goes through the North, and he will always receive a cordial greeting when it shall please him to come among our people.

On Sunday evening the Rev. S. J. Herben preached a carefully prepared, thoughtful and helpful sermon.

Centenary and Millsaps.

Calls for money have recently appeared in our columns from Drs. Carter and Murrah in behalf of the institutions which they represent. We hope these calls will meet a prompt and hearty response. Both institutions need all that has been subscribed, and a great deal more. We know of no way in which a man can do more good with his money than by aiding these institutions in their noble work. Let all who have subscribed pay their subscriptions promptly. Those who have never given anything to this cause will find this a most opportune time for doing so.

The Virgin Wants Blood.

The town of Texacapa, Mexico, a few days since witnessed a scene that is worthy of the Spanish Inquisition in its palmiest days. Ten Protestants (natives) were dragged from their homes in the night and locked up in jail. The jail was then fired and the whole company perished in the flames. This was done by order of the town judge, who justified his conduct by saying that he had a vision in which he saw the Virgin of Guadalupe, who ordered him to burn these heretics. He also declares that a number of miracles were wrought in his presence in order to confirm the message which the saint had given him. During the burning almost the entire population of the town were gathered about the jail executing a grotesque dance in honor of the Virgin at whose command the horrid holocaust is supposed to have taken place. It has been only a few days since the papers gave an account of a visit by a large number of Roman Catholic dignitaries from this country to Mexico in honor of this same Virgin of Guadalupe. We wonder if these high American ecclesiastics approve this latest act of the holy, wonder-working Virgin. If their time is not all taken up in pleading for Sunday beer, they might give the public a little enlightenment on the subject.

A New Book.

AMERICA OR ROME, WHICH? By John T. Christian, A. M., D. D. Cloth. Illustrated, 280 pp. Price $1. Louisville, Ky.: The Baptist Book Concern.

This book is a patriotic plea for the continuation of American liberty, and the perpetuation of American institutions. The arraignment of Rome is fearful; but every statement is fortified by the highest Roman Catholic authority. He argues vigorously that Rome has made a murderous assault upon morals, seeks to overthrow our liberties, declares our marriage, in the language of the Pope himself, to be a "filthy concubinage," opposes the free circulation of the Bible in the vernacular of the people, and seeks to destroy our public schools. He claims that the Romish system has enslaved human thought, been the steadfast foe of letters and science, the persistent enemy of all enlightment, and in every way a traitor to the United States government.

The themes discussed are the burning issues of the day. Dr. Christian does not stop to discuss dead issues. If he refers to the history and decrees of the past, it is because they contain the living law of Rome and illustrates the polity of that system which professes never to change. The table of contents would convince one that the book is a live issue.

The mechanical work on this book is thoroughly well done. The paper is excellent, and the binding is attractive buckram in gilt and ink, adorned with the district school. There are a number of illustrations. The frontispiece is a half-tone engraving of the author, followed by full-page pictures of Lincoln, Gladstone, and the Capitol at Washington, besides a number of smaller engravings.

The book will be largely quoted, and can not fail to have a tremendous influence upon the public mind. It is timely, vigorous, full of information, and to the point. Roman Catholic authors in the future will have to reckon with this book.

The following is the table of contents: 1. Was Peter a Pope? 2. Rome and Morals. 3. Rome and Civil Liberty. 4. Rome and Religious Liberty. 5. Rome and Marriage. 6. Rome and the Bible. 7. Rome and the Public Schools. 8. Rome and the Freedom of the Press. 9. Rome and Secret Societies.

Whitworth College.

I have just returned from Brookhaven, where I had the privilege of preaching to Bro. Jones' congregation. It was to me a delightful service.

I also visited Whitworth College, and was delighted to observe the high moral and spiritual tone that was everywhere manifest. The sixty-one young lady boarders in the college (with perhaps very few exceptions) attended Sunday-school, church, and the Epworth League—all evidencing to me that they were there not only to have the intellectual culture, but the spiritual culture also.

President Chambers, assisted by such a noble, consecrated and spiritually-minded faculty as he has associated with him, is bound to succeed.

I can heartily recommend Whitworth College to all parents who desire their daughters educated in all that goes to make up well-developed Christian womanhood. The discipline is firm, but kind; the sanitary conditions are, perhaps, as good as can be found elsewhere, and expenses as low as anywhere with the same facilities.

NOTES.

Bishop Haygood has recovered from his recent attack.

"Texas Characters," by "Gulliver," alias Rev. J. W. Hill, has reached a third edition.

The new mission church at Baton Rouge was dedicated last Sunday by Bishop Keener.

Some of our exchanges state that Bishop Galloway's book of travels has been published.

Rev. W. B. Lewis and wife spent some days in the city last week, visiting relatives and friends.

"The Soldier" and the publishing house of L. L. Pickett have been removed from Columbia, S. C., to Louisville, Ky.

The Dryades Street meeting is still in progress. The attendance is good, and a number of persons have professed conversion.

Rev. J. T. Murrah is one of the best pastors the Methodist Church ever had here, and should be retained.—Durant (Miss.) News.

Bishop Vincent, of the M. E. Church, recently lectured at Nashville College for Young Ladies, and also at Vanderbilt University.

The Nashville Advocate states that the Tennessee Conference, at its recent session, received twenty preachers on trial, besides several transfers.

Rev. John Boring, of the Holston Conference, remains in the traveling connection, and continues in evangelistic work by episcopal appointment.

Last week Rockefeller made an additional donation of three millions of dollars to Chicago University. This makes a total of seven millions which he has given to that institution.

Rev. James B. Shockley, well known in the Kentucky Conference, has withdrawn from the church, his reason being that holiness people ought not to be connected with a human organization.—Central Methodist.

Dr. J. W. Hanner, of the Tennessee Conference, died a few days since, in his eighty-sixth year. In his prime he was one of the ablest preachers in Southern Methodism. For a few years past he had been on the superannuated list.

Rev. A. M. Hough, of Southern California Conference, has presented to the Conference property valued at $12,000, situated in Los Angeles. The income is to be applied to the Conference claimants' fund.—St. Louis Advocate.

The city of Texarkana voted the saloons out, and immediately the Cotton Belt railroad moved its machine shops from Pine Bluff to Texarkana. The company prefers to have its shops where there is no whisky sold.—Gospel Advocate.

The recent annual report of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad demonstrates the superiority of electricity over steam as a motor. It is probable that the next decade will witness the substitution of electricity for steam on many railroad lines.

Ex-President Harrison is said to have made $170,000 in fees since resuming his law practice.—St. Louis Advocate.

Dr. J. C. Morris, of the North Alabama Conference, has been transferred to the Tennessee Conference, and stationed at McKendree Church. Rev. R. K. Brown, the former pastor of McKendree, goes on the Nashville district. W. T. Haggard goes to Elm Street, and W. H. Cottou to West End. Dr. D. C. Kelley is appointed to Nashville City Mission. This appointment was made after the Conference adjourned, Dr. Kelley having been read out for Belle-buckle.

Rev. W. B. Nance, B. D., who was admitted on trial into the Tennessee Conference at its recent session, will go as a missionary to China soon. We doubt whether the church has ever sent a better equipped man to that difficult field. He is a graduate of Vanderbilt University in both the Literary and Biblical Departments, and a preacher of acknowledged gifts. Let abundant prayer be offered for his health and usefulness in the Orient.—Nashville Advocate.

On Sunday last Dr. Lyman Abbott, of the Outlook, N. Y., preached an admirable sermon at the First Presbyterian Church in this city. An immense audience was present to hear him. The day following he made an address to the theological students of Vanderbilt University, and also delivered a lecture before Ward's Seminary. A public reception was tendered him during the day. His visit left a very pleasant impression on the mind of the city.—Nashville Advocate.

Sometimes it is said that Moses could not write the Pentateuch, and if he could the Israelites of his time could not have read it nor understood it; but Professor Sayce, of Oxford, told the recent Church Congress at Norwich, England, that "the age of the Exodus was as literary as that of the Renaissance in Europe. Babylonian cities had libraries then, some of them six thousand years old, and when Abraham was born a Chaldee poet was ending a long period of verse by writing a poem in twelve books."—New York Advocate.

The St. Louis Advocate, of last week, contains a detailed account of the exposure of the fraudulent methods of a spiritualistic medium in that city. A boy who was in the employ of the medium, and whose business it was to appear upon the stage at the proper moment to personate in suitable costume any spirit called for, brought suit against the medium for non-payment of wages. The medium vanished from the city with the boy's wages in his pocket. He will, of course, appear soon in some other city, and fill his pockets with shekels.

It is pleasant to find that the governors of the Southwestern States are such plucky men. They know when their dignity, and that of their people, is insulted. Prize-fighters who have been driven out of the Eastern and Northern States by lofty moral sentiment, said to themselves: "We will go to Texas, or Arkansas, where the people are not so enlightened and civilized. There we will fight." Their going was a deep insult. We are glad that Texas and Arkansas, and their sister States, are spunky enough to resent the indignity.—Pittsburg Advocate.

In answer to your kind letter, I may say that since my joining the church, about thirty-eight years ago, I have always taken a family religious paper. I hardly know how a man could have a fair view of the church's missionary work without the religious paper. Even touching secular matters, the editor's summary is the best review I get of what I have learned from the dailies. The Christian papers have been uniformly high-toned and utterly free from degrading sensations, and all of them have been well edited. In my judgment a Christian family ought to have a good religious journal.—Major-General Oliver O. Howard, in St. Louis Advocate.

The world's record for railroad speed over a long distance was broken Oct. 24, by a special train on the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern railroad, which ran from Chicago to Buffalo, a distance of 510.1 miles, in 481 minutes and 7 seconds, an average speed of 63.60 miles an hour. Exclusive of stops, the run was made in 470 minutes 10 seconds, an average speed of 64.98 miles an hour. The train arrived in New York City at 10:15 P. M. The entire distance of 980 miles was made in seventeen hours forty-five minutes and twenty-three seconds. Chicago newspaper men on board had in their pockets morning newspapers of the same day. This was the first time that a regular edition of a Chicago morning paper had been read in New York the day of its publication.

Crystal Springs Miss.

The revival meetings recently held in the Methodist Church by Mrs. Mary McGee Snell are the most remarkable series of religious services known to the history of Crystal Springs. Remarkable because even to this day it is an innovation for a woman to occupy the pulpit; remarkable because of the vast audiences which assembled to hear her, and lastly because of the wonderful outpouring of God's blessing on the work of this gifted woman, whom he has called to spread his precious message of salvation.

Seldom has our quaint, old-fashioned meeting-house been taxed so greatly to accommodate the throngs which gathered for the evening services. Even the long unused gallery, with its worm-eaten pews of questionable comfort, was filled to overflowing, and many were unable to find seats at all. The morning and afternoon services were also well attended, merchants, farmers, clerks, and housekeepers finding time to gather at the house of God and listen to his Word. In the personality of Mrs. Snell there is a combination which peculiarly fits her for the work of winning souls to Christ. In addition to rare mental ability, she possesses a flow of brilliant eloquence, which finds expression in a voice sweet and clear as a silver bell, a perfect instrument which obeys her will as a deep-toned organ responds to the master-touch. From a broad field of observation and experience she has accumulated a rich store of striking illustrations, which often serve to point the moral of her sermon. Under the spell of some true, pathetic story many eyes, unused to tears, grow dim, many cold and callous hearts melt into a long-lost tenderness. But greater than the spell of mind or magnetic manner is the rare spirituality, acquired by a daily walk with God, and, more than all else, it is his presence with her which crowns her work with wonderful results.

During her ministry among us many who had not experienced religious impressions for years were moved to forsake the error of their way. Conviction and repentance swept over her audiences like tidal waves, and hundreds eagerly responded to her earnest exhortations. Old wounds were healed, old feuds forgiven and forgotten, and love and peace and harmony blossomed like the rose. Great numbers from the other churches attended regularly, contributed generously of their means for the financial support of the meeting, and testified by word and deed to showers of blessings.

Not only does the church, but the entire community owe a debt of gratitude to our beloved pastor, Bro. Burton, for being the means of bringing Mrs. Snell into our midst. She has been an instrument in God's hand to do a great work among us. May he long continue to use her brilliant intellect, the persuasiveness of her voice, the sweetness of her womanliness, the spirituality of her consecrated life, for the glorious work of saving souls.

Surely in the light of her life and work the shackles of a time-worn prejudice should vanish like icicles before the morning sun. Surely the day is not far distant when there will be none to whom the old, old story of a Savior's love will sound less sweet and sacred because it comes from the lips of consecrated womanhood.

The Bequests of the Late Rev. Geo. T. Vickers.

From Bro. Abney, the executor of the last will and testament of the late Rev. Geo. T. Vickers, and through the hands of Clay Elliot, Esq., the attorney for the executor, the Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has received $490, and the trustees of the Conference Endowment Fund of the Mississippi Annual Conference have also received $490 for the benefit of the Conference claimants. This sum will be invested safely by the trustees, and it is proposed to name it the Vickers Fund in memory of him who was so long an honored member of the Mississippi Conference.

NOTICE.

Preachers and others who know what special books they will want to procure at Conference will please notify me in due time, so that I can surely have them on hand. The undergraduates will please inform me which books of the course of study they will want. It is a coincidence that we meet this year at Water Valley, where our first session was held twenty-five years ago. Therefore we think it proper to hold during the session a suitable quarter-centennial anniversary service with a sermon and other appropriate exercises. What say the remaining twenty-eight of the original one hundred and twenty-nine members? May we all be present and have a glorious reunion!

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. ARENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

THE OPENING OF THE CHURCH TO THE GENTILES.

(Acts x, 1-48.)

1. The divinely instituted theocracy of Israel had degenerated into sterile ecclesiasticism and nativistic exclusiveness.

(1) Deemed that mere descent from Abraham rendered them acceptable to God.

(2) Looked upon and called all men, not Jews, "dogs." Contact with them was considered defilement.

(3) Strained at gnats. Punctilious about trifling matters. Even charged the Master with transgression.

2. God wrought two miracles in order to break down this pernicious barrier. He designs that language, nationality and geographical lines should not render common brotherhood impossible.

(1) An angel visited Cornelius, instructing him as to what course to pursue.

(2) Presented to sleeping Peter the significant vision of a huge sheet, containing all manner of animals, clean and unclean.

(3) While determining the possible meaning of this vision, the messengers of Cornelius were calling for the bewildered apostle.

3. The conversion of Cornelius indicates how good a person can be without being a Christian.

(1) He was a devout man. Pious.

(2) He feared God. Would not do aught contrary to his will, so far as he knew it.

(3) "With all his house." Wife, children and servants took pleasure in conforming to his wishes.

(4) He fasted. Though not specially enjoined in the New Testament, our duty of fasting can not be denied.

(5) Was liberal. Gave alms. Was the poor man's friend. The hungry never left his door unfed.

(6) Prayed to God always. But "Abba, Father," he could not say. —

4. While Peter preached, Cornelius and associates were converted. "The Holy Ghost fell on them which heard the Word." Anything less than being filled with the Holy Spirit is not conversion. Conversion is the ignition of the perpetual light on the altar of the heart. Hereafter the heart is a temple of God, for permanent occupancy of the Holy One.

"Sing Unto the Lord a New Song."

The president of the League does not imitate the ugly habit of some preachers in not participating in song-service.

Leaguers became disgusted when the preacher in the pulpit, standing up, selects his scriptural lessons, while the people worship God in song.

In music there has been marvelous progress. As a rule, the young excel the aged.

Strange that people devoid of the knowledge of music should feel called upon to lead the song-service.

Many of the new songs are a travesty of sacred hymnology. A pretty air can not amend faulty sentiment and grammar.

Old songs lose their force when unsuitable for the occasion. Some leaders of religious meetings, all the year, use not more than twenty hymns.

Heard of a visiting preacher who, on a revival occasion, gave out as his first hymn a popular funeral song, where the corpse is represented as speaking:

"Come, mortal man, and look at me;
What I now am thou soon shalt be," etc.

Peculiar, but True.

Standing is not comfortable or healthy for ladies, and yet many are compelled to stand for hours at a time. It brings on Uterine Ailment. CREOLE FEMALE TONIC is a splendid remedy for that large class of diseases peculiar to ladies.

Louisiana Conference.

NOTICE.

As the chairman of the committee to provide homes for such members of the Louisiana Conference en route to Conference at Jackson, La., I would state for the information of the preachers, that the superintendent of Yazoo and Mississippi Valley road will order the trains to stop at Macmanus on the nights of Monday and Tuesday, Dec. 9 and 10.

With this arrangement there is no necessity to spend the night in New Orleans. But all preachers can leave on the 4 o'clock P. M. train. Thus, as Othello, the committee's "occupation is gone."

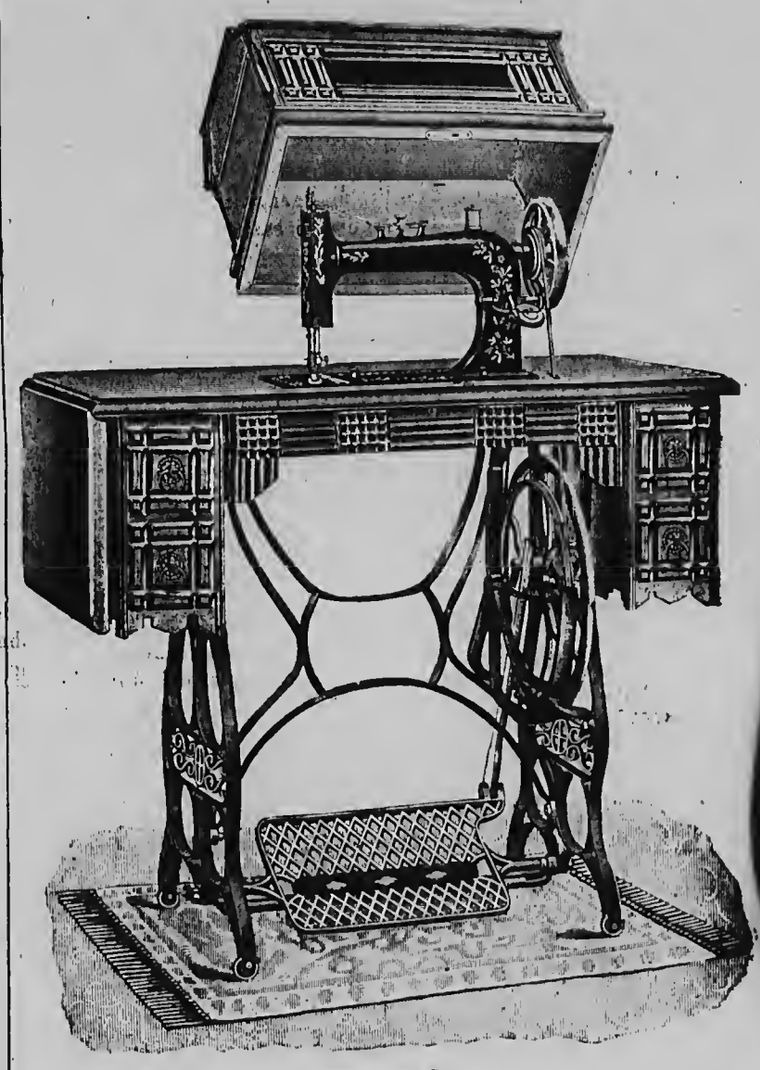
Our Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



"ARLINGTON B."

The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take up, convenient foot rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one font hemmer, one screw driver one wrench one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned, and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clear.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearings polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—The "ARLINGTON B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

OUR OFFER.

To anyone, not now a subscriber to this paper, who will send us $20.50, we will send the machine and the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE one year. To old subscribers we make the following offer: Pay your subscription to January, '97, and send us $18.50 additional, and we will send you the machine.

HOME CIRCLE.

HOME.

Home is not merely roof and room—
It needs something to endear it.
Home is where the heart can bloom,
Where there's some kind lip to cheer it!
What is home with none to meet,
None to welcome, none to greet us?
Home is sweet, and only sweet,
Where there's one who loves to meet us!

Children's Table Manners.

In society one hears sad reports of nursery meals, where the children are allowed to dispute and quarrel, to be careless in their behavior and manners; but wise, good mothers in society or out, in city or town, alike understand that the genuine courtesies of home life are taught their children by the refinements and politeness of their mothers and fathers.

The wife of Ex-Secretary Whitney used, if possible, to take the midday meal with her children. She always said: "I myself must teach them the little elegancies and courtesies of the table, for not millions of money nor the finest book education in the world can give children true, good table manners." It is a rule with many families that when dining alone the children shall hear and discuss the news of the day, what has gone on in the House or Senate, chat of their school and companions. They learn ease and correctness of speech. When the air of the home is refinement, gentleness, unselfishness and love, etiquette is the daily food. When people come and go hospitably to and from the house, each seeking the other's best good, children are unaffected, polite and earnest.

Mrs. Hayes, when in the White House, was asked by a member of the Cabinet how she taught her children to be so polite and charming at table, especially with so many guests. With her bright, beautiful smile she replied: "We simply try to be courteous to one another. For all favors we thank one another. We say, 'If you please.' If a mistake has been made, we insist upon the full, free, 'I beg your pardon.'"

Nothing is more ill-bred, nothing more unhappy at the family table than the fretting and fault finding of some boys and girls.

It is polite for the little men of the family as they go into meals to stand beside their chairs until the mother and sisters are seated; to ask to be excused if they leave the table; to eat slowly; to take small mouthfuls and sit straight; not put their elbows on the table, and observe the common courtesies of home life which we have been "taught from our youth up."—Exchange.

A Lady Born.

True politeness does not consist of the artificial airs of the drawing-room, in what is sometimes called "company manners," that continue so long as there are persons present to look on whose good opinion is desired, and relapse into barbarism as soon as the company has gone. It is the inborn impulse of a higher and nobler nature. Here is an apt illustration:

An aged truckman bent under the weight of a big roll of carpet. His bale-hook fell from his hand and bounded into the gutter out of reach. Twenty idle clerks and salesmen saw the old man's predicament, and smiled at his look of bewilderment. No one ventured to help him. A fashionably dressed young woman came along, took in the situation at a glance, and without looking to the right or left stepped into the gutter, picked up the hook in her dainty, gloved fingers, and handed it to the man with a smile. The idlers looked at each other and at the fair young woman.

The old truckman, in a violent effort to express his thanks politely, lost his hat. It rolled into the gutter where the hook had been. This was almost too much for any woman, young or past young; but this New York girl was equal to the occasion. Into the gutter she tripped again and got the soiled hat. When she handed it to the truckman a happy smile was seen to play about her lips. "God bless ye, miss," the old man said, as the fair maiden turned her back on the idlers and went on her way. What an example of true politeness!

Be Careful What You Read

There is a great need that people, young and old, should carefully select beforehand what they shall read. There are several good reasons why everyone should do this. Nobody can read a tithe of the books published. Everyone must leave a great many books unread. There are a great many worthless and bad books. It is a serious mistake to leave instructive and inspiring books unread, while spending time on books that are neither one nor the other. The matter that you read in books, magazines and papers will largely influence your character as well as your opinions. It will generally be admitted that men's political opinions are mainly formed by the newspapers they read. This is just as true of other subjects. But the influence of reading upon character is not so generally acknowledged. Yet it is true, that as the opinions of the head are largely received from the facts and arguments presented in what is read, so the heart and moral nature assimilate the character of the tone and spirit of what we read. The perusal of what is pure and elevating refines and inspires; the perusal of what is coarse and low tends to make the reader coarse and low. Don't let your reading be determined by what happens to come in your way, or what happens to have a current popularity.—Christian Guardian.

A Prayer for Husband and Wife.

Among the manuscripts of William Cullen Bryant the following prayer was found, in his own handwriting. It was written by him just after his marriage:

"May God Almighty mercifully take care of our happiness here and hereafter. May we ever continue constant to each other and mindful of our mutual promise of attachment and truth. In due time, if it be the will of Providence, may we become more nearly connected with each other, and together may we lead a long, happy and innocent life without any diminution of affection until we die. May there never be any jealously, distrust, coldness or dissatisfaction between us, nor occasion of any—nothing but kindness, forbearance, mutual confidence and attention to each other's happiness. And that we may be less unworthy of so great a blessing, may we be assisted to cultivate all the benign and charitable affections and offices not only toward each other, but toward our neighbors, the human race, and all the creatures of God. And in all things wherein we have done ill may we properly repent of our error, and may God forgive us and dispose us to do better. When at last we are called to render back the life we have received, may our death be peaceful and may God take us to his bosom. All which may he grant for the sake of the Messiah."

Be More Gentle.

A well-known member of the House of Commons, who died a few years ago, said towards the close of his life, that if he were called again to go over former lines of thought he would bear himself more gently and in a more modest, kindly and charitable spirit than he once did. How often we hear of something similar to this being uttered by people as they draw near to the bound of life. Young men often think they must be very stern and strenuous, very hard and heroic, and must brand evils unflinchingly, no matter who is hurt in the process. They have much self-confidence, and are very sure that whatever does not commend itself to their judgment or taste is an evil which should be summarily put down. So they impinge with violence against a great many people, and create much unnecessary bad feeling. But when they are older grown, and understand human nature better, they begin slowly to realize what blunders they have made. They see it would have been better not to have pushed with such fierceness or condemned with such severity. We rarely feel that we have been too gentle and modest, too charitable and kindly.—Zion's Herald.

Pray While the Sun Shines.

A little girl who suffered greatly during thunderstorms was told by her mother to pray when she felt alarmed.

One day at the close of a fearful little storm, she came to her mother with the information that praying during the danger brought her no relief.

"Then," said her mother, "try praying when the sun shines, and see if that will take away the fear."

The child did so, and when another storm was raging, she said sweetly: "Praying while the sun shines is the best way, for I am not the least bit afraid now."

What a lesson we who are older might learn from this incident! How often do we stay away from our Master until the storms of life drive us to him for shelter and protection!

If we would only give our best, our brightest days to his service, we would have no cause to tremble when the dark hours come on. How very much we miss by not having Jesus to go with us through all our earthly pilgrimage!—Lutheran Observer.

A Merited Rebuke.

The New York Christian Advocate tells of a Christian Chinaman who faithfully served a family that professed religion. His mistress gave a "progressive euchre" party and had wines on the table. John was called upon to serve the party and did so with great acceptability. The next morning, however, he waited on the lady and said he wished to quit work. Astonished, she asked the reason. John answered: "I Christian man! Tole you so before; no heathen! No workee for Melican heathen." He insisted on leaving, and sought a place where Jesus was not thus stabbed in the house of his professed friends.

The American workingman does not yet know it, but it is nevertheless a fact that his most deadly enemy is the saloon. It gives in exchange for his money that which is not bread. It robs his brain of its cunning, his arm of its strength, his body of its vigor, his family of its happiness. It causes his employer to distruct him. It often leads him into unwise and uncalled for revolts and strikes. If he will but open his eyes to the facts in the case, and see how the rum-seller is adding farm after farm and city block after city block to his possessions, and how the poor man gets poorer and poorer, it may be that he will throw the influence of his organization on the side of temperance, aiding his fellow citizens to take away from the infamous liquor business the legal sanction it now enjoys.—Central Christian Advocate.

Regularity in Eating.

"The stomach requires rest." Do you know that, or is it a mere tradition? Considered as a fine piece of mechanism—like your watch, for example—is it not rather for the good of the machine that it be wound up regularly and kept running? What is your watchmaker's advice concerning the time-keeper in your pocket? That the other course will put it out of order, without doubt. But, indeed, the interval between a ten or eleven o'clock lunch and a seven or eight o'clock breakfast is considerably longer than intervenes between either two of the regular daily meals. It is not pretended that a person needs as strong and as much food to sleep by as to work by, but only that the brain shall not be kept awake by the bitter cry—unintelligible, perhaps—of a famished stomach, the grind of organs having nothing but the system to act upon.

After maturity one does not experience the pangs of appetite common to growing youth. The demon of inanition makes its presence known through torment of nerves, lassitude, and despondency or despair. The world is in want of the best achievements of best conditions. As said the apostle to the Gentiles, "For this cause many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep"—their last sleep—who seldom knew the full benefits of nature's sweet restorer. Whether over books printed are books to print, or blank books of accounts, no child, woman or man can long evade the law of demand and supply. Students and brain workers in general must eat to sleep; must sleep to preserve their faculties in tone. The best physicians are treating dyspepsia on the principle of food before medicine. The handwriting on the wall of many a bed-chamber, where some man or woman keeps unwilling vigils, points to beefsteak that should be weighed in the balance, but is found wanting.

The Medicinal Value of Water.

The human body is constantly undergoing tissue change. Worn-out particles are cast aside and eliminated from the system, while the new are ever being formed from the inception of life to its close.

Water has the power of increasing these tissue changes, which multiply the waste products, but at the same time they are renewed by its agency, giving rise to increased appetite, which in turn provides fresh nutriment. Persons but little accustomed to drinking water are liable to have the waste products formed faster than they are removed. Any obstruction to the free working of natural laws at once produces disease, which, if once firmly seated, requires both time and money to cure.

People accustomed to rise in the morning weak and languid will find the cause in the imperfect secretion of wastes, which many times may be remedied by drinking a full tumbler of water before retiring. This very materially assists in the process during the night and leaves the tissues fresh and strong, ready for the active work of the day.

Hot water is one of our best remedial agents.

A hot bath on going to bed, even in the hot nights of Summer, is a better retriever of insomnia than many drugs.

Inflamed parts will subside under the continual poulticing of hot water.

Very hot water, as we all know, is a prompt checker of bleeding, and besides, if it is clean, as it should be, it aids in sterilizing wounds.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

TOMATO SOUP.—Put in a stew pan one quart can of tomatoes and one pint of cold water. In a frying pan put one tablespoonful of butter, and when warm add one large onion cut fine. When the onion is colored stir into the butter one tablespoonful of flour and add all to the tomatoes. Season with one tablespoonful of sugar, one teaspoonful of salt, and one saltspoonful of pepper. Put the stew pan on the fire and let the contents boil slowly for twenty minutes. Color with a little burned sugar, strain through a fine sieve, and serve with bread cut into dice and fried a crisp brown.—Selected.

OBITUARIES.

PATTERSON—Miss RUTH PATTERSON, daughter of Rev. J. F. Patterson, of the Louisiana Conference, died, after a short illness, in Purcell, Ind. Ter., Sept. 28, 1895. She was born in Downsville, Union parish, La., March 1 1875. She joined the Methodist Church, South, at ten years of age, and lived a faithful consistent member thereof until her death. She graduated with honor and distinction at Mansfield Female College, June 12, 1895.

Having secured a position to teach at Purcell, Ind. Ter., she left home with buoyant hopes and a laudable desire to accomplish this object and to achieve for herself a worthy place as a teacher, for which she was eminently qualified.

A few days before she left home, in Montgomery, La., for her distant field of usefulness, she attended, with great interest, a protracted meeting held by her father, and renewed at the altar more fully her consecration to the Lord's service. At the close of the meeting she said to a friend: "I want you to pledge with me that we will live henceforth Christian lives, for I was so happy to-day." She kept this pledge faithfully to her death; and the few remaining weeks of her life were marked by a gentleness of manner, sweetness of spirit and devotion to the Savior that won all hearts, and especially those of her pupils, by whom her death was so greatly lamented.

As a student at Mansfield Female College, she won distinction and honor as a faithful pupil, and observant of her duties. She was ambitious to excel, and manifested marked ability in solving difficult problems. Devoted to art, she attained efficiency in delineating creations of beauty, displaying the artistic talent of her genius; and touches of her pencil now are valued as beyond price. Amiable and gentle in disposition, a spirit of kindness pervaded her intercourse with her fellow-students, and her generous nature was full of charity and sympathy for others.

As a daughter, she was true and obedient to her parents, and evidently devoted to all the members of her family. Always bright, cheerful and happy, scattering the sunshine of a genial nature wherever she went, she won the good will of all who knew her. The idol of the family circle, the delightful companion among friends and fellow-students, the faithful teacher fondly beloved by her pupils but, above all, the true follower of the Master, to whom her young heart was bound in strongest consecration and devotion, how her early death is lamented and mourned by her many friends! In the most interesting period of her career, when she was just beginning her life-work, in all the charms of young womanhood, she stepped from the very threshold of youth into the bright realm of immortal youth, to be forever with her Lord. Beautiful in life, lovely in death, she faded as a flower in the garden below to bloom again with greater beauty in the garden above. Her short life was not lived in vain, for it teaches the most impressive lesson of how a girl can be trained to love and serve the Lord and die in the faith. Seventeen years on earth to love and honor the Savior; all eternity to glorify him above. A. D. M.

SWAYZE—ELVIRA R. SWAYZE was born near Natchez, Adams county, Miss., May 3, 1819 and died in Benton, Yazoo county, Oct. 6, 1895. She was a daughter of Nathan Luse, and the last one of nine children to pass away. In 1836 she moved with her parents to Yazoo county, where she spent the principal part of her useful life. She became a member of the Methodist Church about the year 1845, and lived a consistent life ever afterwards. She was first married to Charles Whitten, who died young, leaving her with one child. In 1854 she was married to Richard Swayze, who died only a short time since. She was truly devoted to her husband and six children. She proved a faithful stepmother. Her stepchildren and grandchildren are grieving as much almost as her own daughter.

Many of our preachers remember the pleasant home of Richard Swayze, where they often found shelter and rest.

Sister Swayze was a pure, good woman—meek, gentle, thoughtful and kind, especially to the poor and afflicted. Her Bible was her constant companion. She loved it much. I was her pastor three years. It was seldom, if ever, I was suffered to leave their home without praying with the family.

She was a great sufferer during her last illness. Her end was peace. May God bless and take care of the bereaved ones, and guide them safely to the glory land!

BURNEY—Miss LULA BURNEY died at Dr. Maynard's, Oct. 18. She was a sister of Miss Fannie Burney, one of our teachers of the Ithaca public school. Since April last she has been on a visit from Mississippi, her native State. Her aged parents still live in Holmes county, Miss., and will have the sadness of meeting the silent remains of their deceased daughter, for she was carried back to her native State for interment.

For two weeks she suffered greatly, but very patiently. She was in the home of one of our very best physicians, and surrounded by anxious, sympathizing friends, so that all was done that was possible for her recovery; but all in vain.

For ten or twelve years Miss Lula had been a member of the M. E. Church, South. She was possessed of a quiet, meek spirit. This being her adorning, it was "of great price in the sight of God." She desired to live, but was not afraid to die; so those of her friends who are in Christ sorrow not as those who have no hope.

The patient, grief-stricken sister has the sincere sympathy of many friends in Ithaca.

MILBURN—Departed this life Tuesday morning, at 7:30, Mrs. M. A. MILBURN (nee Ferguson). Born in Tennessee, Feb. 23, 1809; a resident of Louisiana for the past eighty-two years, and a member of the Methodist Church for over seventy years.

She lived a quiet, unpretentious Christian life, and when the ordeal of death came it had no sting. In her last hours she was unconscious; we needed no words of assurance as to her future hopes; and now I know she wears the "crown of righteousness."

She was left a widow at the age of forty, and reared to maturity five children, four of whom, with fifteen grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren, are left to mourn her loss.

Darling mother, thou has left us;
Here thy loss we deeply feel;
But 'tis God that has bereft us;
He can all our sorrows heal.

Yet again we hope to meet thee
When the day of life is fled;
There in heav'n we hope to meet thee,
Where no farewell tears are shed.

DAUGHTER.

GRINSTEAD—MARIAN ANN GRINSTEAD was born in Halifax county, N. C., April 2, 1821. She moved to Lawrence county, Miss., November, 1832, and from thence she moved to Texas, March 23, 1873, where she lived the remainder of her days on earth. At the home of her daughter, in Houston, Nov. 15, 1894, she answered the summons, "Come up higher."

She was married Aug. 11, 1846, to Pleasant H. Grinstead. Five children were born into the home. To them she was a devoted, faithful, true mother. She set them a good example, left them a good name, and when she departed she assured them she would enjoy a blessed immortality, and urged them to live Christians.

She united with the Methodist Church, September, 1863, and ever walked in the footsteps of Jesus, her path growing brighter and brighter unto the perfect day. Her trust in God never wavered. Through a long spell of sickness she suffered patiently. Knowing her end was near, she wanted to go, realizing she would enter the rest that remains for the people of God. CHAS. A. HOOPER.

YOUNG—On Sept. 16, 1895, the dark angel of death visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Young, of Lawrence, Miss., and ere he spread his wings for flight snatched from the fold their third son, BONNY, the fairest flower, the brightest ornament.

The family circle is broken, the merry laughter around the fireside is hushed, the elastic step is heard in the hall no longer.

In the death of this pure and precious child the Methodist Sunday-school at Lawrence loses one of its brightest members; and while we know, dear Bonny, that thou art oblivious to the "roll call" here, we have the happy assurance that thy sweet voice will respond to the "roll call" in the bright beyond. He was but nine years and three months old, yet he possessed a mind and intellect of one of riper years.

'Tis hard for papa, mama and grandma to bear this dispensation of God's providence without murmuring, but they know that their sweet little boy now knoweth the "Resurrection and the Life;" he is now with his Savior; there they have the happy privilege of finding him. ALICE LOGAN.

Lawrence, Miss.

WILKINSON—Mrs. LEE J. WILKINSON was born near Gensville, La.; joined the M. E. Church, South, at the age of seventeen years, and lived a consistent member of the same until the day of her death, which was Aug. 28, 1895, at Gensville, La.

In the year 1863 she was married to Rev. James Neely, of the —— Texas Conference. In the year 1870 her husband died, and in the year 1874 she was married to Dr. T. A. Wilkinson, of Crockett, Texas; the next year returned to Louisiana, where she spent the remainder of her life.

Sister Wilkinson was a model Christian. Though a great sufferer, she was ever cheerful and resigned; a woman of strong faith. Her doors and heart were ever open to the reception of her preacher, and she was ever ready to do what she could for the cause of the Master. May her three children and grandchild follow her good example, and meet her on the "other shore!"

WILKINSON—Mrs. EVIE RAKE WILKINSON, the daughter of T. D. and M. L. Reed, was born in Meridian, March 5, 1874, and died Sept. 12, 1895.

Weep not for the days that will come no more,
For the sunbeam flown from hearth and door,
For a missing step, for a nameless grace
Of a tender voice and a loving face.

But not for the soul whose goal is won,
Whose infinite joy is just begun,
Not for the spirit enrobed in light
And crowned where the angels are crowned to-night.

the food for all such.

How many pale folk there are! People who have the will, but no power to bring out their vitality; people who swing like a pendulum between strength and weakness—so that one day's work causes six days' sickness! People who have no life for resisting disease—thin people, nerveless, delicate!

The food for all such men, women, or children is SCOTT'S EMULSION. The hypophosphites combined with the oil will tone up the system, give the blood new life, improve the appetite and help digestion. The sign of new life will be a fattening and reddening, which brings with it strength, comfort and good-nature.

Be sure you get Scott's Emulsion when you want it and not a cheap substitute.

Meeting of the Preachers' Institute.

The Preacher's Institute of the Jackson district met at Madison Station, Miss., Oct. 22, 1895, at 7:30 P. M. In the absence of Dr. T. S. West, who was appointed by the committee to preach at this hour, the writer preached a short sermon on the Temptation of Christ.

The meeting was called to order next morning by Rev. E. H. Mounger, D. D., at 9 A. M. After devotional services a paper was read by E. H. Monnger on Preparation for the Pulpit, which, by the unanimous vote of the brethren, he was requested to send to the New Orleans Advocate for publication.

At 11 A. M. we had a sermon from Rev. D. C. Langford on the subject of Faith, which was enjoyed by all and pronounced by the presiding elder as sound, scriptural and orthodox.

During the afternoon session we had a paper prepared by Dr. H. W. Featherstun, and read by the secretary, on the Pastor and the Epworth League; also a paper by R. A. Breland on the Pastor and the Church Register. After general discussion of these subjects, with several others on which no paper was prepared, the institute adjourned for preaching at 7:30 by J. G. Cammack, who gave us a good sermon, after which it was announced that the institute had adjourned till next meeting, which will be some time next Spring, either April or May.

R. A. Breland, H. Walter Featherstun and J. A. B. Jones were appointed to select place, appoint time and prepare program for the next meeting.

The only thing that prevented our meeting from being a success in every respect was the non-attendance of many of the preachers. Brethren beloved, let us all come together at our Spring meeting, and make our Institute a grand and glorious success.

R. A. Breland, Sec.

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

Springs 1 and 2.—For Bright's Disease of the Kidneys, Uric Acid Diathesis, Gout, Rheumatism, Nervous Prostration, &c.

Dr. William A. Hammond, of Washington, D. C., Surgeon-General U. S. Army (retired), Professor of Diseases of the Mind and Nervous System in the University of New York, etc., referring to Spring No. 2:

"I have for some time made use of Buffalo Lithia Water in cases of affections of the Nervous System, complicated with Bright's Disease of the Kidneys or with a Gouty Diathesis. The results have been eminently satisfactory. Lithia has for many years been a favorite with me in like cases, but the Buffalo Water certainly acts better than any extemporaneous solution of the Lithia Salts, and is, moreover, better borne by the stomach."

Dr. John H. Tucker, of Henderson, N. C., President of the Medical Society of North Carolina, Member of the American Medical Association, referring to Spring No. 1, says:

"I have obtained excellent results from Buffalo Lithia Water in Gout, Rheumatism, and other affections dependent upon a Uric Acid Diathesis, especially for pale, feeble, and anæmic subjects—indeed for patients of this class, my experience teaches, that the Water of Spring No. 1 is more efficient than that of No. 2, and for such conditions I have no hesitancy in saying that it is a remedy of great potency."

Wm. O. Baskerville, M. D., Oxford, N. C., referring to Spring No. 1, writes:

"Buffalo Lithia Water Spring No. 1, is a powerful tonic to the Nervous System as well as to the blood. I have known it to produce magical effects in Nervous Prostration, resulting from overwork, prolonged mental strain, etc., and convalescents from adynamic diseases have been restored to health in a surprisingly short time, the water being a direct blood producer, a valuable heart tonic and a physiological diuretic."

This Water is for sale by druggists generally, or in cases of one dozen half-gallon bottles $5.00 f.o.b. at the Springs. Descriptive pamphlets sent to any address.

CLEAN HANDS.

BY T. M. GRIFFITH, D. D.

Free from all stain the hands must be
The palms of paradise to hold;
And clean the hands outreached to grasp
Celestial crowns of fadeless gold.

Spotless and pure the hands of those
To whom the royal right is given
To strike with joy the harps of fire,
And wake the harmonies of heaven.

What changes pass on human hands
In boundaries of eternity!
Hands withered at the touch of age
Youthful and fair begin to be.

Hands rough and hard with earthly toil
Appear as white robes pure and bright;
Hands once so fair and soft and smooth
Seem foul with sin and black as night.

Father of spirits, grant Thy grace,
In answer to my pleading cry,
That I, transformed and saved, may lift
White hands in heaven by and by!

Correspondence.

Letter from Paris.

After a day and night's continuous travel from Milan, we arrived in Paris last Monday. Gay, charming Paris! the loveliest and wickedest city on earth. There is an irresistible fascination in the sans souci of these impulsive, happy-hearted human beings. There is joy and lightness in the very air, that takes hold of one unconsciously. But when we think of the immorality and atheism under it all, we are conscious of a pain and a pathos unspeakable. If there is a place in the world against which all the artillery of Christianity should be levelled, that place is Paris. Now there are only feeble rush-lights in the midnight darkness. One hundred and fifty McCall Missions are scattered over France; there are thirty in Paris. Last night, after walking down the brilliantly-lighted boulevards with a party of friends, we strolled into one of these quiet little rooms. On the wall opposite us was written, in French, "I am the Resurrection and the Life." The minister who conducted the evening service read passages from the Bible and announced the hymns, all of which we had difficulty in understanding. When we had almost decided in despair to retire, the organ pealed forth the familiar strain, "Whosoever Will May Come," and we lifted our American voices in praise, with their sweet French tones. Finally, we joined in singing together that sweet old consecration hymn, "I am thine, O Lord," and left with thanksgiving to God that there was a work, however small, in this great city, into which those who love Him and serve Him could go apart for awhile and rest.

Since our arrival we have visited the tomb of Napoleon, which is the most magnificent in all Europe. We have ascended the Eiffel tower and viewed the situation from afar; we have gone down the Seine, studied the Pantheon, the Louvre, La Madeleine, and have spent a whole day in a trip to Versailles and St. Cloud. After the glories in painting, sculpture and architecture that we saw in Italy, the efforts of the French in that line fall upon one rather coldly. It is only the people here who are particularly interesting, and the history of those who have gone before, bathing themselves in an ocean of blood as they went. The Pantheon was particularly disappointing. It is a rather small building and very bare. In the vaults are the tombs of Rousseau, Marat, Mirabeau, Voltaire, and Victor Hugo; the remains of all have been scattered long ago, except those of Victor Hugo, for whose burial the Pantheon was secularized the second time.

Every vestige of the old palace at St. Cloud has been removed. The grounds adjoining and the private grounds of Napoleon III. are magnificent; the latter are kept up very handsomely by the village of St. Cloud. As we were going to Versailles we passed by the home of Gambetta, in the little town of Avray. One of the most interesting spots in Versailles is the home of Madame Recamier. The Grand and Petit Trianons are queer, three-cornered, low buildings. Every piece of furniture and inch of ground about them is historic. In the Grand Trianon we were shown the bed-room of Louis XIV., the writing-room and family-room of Josephine, the hall where Marshal Bazaine was tried, the octagon-room which served as a chapel, Napoleon's billiard-room, the salon of Louis Philippe, the library of Louis XVI., different rooms of Napoleon's, in which were elegant presents that had been given him. In one was a great deal of malachite from Alexander of Russia; in another a table of granite brought by the Little Corporal from Egypt; in another a table of mosaics from Florence; in his bed-room was a bust of his second wife, Maria Louise. Apartments are shown that were prepared for Queen Victoria's use on a certain visit of hers to the Grand Trianon in the time of Louis Philippe; but she disliked them, and went at once to St. Cloud. In the room where the old coaches are kept we saw the carriage in which Napoleon rode at his marriage with Josephine; the one he gave after his marriage; also the one he used when he married Maria Louise; the old coach that was used when Charles X. was crowned at Rheims, and the one used at the marriage of Napoleon III. All were out for the last time at the baptism of the Prince Imperial. The Little Trianon is where Marie Antoinette lived when she wearied of the oppressions of court life. Here we saw her private apartments, the splendid cabinet where her jewels were kept, the little piano that she used, the reading-room, with the foot-ladder near the bookcase, for her to mount to secure the volumes beyond reach. It was all so simple that it was hard to realize that it had been the dwelling-place of a queen—and such a queen! After we had gone through the Little Trianon we walked about the spacious grounds down to the Swiss village, where Marie Antoinette played milk-maid and had her open-air theatres. A rarely beautiful spot, with long walks tree-embowered, plots of flowers, lakes, grottoes, pavilions, several chalets—all in the midst of woods as deep as in the heart of a forest. We took our lunch in veritable Bohemian fashion in Versailles, then proceeded to the royal palace, where we were ushered from hall to hall and chamber to chamber, and were fairly dazzled with the splendor and magnificence that we beheld. The whole world seems to have emptied its treasures here—an abode fit not only for the kings of France, but for the gods. The great ball-room is the most gorgeous place I ever saw; the Doge's Palace fades in comparison. It was at the entrance to this superb room that the Emperor of Germany was crowned in 1870. We went through the private apartments of Marie Antoinette and into the bed-room of Louis XIV., upon the balcony of which the poor queen stood with her little son in her arms pleading for mercy on that terrible day when the Revolutionists stormed the palace. Nearly every painting in the royal palace is illustrative of some notable victory of Napoleon Bonaparte, or some scene in which he appears prominently. The selfishness of the man is seen everywhere. It has been said that Paris is France. One would think, after coming to this country, that there is no history but that of Napoleon. On our return from Versailles we stopped at the town of Sevres and visited the wonderful porcelain manufactory, and saw the beginning of the creation of the most exquisitely beautiful china in the world.

Our party is breaking up by degrees. Many left us at Grindelwald, some at Rome, and to-night several leave for London, Ireland, and Scotland. Next week we turn our faces toward England.

Preparation for the Pulpit.

[Read by Rev. E. H. Monnger before the Preachers' Institute of Jackson district, Mississippi Conference, at Madison, Oct. 23, 1895, and requested for publication in the ADVOCATE.]

The pulpit is the arena for the minister's greatest work; it is the throne of his power; hence the importance of making preparation for it, so that what he does may be done in the best manner possible. He has other work besides that of the pulpit, but this is his highest, that to which he is called of God, and in which he has the promise of greatest success. The preacher who does not use his utmost effort and diligence, that he may be a workman approved, has no proper conception of the office and work of the ministry. Of all places and callings, laziness here is most to be condemned. Therefore, there is no demand to prove that the preacher should prepare himself, that he may be such a one as needeth not to be ashamed.

Preparation for the pulpit is of three kinds: Preparation of the body, preparation of the heart, and preparation of the mind.

First—Preparation of the body.

Good health, a sound body, is an important factor in successful preaching, if it is not absolutely essential. The day of the pale-faced minister, with his interesting look, has passed, nevermore to return, as the world has grown wiser than that. The intellect must have a good foundation on which to rest itself, and from which to grow, as also we doubt not the spiritual nature must have. The more strength and health and vigor the preacher has, the more he can do in an office which requires the best exercise of all his powers. The body and spirit are intimately associated, and they have strong sympathies with one another.

Dean Farrar has said: "It does not do to despise the body. If we are spirits, yet we have bodies; and the body wreaks a stern and humiliating vengeance upon those who neglect or despise it. The body reacts upon the mind. If we weaken the body too much, we do not make it the slave of the spirit, but rather make the spirit its slave. Even moderate fasting, as a simple physiological fact, if it be fasting at all, as distinguished from healthful moderation and wise temperance, tends to increase, and not by any means to decrease, the temptations that come to us from the appetites of the body. Many a hermit and stylite and fasting monk; many half-crazed, hysterical, high-wrought men have found, sometimes without knowing the reason of it, that by willful and artificial devices of self-chosen saintliness, they have made the path of purity and holiness not easier, but more hard. The body is a temple, not a tomb."

If the body be weak, the mind will partake of this weakness, and will not certainly be capable of any great and prolonged effort. A sound body and a sound mind go together ordinarily, just as the stalk of corn and the ear are found together. The body is, then, to be kept in the best condition, for, if anyone needs physical strength for his work, and a great deal of it, it is the preacher.

Wholesome food, and in good quantities, is essential. Some of the greatest preachers of modern times have believed this, and have put it into practice. Mr. Beecher did not stint himself, having a generous appetite, the gratification of which he thought necessary to the production of his massive sermons; and Mr. Talmage's capacity in this regard is a wonder unto many. I knew a preacher who was accustomed to fast on Sunday morning, going into the pulpit at 11 o'clock without having partaken of any food at all. A case of evident unwisdom. I would fear that the pulpit ministrations following could not possibly be as strong and healthy as they would otherwise be.

Sleep is an important preparation for the pulpit. If he wants to keep his congregation awake when he is in the pulpit, the preacher must himself sleep much when he is out of it. Observe Mr. Wesley's rule about going to bed at 10 o'clock, but carefully violate it about rising at 4 o'clock. Wait rather until the good, orthodox hour of six has come. You are apt to cheat yourself if you suppose that by studying at 12 o'clock at night you are gathering great stores of knowledge. You may be only going through the motion.

In order to the best preparation, a good amount of physical exercise is needful. Let the lungs be expanded, let the rich red blood be made to course rapidly through the veins, let the muscles be developed by use, and there will be corresponding results when the preacher stands before his people. This is worth more than a whole regiment of medicine bottles on the mantle.

These are homely suggestions, but of the greatest utility.

Second—Spiritual preparation.

First of all, it will be agreed that prayer is needful. The man who does not pray over this work does not realize its importance. Just as any good man feels the need of divine help in his undertaking, so the preacher should seek the divine blessing upon the word that he utters in the pulpit. He will, with a faith based upon assurances and promises, pray that he may be strengthened and helped upon that occasion. Earnest pleadings and intercessions with God for his instant blessing and for power from above are the forerunners of a successful and effective deliverance of the Word. The amount of time thus spent is to be determined, as all things else, by the best judgment we have, aided by our experience in the matter. Some have found that long and intense prayer in private immediately preceding the public service is not for the best. It exhausts the physical and emotional strength, and the preacher comes into the pulpit shorn of his power. He has simply used up beforehand upon himself that energy of soul and body needed in preaching the truth.

The true preacher has a call from Heaven to speak the word. That call is not once made, and then gone forever; it is to be a constant one, renewed each time that he appears in the pulpit. He should feel that he has a special message to the souls then and there assembled. A solemn sense of the importance of his task always borne about with him, this is the best preparation of a spiritual character that can be made. He is an ambassador from God unto men. The consciousness of this high office will certainly cause him to live with a high and reverent spirit; will banish from his heart every unworthy purpose, and from his speech all that is unseemly, all foolish talking and jesting which are not convenient. If he thus magnifies his office and feels its responsibility, he can not fail to have what is needful of spiritual preparation, which is indeed the greatest need in the ministerial office. Without the proper spiritual qualification all others are useless; they are only sounding brass or tinkling cymbal.

Third—Mental preparation.

This is, doubtless, the chief intent of the present discussion. I do not mention here what should be any man's preparation before he comes into the ministry; but, being in, what must he do in order that he may preach effectively at any particular time? If a man has preached twenty years, he began the preparation of to-day's sermon twenty years ago. In other words, preparation is cumulative, and one sermon makes way for another. In this, as in everything else, men acquire facility and power by practice. The lawyer, the doctor, the merchant or the farmer, should be better qualified for his business at fifty than he was at thirty, and so of the preacher. Everything he reads, or hears, or experiences, may serve to fit the preacher for his work in the pulpit. All is grist that comes to his mill. Nevertheless, there are some studies more useful than others. The preacher must be a constant and close student of the Bible. Let him pore over its pages, commit its passages to memory, fill his mind with it, and enter into its spirit. Study it by whole books; not by verses or chapters. Read it as he would any other book, recognizing the human part in it as well as the divine. Read it in the original, if it is possible to do so.

The preacher, too, should read philosophy, history, but especially poetry. The poets are our wisest teachers, and almost the only ones.

But what of work on the sermon?

It takes time to make a good sermon. Perhaps two weeks of hard work might thus be profitably employed. Study the text and the context thoroughly, and think about the subject deeply. If you do this, you need not be troubled with the fear that you will lack material for your sermon. If a man can think strongly and consecutively in his study, he may preach without writing extensively. This is a good way of preparing for the pulpit; but the preacher must be careful to do the hard thinking, to methodize everything, and to go through his sermon beforehand. There is great danger here. The temptation in this kind of preparation is to idleness and to slovenly preparation. The preacher may get the heads, the outlines of his sermon, and nothing more. These are all right, but the elaboration is wanting. The nice distinctions, the illustrations, the practical applications are not at hand when he gets up to the pulpit. The preacher has deceived himself, and his preparation has been general, and not special. This method is suited best for a well-disciplined mind, one capable of long and sustained thought. Employed by such a one, it may be most effective; but in the hands of another it may be a delusion. Perhaps for the average preacher the best method of preparation is to write out the whole sermon. Then he is compelled to think and study to a good degree at least. The manuscript is a pledge that he has considered the subject. Then there is something in common between him and his hearers. It will not be all a bog, but there will be firm footing as he goes along. It will tend also to give him confidence in the delivery of his message. In fact, he will have a message to tell. He has gone over the way before, and knows whither he is going. But this does not imply that he should read his sermon; far from it. Such a method is not normal. I doubt whether St. Paul or St. Peter ever read one of his sermons in his life. Generally there is great loss of power in reading. You can hardly get the people to believe that you are really preaching. They have just here a very strong and persistent prejudice. But reading is not always to be condemned. When utmost accuracy is wanted; when there must be great elaboration, or close and compact argument, then this method is best. But this only occasionally. Besides, some have been able in this way to deliver their messages with great power. Jonathan Edwards and Dr. Chalmers read with tremendous effect, and so do Bishop Newman and others now. Let each man study his own mental constitution, and thus determine what is best for himself. If a preacher prepares himself for the pulpit by writing, it does not follow that he is to commit his sermon to memory. Memoriter preaching demands too much time and labor. There is a measured utterance and restraint about it almost unavoidable, and it is apt to suppress the passion which would be generated under a freer speech. This may be resorted to sometimes, but is not to be the ordinary method. But there is no need of committing the sermon to memory. Get the heads, the outlines, in the mind; study the sermon carefully, and, thus furnished, go into the pulpit. Perhaps it will be best if you take with you into the pulpit no paper, no notes at all. It will be but a small task to commit to memory the heads and divisions of the sermon. Special preparation is needed. As the lawyer must study each case, and the physician each patient, so the preacher must study each sermon, each text he uses. Many a preacher once promising and effective has failed because he has trusted to general study and left off special preparation. It has put him high and dry; set him to humming the same old airs, though he does not know it.

The method employed by Dr. Adam Clarke, Mr. Spurgeon, and some others of studying generally, and devoting but a few minutes to preparing the sermon, will do for men of genius, but not for the ordinary preacher. And the better logic for us all is, that we do not possess genius. The preparation of last year, or last month, or last week, or even of yesterday, will not answer for to-day. The matter must be fresh in the mind; the hold on it strong.

The method used by some preachers of putting, say, into an envelope everything they find upon a subject, and weaving all these into a sermon, is not to be commended. This may be a curious work of art, but not a sermon. It will lack continuity, solidity, coherence. A sermon is a creation, not a construction. Odds and ends, and stems and clippings, do not make a sermon; the product should be called by some other name. In fact, when you go to prepare a sermon, whether by thinking it out or writing it, it is well, as far as possible, to rid the mind of what it has laid up in store upon the subject, to trust least of all to the memory, and to proceed to thinking, not remembering, then and there. The sermon should be the action and fruitage of the mind itself. In this way the sermon will be the more easily at your call, and the more effectively preached. What we read or hear is not really our mental possession until we have thought over it, and so woven it into our very consciousness that we can hardly tell it from our own thoughts.

After all, it makes little difference as to our methods of preparation and study for the pulpit, provided we only become thoroughly familiar with the subject in hand. It takes time to familiarize oneself with a matter so as to discuss it well. It must lie on the mind, and be seen on all sides. Then it is known in all its aspects and relations; and talking of it is not a task, but a pleasure.

"Where Is the Law?"

"Where," it is seriously asked, "is the law prohibiting unlicensed persons from occupying our pulpits or controlling the services held in our churches?" It is in our Discipline. The same law that, with great particularity, prescribes the qualifications that should be possessed by one who feels called to preach the gospel; that prescribes the mode in which the possession of such qualifications shall be ascertained by the church that is to be held accountable for the conduct, public and private, of such person; that prescribes a rigid system of inquiry into the lives of her ministers in order to protect the public against imposition; that even after granting such an one license to preach, withholds the privilege of performing certain ministerial acts until he has "made full proof of his ministry"—this is the law that, by necessary implication, enjoins all others against usurping these privileges without having first complied with the requirements of the statute.

That certain pious, consecrated women have been from time to time permitted to conduct temperance meetings, or other meetings for the promotion of public morals in our churches, is a far different matter from the sacred duty of preaching the gospel, and is irrelevant. It is argumentum ad populum.

I presume that no Christian person, certainly no Christian minister, would stand in the way of laymen or laywomen working to lead souls to the Master, and there are innumerable avenues of usefulness open to them that involve no conflict with the authorities of the church, or violation of the laws thereof.

In the Living Present.

The various so-called colonial expeditions are safety valves to the French government. They rid the mother country of surplus hotspurs and visionaries. The subjugation of Madagascar was undertaken for the same purpose. Success has been dearly bought. To maintain the acquisition will cost more than the regular income will amount to. In the meantime the Protestant missions will meet with oppression. Jesuitism is dominant.

The Fortnightly Review denies the growth of Roman Catholicism in England. Says Dean Farrar, that Protestantism, cradled in blood and iron could ne'er be enslaved by Rome. To bring back the old power of priest would very soon bring back intellectual bondage, if not the Spanish Inquisition. 'Tis only as a suitor that Rome is tolerable.

Dr. Conan Doyle, the English story writer, says that an American lecture tour by no means insures vast wealth to the lecturer. He himself received an average of $120 for each lecture on his recent visit to this country, but only netted $85, the balance going for commissions and expenses.

Nine men out of ten think that "the Lord tempers the wind to the shorn lamb" is from the Bible, whereas Laurence Stern is the author. "Pouring oil upon the troubled waters" is also ascribed to the sacred volume, whereas it is not there; in fact, no one knows its origin.

According to one witness, the dangers of football have been much exaggerated. President Andrews, of Brown University, in his annual report, says: "For those in perfect health and trained to it football is safer than either rowing, yachting, gunning, or riding to hounds. Rowing appears to be many times as fatal. So is baseball. Even tennis is worse." President Brown writes nonsense.

The prisoners in the Chicago jail have elected officers for the mock courts which are held for their amusement. The highest honors were awarded to the biggest thieves. It will be seen, therefore, that the jail is run according to the most approved customs which prevail in many cities.

Another American girl, Miss Vanderbilt, has married a titled Englishman, the Duke of Marlborough. The girl gets the duke, and the duke gets $10,000,000. Next!

Under the stone floor of Westminster Abbey are many dead people. In some Methodist Churches the same kind of people are sitting in the pews.

IF WE KNEW EACH OTHER BETTER.

BY REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT, D. D.

Our frail and erring brother
Is much the same as we,
And oft his hard surroundings
Have made him what we see.
Perhaps he sees our failings,
And counts them by the score.
If we knew each other better,
We would love each other more.

Could we know his cranial structure,
And feel his nervous strain,
The divinely fixed machinery
Of hereditary brain,
We'd feel a thrill of mercy
We never felt before.
When we know our brother better,
We shall love our brother more.

When malice, hate and vengeance
Enrage the souls of men,
How nation against nation
Hurls murderous missiles then!
Then ignorance of our brother
Floods all the land with gore.
When we know our neighbor better,
We shall fight and slay no more.

North and South knew not each other,
Nor what they fought about;
Each saw the devil in his brother,
And thought to knock him out;
The devils transmigrated,
And laughed to see men fall;
Had these brethren known each other,
They had never fought at all.

A String of Pearls.

FROM THE WOMAN'S EDITION OF THE NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, ISSUED OCT. 3, 1895.

The first pearl—The beautiful title page, with its palms of victory, by Miss Kate Rogga. So simple, graceful, suggestive, complete. A fit receptacle for our beautiful motto—St. Matthew xxv, 40.

Jubilate—A Hymn to Methodism.

This stone cut from the mountain,
With heavenly wisdom taught;
This is the mighty wonder,
This is what God hath wrought.

—Eunice B Foster.

The Rise and Progress of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society.

We have the promise that the Word of God shall not return to him fruitless. Confidently we count upon his blessing, and prophesy that, as the second quadrennial in the history of this society exceeded the first, so shall the third exceed the whole past of its existence. —Lucinda B. Helm.

Mountain Work.

The mountains are demanding better schools. . . . Our church needs nothing so much as a united advance along all educational lines. . . . If the church could be aroused to its opportunity, money would be poured into our treasury until we would not have room enough to contain it.—Miss Belle Bennett.

Our Treasury and Its Needs.

Every treasurer should also be impressed that she must be a "model treasurer," and be filled with enlightenment and enthusiasm. What a wonderful impetus this would be to the work!—Mrs. A. A. Norris.

Perverting Scripture.

I have frequently been surprised, and I may say almost shocked, at the egregious mistakes of preachers—and not always young ones, either — in misapplying certain passages of Scripture. I mention one or two that have suffered much.

I. Cor. ii, 9, I have heard quoted to prove that God would surprise the universe at the revelation of Christ's second coming with glories and wonders that "had not entered into the heart of man to conceive," thus not only misapplying, but misquoting the passage. Some time since, returning from church with a preacher, I called his attention to the mistake the officiating minister made in the quotation and application. "Well," said he, "I always thought it meant the future." He seemed surprised that the glorious revelations spoken of were revealed to us here, and now, by the Spirit.

Another passage (II. Cor. iv, 17) is often misapplied. Our suffering works good only when we "look, not at the things which are seen, but at the things that are not seen." The essential condition upon which our affections work good is left out of the quotation. Both of these passages are, unfortunately, divided into two verses, which, no doubt, has often led to their misunderstanding.

One more I mention. Rom. viii, 28, is often quoted to console the subjects of bereavement, "All things work together for good," with the conditional precedent left out, "to them that love God."

I will mention another mode of perversion akin to the former—that of straining the Scripture into another meaning, or forcing deductions. One brother, deducing immersion as the proper mode of baptism, because the timber employed in building Solomon's Temple was rafted through the Mediterranean Sea; and another the second-blessing theory, by emphasizing the word "now" in the passage, "Now ye are clean through the word I have spoken unto you." J. H. STONE.

Athens, La.

One More Round!

No month in the year holds so much in store for the preacher and the church as the last month, next before a session of the Conference. The wide-awake pastor has his "collections" all "in hand, in cash or its equivalent." This "equivalent" is the part of the transaction with which the beneficiaries of the various funds are most concerned. To some it means bread or no bread; to others it means a church-house or no church-house; to others it means gospel or no gospel; education or no education, etc. These are all of utmost importance. Still, there seems a difference. Souls may be saved without bread, without houses of worship, without education; but without the gospel the souls of men must perish.

Within the bounds of the Louisiana Conference there are more than 250,000 persons who never read the gospel of the Son of God, and who never heard more of it than a broken or fragmentary mixture of it with a vast deal of superstition and "the commandments of men" presented as "the doctrines of God."

The Catholic Church does not furnish the Scriptures to the people, nor preach a pure gospel to them. Of priestcraft they have a surfeit, but of gospel a dearth; and thus it must be—it will be—till Protestant money furnishes something better. It is almost incredible that one-fourth of the population of the great State of Louisiana is in utter darkness as to the true Word of God. They do not know that "Jesus has power to forgive sins!" They do not know that he, and he alone, can "justify the ungodly."

As the past has demonstrated, it will continue thus unless the assessment for domestic missions is collected. This can be done. Will it be done? Let an effort be made at the last moment, in every place where there is a deficit, to bring up these collections by which the gospel is to be furnished to the crying souls of men. The men are ready. Shall we have the money to send them? J. A. PARKER,

It is very gratifying to learn from Miss Mollie Clarke, treasurer of the North Mississippi Conference Missionary Society, that the pledge for the Wightman special, made by our representative at the W. B. M., has been so promptly and liberally met. By the first of September it was in hand; not the $150 pledged, but the good sum of $290. It is indeed encouraging that our North Mississippi women have thus responded to this call, and so nobly done their part towards sending out those who are ready, but for the sending of whom there were no funds in hand. Our own Miss Viola Blackburn has now been appointed to San Luis Potosi, Mexico.

And now must we turn our attention to the raising of our regular pledge, that must be paid by the first of March, that the regular work be carried on without delay, and there be sufficient funds in hand to send out whomsoever the Lord may call. This is a season of great prosperity to our section, and it is our privilege to render unto the Lord a liberal thank-offering for all his goodness to us.

Rev. W. B. Burke, of our China Mission, with his wife (nee Miss Addie Gordon) and their three little boys, passed through Jackson, Wednesday, Oct. 16, and spent a few hours in the home of Bishop Galloway. Bro. and Sister Burke made interesting talks to the prayer meeting of the First Methodist Church. Mrs. Burke having spent most of her life in Mississippi, has here many warm friends who will be delighted to find her in perfect health, and with unabated zeal for the work to which she gave herself eight years ago. May their sojourn at home be one of unalloyed pleasure to them and an inspiration to the church to a more intelligent interest in and liberal giving to the cause for which these have labored so faithfully, and to which they will give the remaining years of their lives! MRS. G. H. LIPSCOMB.

China for Christ.

We are glad to give our readers the following letter from Rev. George R. Loehr, of Shanghai, China. If those on the field in the midst of threatening perils are so steadfast in faith and courage, surely we at home should not falter. Let us uphold our China Mission by our prayers, by increased liberality, and more especially by re-enforcements:

"I hope that none of the reports you have received from China, in regard to riots, massacres, disturbances, etc., will cause any one to lose heart, hope, or courage. Mission work will be carried on notwithstanding these troubles. There are places where the work can be carried on without molestation, and if driven from one city, district, or province, room and protection will be found in others. We must not abate one jot or tittle in zeal, energy, hope, and earnestness. Satan is not going to give China up without a severe struggle you may be sure, and the more he opposes the more determined we should be to meet his opposition and overcome in the name of our great and all-victorious Captain. 'China for Christ' should ever inspire us all to an onward, forward movement, and we should present one unbroken front to the foe, and unitedly oppose him and all his servants.

"Not much help or protection is to be expected from the Chinese Government, but our God can protect those whom he would protect, and if it is best for some to die as martyrs, he knows best. The work is his, and the salvation of these teeming millions, who now know him not, is far more dear to his great, loving heart than it could possibly be to the most consecrated, most devout missionary that ever labored in China. There is an old, familiar saying that 'every cloud has a silver lining,' and it is as true as it is familiar. As sad, horrible, and unfeeling for as the Kucheng massacre was, it is not without its good results. It has brought foreigners in China more in sympathy and touch with missionaries and missionary work than has ever been known, I think. The same will be true in the home land. There will be sympathy from those who before have never felt it, and more earnest, intelligent, fervent prayer will be offered by Christians wherever a knowledge of this horrible outrage has become known. Then, too, it brings missionary work more prominently before the Chinese, and will cause thousands, if not millions, to give Christianity some attention who before would do no such thing. There has already been a proclamation from the Emperor ordering riots to cease, missionaries to be respected and protected, and the instigators and participants in these riots to be punished. Some will disregard the proclamation and treat it as a dead letter, while others will respect and honor it, and in all places where there are disturbances or threatened disturbances a copy of it can be efficiently used.

"These riots show that China is not a civilized country, and must not be regarded as such. They hurt her far more than the cause of Christ is hurt, and it may be that she will see her weakness, error, and folly, confess it with shame and humility, and heartily repent of all misdoings and shortcomings. Like the prodigal, she may 'come to herself,' realizing her utter helplessness, and arise and believe in God and his Son Jesus Christ. China's only salvation is the religion of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. The beautiful moral teaching of her ancient sages have no power over the people. They need the holy teaching of Him who spake as never man spake, and who taught with authority; whose words were light and life and power to all who receive them.—Review of Missions.

Selections.

Wait.

Be not swift to judge others. Whenever the supposed errors or weakness of others are brought to our notice, let us hesitate—let us postpone reflecting upon them. Possibly some slight prejudice may mislead us, and thus innocent persons may suffer. Wait. In our cooler moments, when an opportunity is given us to know their early training, their present surroundings, and their secret motives, we may be constrained to modify our first unfavorable impressions. We all need just such leniency from others. Our best efforts, those that are most productive of good, are sometimes the occasion of present adverse criticism. If only hasty judgment is suspended for a season, time will cause such a reversal that our cause may be justified before all men. That which may have seemed positively wrong at the first, subsequently is acknowledged to be an evidence of our integrity? "All things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." To be kind to all men, considerate of them in their struggles, slow to convict them of wrongdoing, silent when the cause of righteousness will not suffer by delay—this is Christian nobility. Wait. Choose the more excellent way. If our charity for others "suffereth long," we shall be enriched by a divine reaction of love in our own hearts, a blessing that is beyond all price.

We have somewhere read that on the shores of the Adriatic the wives and children of the fishermen, who ply their craft by day upon the sea, assemble at sunset and join in singing some familiar household hymn. And they sing, and sing again, sending their voices clear and strong out upon the waters, until their waiting ears catch a response telling them that their loved ones are almost home. So when our days of earthly toil are over, when our suns of life are fast setting, and we draw near the eternal shore, may our dull ears catch the sweet songs of the waiting angels, and our faltering lips send back a responsive chorus announcing that we, too, are almost home—almost in the arms of the shining escort, almost at the doors of the Father's house with many mansions.—Interior.

It would be well for the reader to take counsel with himself whether day by day the gospel hope springs in his breast, whether he could meet his business partner, his best friend, his wife, or his child, and with confidence testify of the glorious hope, with a burning love for Christ and for the one who asks for a reason. If the years are passing without concern for his destitution of the hope, is not the time fully come for searching his own heart to ascertain whether the spirit of the age may not have despoiled him of the "earnest of the inheritance?"

What the world most needs is, not argument, but experience; not logic, but salvation; not ceremony, but holiness. If the present tide of infidelity is arrested and turned back, it will be by a red-hot gospel proclaimed by those who know its power. It was not Peter's logic that in a single day captured three thousand souls for Christ from the rebel hosts of sin, but the Spirit, the power and the fire of the Pentecost.—Christian Witness.

The first you are to do when you are upon your knees is to shut your eyes and, with short silence, let your soul place itself in the presence of God; that is, you are to use this or some better method to separate yourself from all common thoughts and make your heart as sensible as you can of the divine presence.—Andrew Murray.

No one can ask honestly or hopefully to be delivered from temptation unless he has himself honestly and firmly determined to do the best he can to keep out of it.—Ruskin.

We have but to name God before sorrow, and it changes color; name him before burdens, and they grow less; name him before the vanity of life, and it disappears.

Grumbling is a business which can be carried on with a very small capital. It does not require brains, nor character, nor money to be a fault-finder.

Religion does not consist in occasionally doing religious things. It consists rather in doing everything religiously.

Nothing is ever done beautifully which is done in rivalship, nor nobly which is done in pride.—John Ruskin.

You can not dream yourself into a character; you must hammer and forge yourself one.—James A. Froude.

Anybody can be happy in sunshine, but only the Christian can rejoice when the clouds come.

Mississippi Conference Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society.

It would seem that there is nothing left to be said in our column—we have had so much of late from the Woman's Edition of the ADVOCATE, the convention number of Our Homes, the ninth annual report, and from various other sources—but for the fact that we know we have an inexhaustible subject, one that can ever be repeated, as it never grows old, for it involves the message, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

The following is taken from a leaflet on the subject, "Singleness of Purpose," by Arabel W. Alexander, which I reproduce for the benefit of those who may not have read it:

"The author of that wonderful book, 'In Darkest England, and the Way Out,' says: 'There are millions of our fellow-creatures perishing amid the breakers of the sea of life, dashed to pieces on sharp rocks, sucked under by eddying whirlpools, suffocated, even when they think they have reached land, by treacherous quicksands. May we not reach forth a hand to save them from this imminent destruction? If we can not be priests and Levites, we can at least play the part of the Good Samaritan.' This noble sentiment is the key-note of General Booth's successful career.

"There is much said in these days about a higher sphere for women. Some of the best talent in our country is consumed by heated discussions on woman's rights and woman's equality, and there is much clamoring for position here and there, when, if we could but see it, there are positions right at our doors clamoring for us, where we may walk side by side with the Son of God.

"Our souls need to have higher ideals, for everyone approaches more or less his ideal, and there is no ideal of life for woman that can satisfy her mind and heart like Christian service. There are all grades of service, from the 'giving of a cup of cold water' to the great positions of influence and power, and God wants the best of our lives—not 'the chips and shavings' of them.

"In this age of startling activity, where every work is made a success only by becoming a specialty, if we would accomplish a useful and lasting work, we must turn all our energies and influence into some definite line of Christian work, and, in so doing, God is pledged to give us success.

"This grand organization of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society has many branches. May we not use our powers in some one of these? With some of us it would be possible, by careful planning and patient efforts, to raise enough money to build or furnish a little parsonage somewhere on the frontier. What a sweet and lasting work that would be for Christ! How many hearts and lives would be rested and sheltered in that home! Would it not pay sufficient interest, think you, through all eternity? Those of us who could not raise such a large amount might, by careful management, lay aside books and papers and garments that could easily be spared, and, with the co-operation of a few Christian ladies, in a few months or a year we could send large boxes full of these useful things to Christ's ministers who are needy in this world's goods. If we can not do that, let us take up some definite home missionary work, even if small, in the Sunday-schools, or hospitals, or ladies' prayer meetings, or kindergarten schools, or in private ministrations to the needy in certain quarters of our towns or cities, where the name of Christ is unknown.

"There is work somewhere, and elevating work for every earnest-hearted, ambitious woman, where the high powers of her being may be employed, developed, and strengthened by using them according to Christ's royal law—'not being ministered unto, but ministering.'

"Let us arise to this beautiful dignity of service in society and the world, that in our country of great need the stones may not cry out against us that they are the only pillows where the Son of man can lay his head."

We are glad to see the right frequent notices from different Conferences of aid societies changing into Parsonage and Home Mission Societies. Many societies are making special donations towards sending the light to the mountain district and the Cuban Mission. PAULINE STAFFORD.

How a Woman Paid Her Debts!

I am out of debt, and thanks to the Dish Washer business for it. In the past five weeks I have made over $500 and I am so thankful that I feel like telling everybody, so that they can be benefited by my experience. Anybody can sell Dish Washers, because everybody wants one, especially when it can be got so cheap. You can wash and dry the dishes in two minutes. I believe that in two years from now every family will have one. You can get full particulars and hundreds of testimonials by addressing the Iron City Dish Washer Co., 145 S. Highland Ave., Station A, Pittsburg, Pa., and you can't help but make money in this business. I believe that I can clear over $3,000 the coming year, and I am not going to let such an opportunity pass without improvement. We can't expect to succeed without trying.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. W. B. Van Valkenburgh, Cameron, La., Nov. 4: "Just closed our protracted tent meeting; was assisted by Revs. F. D. Van Valkenburgh, D. C. Rawls, W. D. Pickens, W. H. Hatfield and Rev. Joe Berwick. Our meeting was largely attended by the Cameron people, the largest assembly ever gathered for religious services at Cameron; so pronounced by competent judges. Raised $70 to meet expenses. Many present promised to lead a better life, and the results were far reaching and uplifting."

Rev. W. Winans Drake, Crowley, La., Nov. 4: "We have just closed a successful meeting here of about ten days' duration. We had no ministerial help, except three sermons by Bros. Ross and Brown, of the M. E. Church; but the church rallied with some zeal to the work, and a good work was done. Twelve or fifteen professed conversion, and eleven joined the church, making thirty-seven accessions by profession of faith since Conference. The work moves forward constantly, though sometimes slowly. We are trying to get ready for Conference."

Rev. J. W. Honnoll, Holly Springs station, Nov. 5: 'Holly Springs station is all right, provided the Conference will return Bro. Oakley, who is very highly esteemed by our people, a fine preacher and good pastor—not small in anything. We have one hundred girls in the Malone College, fifty boarding in the college and ten boarding with friends in town. The Grenada College is doing well, and we have four times as many girls in our own schools in this Conference as we had six years ago, and yet we have half as many Methodist girls in the Cumberland Presbyterian schools at Oxford and West Point and the Baptist College at Blue Mountain as we have in our own schools."

Rev. Wilson Moore, Atlanta circuit, Louisiana Conference: "We have our hands, head and heart all full; but out of the abundance of the heart we hope to pen a few lines. We have had a good year, spiritually, and now we are busy trying to bring up the finances. Our protracted meetings resulted in over twenty accessions, and equally as many conversions. We were assisted by several brethren, both traveling and local preachers, for which service we are thankful. Our preacher in charge also assisted us in one meeting. Bro. Davies is a growing man, for he has grown considerably in favor with the people. We hope to be able to present a good record at Conference."

S. S. Chevalier, Superintendent of Sunday-school, Vidalia, La., Oct. 31: "Notwithstanding that our minister—Rev. Aiken—has been sick a good deal this year, we have had almost regular services all the time, and especially during the month of October. For these blessings we are indebted to the Rev. M. M. Black, and Miss Baker, of Natchez, and C. W. Saddler, of Garden City, Miss.; also Rev. Waltman, of Natchez. Our Sunday-school is the pride of our community, being largely attended and of bright and intelligent children. Occasionally the children are addressed by our venerable brother and minister, Rev. H. J. Harris. I trust the splendid and harmonious condition of Sunday-school may give due impetus to others in the work."

Rev. Jno. D. Crymes, Anguilla, Miss., Oct. 31: "I have recently held a very interesting meeting on Murphey's Bayou, unoccupied territory adjoining this work. This place is one of the few points in the State of Mississippi where Universalists have organized. I have never witnessed more powerful convictions of the Holy Ghost. There was a thorough reconciliation of the families of the community, the majority of whom were not at peace with each other. About fifteen were converted. All of these give clear testimony to their acceptance of Christ, and two received the blessed experience of entire sanctification. Among those gloriously regenerated, and uniting with the Methodist Church, were several of the leading people of Universalist faith."

Rev. R. C. Grace, Glenmora mission: "I am glad that I planned this mission last year, and put it before our presiding elder, S. J. Davies. He thought it a good thing, and took it before our last Annual Conference, and it was made a mission. The Mission Board gave me twenty-five dollars, and the Bishop sent me on the work. I am very glad that he did, for the Lord has blessed me much on this new mission. It is very true that I have had some hard times—for instance, my wife and myself have had to move five times this year, for this reason: our money was short, and we had to rent rooms according to our means. But after all our trouble and hard work, thank God it has proved a greater blessing to us and the work. At the first of the year, by hard work, I raised money and build a church here in West Alexandria, but did not complete it. The storm blew it down, and I had almost become a reproach among some of the people on account of it. So I went to the Lord in earnest prayer and faith and told him, if I had found favor in his sight, to be pleased to give me the money that I may build up this house again in this town, that this people may not be a reproach longer. The Lord heard my prayer and put it in the heart of one, Mr. John T. Powers and wife, and they gave me two thousand dollars. We have now completed one of the prettiest churches in the State, and I am happy to say on last Sunday, Oct. 27, our kind people decorated it beautifully with flowers, and in the presence of our beloved presiding elder, S. J. Davies, and four other brother preachers and congregation, between two and three hundred people, it was dedicated by one of our most able preachers, Dr. W. H. LaPrade. That makes three churches that I have built in about twelve months' time. If one did blow down, the Lord gave me a much better one in its place. There have been raised on the mission this year about twenty-three hundred and fifty dollars for the Methodist Church outside of the amount that has been raised for preacher in charge, and that is about one hundred dollars, and there have been eighteen accessions to the church. All praise to the Lord!"

J. T. Lewis, Ulloa, Miss., Oct. 4: "As we are nearing the close of the Conference year, we can report many signs of life in the church. Our revival service in the Summer, conducted by Bros. R. W. Bailey and H. R. Singleton, Sr., were a power for God, and many hearts were made to rejoice and experience a full salvation from all sin. There is a freshness about Bro. Bailey's sermons, peculiar to himself, and his parallels are without an equal. Bro. Singleton followed with as fine and powerful sermons as were ever heard from our pulpit. Our Sabbath-school and class and prayer meetings are in a growing condition, and through the unflagging energy of our pastor, Bro. Linfield, the parsonage has received some badly needed repairs, and other than the thought and satisfaction of bringing up all finance in full at Conference, he expects to 'come rejoicing' bringing many precious souls for Christ."

It gives us pleasure to call our readers' attention to an article that has solid merit, namely, Brown's Bronchial Troches. For more than a hundred years a sterling character, honesty of purpose and wise dealings have characterized the house manufacturing this excellent and popular article. The same determination to do everything well has marked for nearly fifty years the manufacture and sale of these famous troches. Every speaker and singer knows their immense value and all are ready to tell of their worth for colds and sore throats. But public speakers and singers are not the only ones who derive great benefit from the use of Brown's Bronchial Troches. The general public are not slow to show appreciation of a good thing. The immense sale of these troches proves the truth of this statement. We can unhesitatingly recommend them to our readers, thus following the example of ministers and regular physicians who know their value for affections of the throat.

It is pitiable to see Christians discouraged. Of all men they have the most right and the best reason to be full of hope and energy. They are the Lord's and are working for his cause. They have "a promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come." They are on the winning as well as on the safe side. They have noble and inspiring examples, both in private and public life, continually before their eyes. They have grace for duty, for trial, and for victory. No drooping, then, but cheering, responsive, and persistent service.—Presbyterian.

A Veteran's Story

Jos. Hemmerich.

Mr. Joseph Hemmerich, an old soldier, 529 E. 146th St., N. Y. City, writes voluntarily. In 1852, at the battle of Fair Oaks, he was stricken with typhoid fever, and after a struggle of several years in hospitals, was discharged as Incurable with Consumption. Doctors said both lungs were affected and he could not live long, but a comrade urged him to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. Before he had finished one bottle his cough began to get loose, the choking sensation left, and night sweats grew less and less. He is now in good health and cordially recommends as a blood purifier and tonic medicine, especially to comrades in the G. A. R.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

HOOD'S PILLS are purely vegetable, and do not purge, pain or gripe. Try a box. 25c.

We invite special attention to our new sewing machine offer. This machine is a most excellent one in every respect. We have never made a better premium offer. Let no one confound this machine with any one previously offered. It is a different machine altogether. Take notice that we prepay freight and guarantee entire satisfaction.

The Holman Bible for $1.65.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.65 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to Nov., '96. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two full years in advance, i. e., up to Nov., '97, can get this Bible at $1.35.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2.45 instead of $1.65. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2.45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We are now prepared to fill orders for Bibles (both kinds) promptly.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

A NEW AND WONDERFUL BOOK

Touching Incidents

—AND—

Remarkable Answers to Prayer.

AS RELATED BY

John Wesley, Bishop Simpson, John B. Gough, Edward Payson, James Caughey, Bishop Bowman, John Knox, Martin Luther, C. H. Spurgeon, Wm. Carvosso, S. A. Keen, A. B. Earle, B. Fay Mills, D. L. Moody, Guy Fox, Any Many Others. Chas. G. Finney, T. DeWitt Talmage, Frances E. Willard, George Muller, James H. Potts,

Western Christian Advocate: "It is simply wonderful. No one can read the book without having his faith in prayer greatly strengthened."

Union Signal: "Its high religious tone, its fascinating spirit, and the high rank of its contributors, make it a strong faith tonic and an inspiration to prevailing prayer."

B. Fay Mills: "A wonderful book, an excellent book."

Cumberland Presbyterian: "It is indeed full of touching incidents calculated to quicken the faith of all who read it."

Pres. Franklin College, New Athens, O.: "This is one of the best and most interesting books we have ever seen."

Central Congregationalist: "Many of the incidents are exceedingly pathetic, and can scarcely fail to stir any tender heart to tears. It is a rich mine of illustrations for a preacher, and deserves to be in every minister's library, while no Christian heart can fail to be deeply interested and profoundly stimulated by it to ward faith in God."

Methodist Recorder: "It is a well-bound book, full of incidents and illustrations for public speakers, and will encourage every reader to greater faith and more earnest prayer."

Christian Herald, edited by T. DeWitt Talmage: "Mr. S. B. Shaw has done a wise thing in making a compilation of Notable Answers to Prayer. Such incidents encourage the desponding Christian and are useful to Christian workers in leading their hearers to pray for themselves."

Christian Arbitrator: "Some of the incidents are very touching; we could only read them with tear-dimmed eyes."

The book contains 320 pages, and when open measures 8¼ by 12¼ inches, and is beautifully bound in full cloth.

It is equally adapted to the learned and unlettered.

Young and old, saved and unsaved, all read it with delight. Leaders of the various Christian denominations commend it highly.

OUR OFFER.

We will send the work, postpaid, to any address on receipt of publisher's price—$1; to preachers, 75 cents. We will do better than this for our subscribers. Any subscriber who will pay his subscription up to January, '97, can have the work sent postpaid, for 50 cents, provided he has not had the benefit of any previous premium offer. Those who have had the benefit of a previous offer should write us for terms. Better still, any subscriber who will pay his own subscription up to date and send us one new subscriber at the regular price will receive a copy of the work free. Report of the Publishing Committee.

At ten o'clock on the morning of Wednesday, Oct. 30, 1895, the Publishing Committee of this ADVOCATE held its regular annual meeting in the editor's office. All the members were present, and each took a lively part in the deliberations. Dr. W. C. Black submitted a gratifying report of the financial condition of the ADVOCATE. The cash system ordered by the Committee two years ago, and carried out judiciously by the publisher, has greatly improved the solid receipts of the paper. All current demands are fully met.

The list of subscribers has been considerably increased during the year just past. This increase is marked in the North Mississippi Conference, and shows the value of active canvassing on the part of the preachers. The improved status of the paper has been achieved by Dr. Black under great difficulties, and the Committee expressed, by resolution, its appreciation of the strong, wise hand which he has held in the business department.

Within the next few months the first and second pages of the paper will appear in new type, greeting our eyes with a fresher and more winning face.

Under the same management the paper starts out on another year's service to its constituents with auspices more favorable than it has seen for several years past. It only needs that all concerned shall give a loyal, energetic and prayerful co-operation in order to carry this ADVOCATE to the full measure of its patronage and power. The Committee appeals to the conscience and judgment of our people in the three Conferences to respond to this need. We believe that the true interests of our connectional life and work demand the maintenance of a strong post of power in New Orleans. In our church local and connectional interests are correlative, reciprocal, interdependent. Every solid consideration in favor of an efficient ...ference organ calls upon the ... hundred thousand and more Methodists in the three patronizing Conferences to center on this ADVOCATE as the best means of securing the service of a good paper within our territory.

The forty-five years of noble work done by this paper for Christ and our Methodism challenges our admiration, our confidence, and our continued support. In 1850 Dr. J. C. Keener, now our venerable senior Bishop, honored and loved by the whole church, first took seat in the editorial chair of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. With ardent devotion and consummate skill and energy, he set the great enterprise in motion and stamped it with the best forms of intellectual and spiritual life to be sent out to our people. Methodism had a strong, fearless defender in the very place where Romanism had its seat. There is no estimating the value of this service to our church. In the succession of editors some of the strongest, truest, wisest pens in Southern Methodism are found. It is incumbent on us, who are now the constitnents of this great enterprise, to perpetuate and strengthen it with all possible fidelity. With united and hearty effort the circulation can be enlarged to ten thousand subscribers. Let us combine and push for this number.

W. T. J. SULLIVAN,
For Committee.

Paganized Christianity.

Last Sabbath was a gala day with Crescent City Romanists. The occasion was the coronation of a statue of "Our Lady of Prompt Succor." The celebration was specially authorized by His Holiness, the Pope. The crowd that gathered to witness the proceedings is estimated at not less than ten thousand. A number of bishops and hundreds of priests were present. Archbishop Janssens was the master of ceremonies, and he it was that placed the crown on the head of the statue. The crown, made of gold and profusely bedecked with jewels, is said to have cost, at least, twelve thousand dollars. The ceremonies were elaborate and imposing.

Many of our readers will inquire, "Who is 'Our Lady of Prompt Succor'? and what is the meaning of this ceremony?" We will give a brief answer, the space at our command forbidding a more detailed account.

"Our Lady of Prompt Succor" is simply one of a multitude of names by which the Virgin Mary is known among Romanists. About seventy-five years ago a Catholic woman, an inmate of a convent in France, desiring to come to Louisiana to engage in the work pertaining to her order, knelt before a statue of the Virgin and prayed to her to remove speedily all obstacles to her coming, and promised that if her prayer was answered she would ever afterward honor the Virgin under the name of "Our Lady of Prompt Succor." She then wrote to the Pope, asking his permission to come. Permission being promptly granted, she had a statue of the Virgin made and brought it with her and placed it in the Ursuline Convent, where it has remained ever since. To crown this image was the object of this pompous ceremony. In the prayers and the addresses delivered by the Bishops and the Archbishop the faithful were solemnly enjoined not to neglect to worship at the shrine of "Our Lady of Prompt Succor." It was claimed by the speakers that many miracles have been wrought in answer to prayers to the Virgin under this name.

What is this except idolatry? To claim for the Virgin Mary the power to hear and answer the prayers that go up to her from millions of people in all parts of the world is to make her omniscient, if not omnipresent. This is attributing to a creature, a sinner saved by grace, the attributes of Deity. God, in His Holy Word, most solemnly forbids the worship of any being except himself, and hurls anathemas at those who disregard this command. Time and again direst calamity in various forms was sent upon ancient Israel for disobedience at this point. Yet here we have a great establishment calling itself the only true church of God, which not only disregards the divine command, but enjoins it as a duty upon all its votaries to do so. If this is Christianity, what is Paganism? Men have as much right to worship at the shrine of Jupiter, Baal, Ashtoroth, or any other heathen god of ancient or modern times, as to worship before an image dedicated to "Our Lady of Prompt Succor." Rome is "Paganized Christianity."

It was pre-eminently fitting that this occasion should wind up, as it did, with a sumptuous banquet at which large use was made of the "dark beverages of hell." Of the toasts given we will not speak at present.

Sanctification: Shall We Have Peace?

Under the above heading the last issue of our Review has an article from the pen of the editor, Dr. J. J. Tigert, from which we make the following extract:

The wise and timely article of Bishop Hendrix, in this number of the Review, as well as the excellent paper of Bishop Granbery, in a recent issue of the Christian Advocate, indicate that these faithful overseers of the flock hold themselves "ready with faithful diligence to banish and drive away all erroneous and strange doctrines," and "to maintain and set forward quietness, love, and peace among all men," an effort in which the entire episcopal college united in their address to the recent General Conference at Memphis. The articles alluded to keep equally clear of the Zinzendorfian and Calvinistic heresies of entire sanctification at conversion or in death only, and cling to the established position of Methodist orthodoxy that believers may expect to be made perfect in love in this life, at the same time shutting off the novel and unscriptural distinction between native depravity and personally contracted defilement, a distinction set up in the vain endeavor to establish wholly different spheres of operation for regenerating and for sanctifying grace. Bishop Granbery well says: "That the carnal mind lingers in the great body of believers, not cherished or dominant, but hated, resisted, overcome; that it causes them great grief and trouble, but undergoes gradual weakening and extinction, is Methodist doctrine; and, if we except the being and perfection of God, meets as nearly as any other article of faith the celebrated test of catholicity, 'what has been taught always, everywhere, and by all Christians.'" Thus "progressive sanctification is the experience of all earnest believers," and "it may and should issue in entire sanctification during the present life." Bishop Hendrix finely shows our doctrine to be involved in the genius of Arminianism, as opposed to Romanism, Calvinism, and Zinzendorfianism; and by the quotation from the old Disciplines indicates the consistency of the gradually increasing salvation with the final instantaneous total change. Such deliverances ought to close the mouths of those who have hastily and blatantly asserted that our chief pastors had departed from the "standards." These two papers from these consecrated and watchful undershepherds of the flock of Christ, filled with the spirit of their Master and ours, should do much to put an end to the controversies that have so long and painfully distracted our Zion.

Who Wants to Be Swallowed?

When the Protestant Episcopal Church, a few years since, made a deliverance in favor of union with other denominations there were a few people in some of the Protestant Churches who hailed the proposition with delight as the harbinger of a brighter and better day in the Christian world. That any person of intelligence should have been caught with such chaff is beyond our comprehension. The meaning of the proposition was this: "We are willing to swallow anything calling itself a church that is willing to be swallowed." Only this and nothing more. This fact was brought out strikingly by the action of the recent General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church, in response to a communication from the Committee on Christian Unity appointed by the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church. The Presbyterian brethren proposed "recognition and reciprocity" as the initiatory step towards union. They are now coolly informed that they can have "recognition and reciprocity," provided they are willing to accept "the Historic Episcopate." In other words, if they will acknowlege the invalidity of their Presbyterial ordination, and accept ordination at the hands of the Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church, then there can be "recognition and reciprocity;" but not until then.

We are exceedingly glad that the Methodist Church has never sent a committee on such a fool's errand as that of asking for "recognition and reciprocity" at the hands of this pretentious little sect.

The Turkish Question.

The situation in Turkey is growing more and more critical day by day. It is estimated that, at least, ten thousand Armenians have been ruthlessly butchered in the last twelve months. The great civilized nations are demanding of the Turkish government protection for the Armenians and certain reforms in governmental affairs. It is evident that Turkey is little inclined to make these concessions; but unless the nations disagree among themselves, she will doubtless be coerced into acquiescence with these demands. But, even should she make an attempt to bring about the desired reforms, it is doubtful whether she will be able to do so.

The Sultan's subjects are apparently ripe for revolt. The time is drawing near when the Turkish government will be numbered among the things that were.

The A. A. W.

The Association for the Advancement of Women held its annual session in this city last week. A number of distinguished women were present from all parts of the country. The session lasted several days. Addresses were delivered upon a great variety of subjects. The members of the association were the recipients of much social attention during their stay.

By a vote of 69 to 37 the suffrage section of the new South Carolina Constitution was adopted last week. It allows anyone to register during the next two years who can read and write, or who can understand a section of the Constitution which may be read to him, or who has property worth a hundred dollars. After two years the privilege of illiterate registration, by understanding what is read, is withdrawn.

BOOKS.

A CIRCUIT OF THE GLOBE. By Bishop Charles B. Galloway. Nashville, Tenn.: Publishing House Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Barbee & Smith, agents. 1895. Price, $1.

The above-named work is a beautifully printed, neatly bound 12 mo. of 464 pages, with a brief, but very appropriate introduction by Dr. E. E. Hoss, editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate. The work is substantially a republication of the letters written for the Nashville Advocate during the Bishop's recent journey around the world. These letters were copied from the Nashville Advocate, in whole or in part, by nearly all the papers in Southern Methodism. They were universally admired; and their publication in book form is in response to a popular demand. An extensive sale is assured in advance. Those who read the letters as originally published will want them in book form, while thousands who did not read them in the papers will make haste to procure the book. Its circulation will be vastly beneficial to the church.

We quite agree with Dr. Hoss in saying: "While it can not fail to be instructive and stimulating in many ways, it will especially aid in developing an increased interest in the great cause of Christian missions." It is illustrated with a number of handsome engravings.

CALIFORNIA SKETCHES, NEW AND OLD. By Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald. Illustrated. Nashville, Tenn.: Publishing House of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Barbee & Smith, agents. 1895. Price, $1.

All well-posted Methodists know something of "California Sketches." The two small volumes bearing that title, which were published several years ago while the author sat upon the tripod of the Nashville Advocate, have had a tremendous run. They belong to a class of literature that is universally popular. Young and old, rich and poor, learned and unlearned, all alike have feasted upon these masterly descriptions of men and things in the olden time in that land of wonders, California.

The present publication is not merely a republication in one volume of the two works bearing that title. Some of the former sketches have been omitted, and several new ones have been added. The work is adorned with several well-designed illustrations. The great popularity which the work has had for a number of years will no doubt be enhanced by the new form here given it.

Public sentiment against bull-fighting is so strong that the management of the Atlanta Exposition was obliged to eliminate that feature of the big show. The managers of the bull-fight attachment, however, have obtained permission from the city authorities to set up shop in the city outside the Exposition Grounds, and those who are willing to pay a good round sum for the privilege can now see an American counterfeit of the popular amusement of Spain.

The "registered letter" business of the United States government is decreasing at a rapid rate. This is not at all strange, as the registered letter is a very unreliable way of sending money. If a registered letter is captured by a train robber, or destroyed in any manner, the government does not make good the loss. This being the case, it is not strange that post-office money orders and express orders are driving out the registered letter.

Great Britain has sent her ultimatum to Venezuela. She makes no concession whatever, but still claims all the territory in dispute and demands reparation for the arrest of officers in that territory some time since. As Great Britain is strong and Venezuela weak, the ultimatum may be accepted. If it should not be, and if England resorts to arms to enforce her demands, what action will the United States take? If she takes no action, then the Monroe doctrine will be a back number.

The working people in this country are the best-paid, best-fed, best-clothed, best-housed, and generally best-cared-for of any working people on the globe. More working people—that is, manual laborers—in this country own their own homes than in any other country in the world; there are fewer cases of dire distress among our laborers than in any other land; yet they are not contented, and this fact of itself is not a bad sign. If they were contented, they would cease to improve; they would cease to advance. Their discontent and constant attempts after something better are, in themselves, good indications.—St. Louis Advocate.

Is a License Necessary to Constitute a Preacher in Our Church?

MR. EDITOR: The position taken by some of your correspondents that it is not necessary to have a license from the church to authorize one to preach naturally suggests to my mind the question, "Way then license anyone." Why does one person need to have license more than another, if anyone who pleases may preach without license? Apply this reasoning of your correspondents to civil government, and see how awkwardly it would work. If no one can be governor of Louisiana without being elected, nor inducted into office until he is solemnly sworn to maintain the Constitution, and faithfully execute laws; then if any citizen of his own mind and will assumes the office and attempts to govern, would not every sensible man say he was without authority to act? And so of a judge. Can any man who chooses so do so, assume the office of a judge and preside in our courts.

If, then, there is no express law prohibiting citizens from such assumptions let us then ask if citizens are at liberty to assume such positions. This is the trend of the reasoning of some of your correspondents in regard to our church government. It seems to me the very fact that men are elected and licensed preaches by the clearest implication that election and license are imperatively necessary before anyone in our church can assume the position and discharge the duties of a preacher. It seems to me that the cases cited (Sister Hays and Sister Lyons) are not analogous nor relevant; neither of these estimable ladies ever claimed or attempted to be preachers. They were officers in the Woman's Missionary and Temperance Societies, and never claimed to be anything more. J. B. WALKER.

Indian Mission.

I am waiting patiently to hear from the brethren and sisters with regard to amounts they will send to Conference by their pastors for the Indian Mission in Mississippi, but have only received one since my last report. Dr. E. B. Parten, of Decatur, Miss., promised to send me $2.50. Many thanks to the Doctor. Now, who will be the next? Oh, the time is so short, and so little done! What we do must be done quickly.

Brethren and sisters of the North Mississippi Conference, please send amounts to Bro. R. G. Potter by your pastors; and of the Mississippi Conference, to me. Send me postal card to Oak Ridge by Dec. 1, reporting amounts, so I will know who to see about it. The brethren who have anything for the mission please report it to me as early after arriving at Conference as convenient. Please help, one and all. Your brother in Christ,

A. D. MILLER.

An Important Office.

To properly fill its office and functions, it is important that the blood be pure. When it is in such a condition, the body is almost certain to be healthy. A complaint at this time is catarrh in some of its various forms. A slight cold develops the disease in the head. Droppings of corruption passing into the lungs bring on consumption. The only way to cure this disease is to purify the blood. The most obstinate cases of catarrh yield to the medicinal powers of Hood's Sarsaparilla as if by magic, simply because it reaches the seat of the disease, and by purifying and vitalizing the blood, removes the cause. Not only does Hood's Sarsaparilla do this, but it gives renewed vigor to the whole system, making it possible for good health to reign supreme.

Notice.

Lamar, the pastor of our church, has employed me to assist him in a protracted meeting at Tahlequah, to begin the tenth and continue four weeks. The National Council meets about that time, and also the session of United States Court, and we wish the prayers of the brethren that we take that Cherokee city for Christ, including the National Male and Female Seminaries.

THE FOUNDING OF THE CHURCH AT ANTIOCH.

(Acts xi, 1-26.)

The Antioch of our lesson is the capital of Syria. Also called Remath and Riblath in Scripture. To be distinguished from Antioch of Pisidia of Asia Minor.

1 The disciples at Jerusalem, mortified because of Peter's association with the Gentiles, "held their peace" when told of God's wondrous grace. They were open to conviction.

(1) Most people are the slaves of prejudice. Unreasonably form opinion before both sides of a given question are presented.

(2) Say what you will, your arguments are of no avail. Said slaves of prejudice will interrupt you with, "As I was going to say."

(3) Weaklings—and they abound—are dominated not by reason, but by their emotions. These emotions govern the will. And he

"Who's convinced against his will
Is of the same opinion still."

2 Arriving at Antioch, Barnabas "saw the grace of God." Loud-mouthed profession he did not seem to regard.

(1) The world must not only hear, but also see, that we are children of God; that we passed from darkness to light.

(2) Individual Christianity is a life—a life in its incipiency, development and maturity, a life of God and for God.

(3) Actions speak louder than words. Men must perceive that we have been with Christ, must see our unadulterated piety.

(4) Yes, we are Christ's witnesses. But on the character of the witness hinges the use or uselessness of the testimony.

3. It was at Antioch that the followers of our Master were first called Christians. Precious appellation!

(1) Christians—like Christ. Washed in Christ's blood, saved by his grace, spiritually renewed by the power of his resurrection. "Christ liveth in me."

(2) Christians, in whom is the mind which was also in Christ. Meek, lowly, patient, faithful.

(3) Christians, who walk as did their Master. A life of prayer, of toil, of self-sacrifice, obedience. Christ has left us an example that we should follow his footsteps.

Are you a Christian?

Money for Everyone!

I can't understand why people complain of hard times, when a woman or man can make from $5 to $10 a day easily. All have heard of the wonderful success of the Climax Dish Washer; yet we are apt to think we can't make money selling it; but anyone can make money, because every family wants one. I made $178.36 in the last three months, after paying all expenses, and attended to my regular business besides. You don't have to canvass; as soon as people know you have it for sale, they send for a Dish Washer. Address the Climax Mfg. Co., Columbus, Ohio, for particulars. Send for sample Dish Washer and go to work at once and you will very soon have a full pocketbook and a light heart. Remember the Climax Mfg. Co. do not ask you for any pay until you have a Dish Washer sold.

To the Preachers of the Patronizing Conferences.

I will be greatly obliged if you will settle your accounts as far as possible before the meeting of Conference. W. C. BLACK, Publisher.

Mission Thoughts.

In this gospel land of ours God has so blessed us that we may, every Sabbath, hear the precious words of the Bible explained and be taught the way to lead a better and nobler life. Here we also enjoy the benefit of Sabbath-schools, books, papers, and religious literature of every description, scattered like Autumn leaves throughout our land. In the midst of all these blessings little do we realize the benefits we enjoy over the millions of men women and children in heathen nations who know nothing about the Bible. Though obscure be our lot, and insignificant seem our efforts in comparison with the grand achievements of thousands around us, we must all bear in mind that we are, each and everyone, divinely commissioned to aid in the salvation of each precious soul within our influence. All the grand and noble achievements that adorn the pages of history, the innumerable discoveries and inventions that stamp us as the age of progress, are as nothing in the comparison of a human soul.

Across the waves they plead for gospel light, and it becomes our imperative duty to answer that Macedonian cry by sending missionaries to the many destitute races still groping in midnight, heathen darkness. In obeyance with the divine injunction, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature," many thousand missionaries are scattered over the earth, threading every plane of ignorance and danger, pointing lost souls to the cross of Christ. And, notwithstanding the many noble efforts that have been and are still being put forth, untold numbers in China, India, Africa, Corea, Japan, Mexico, South America and in many of the far-scattered islands of the Pacific are still under the awful doom of heathenism. As human nature is prone to worship, in one form or another, the greater portion of these millions are worshiping idols of brass, wood or stone. In India there are 285,000,000 who worship idols. In India alone the people worship 35 000,000 different gods. In Japan as in India the number of idols worshiped is appalling.

We have all heard of the untiring labors of two of America's greatest missionaries, D. J. W. Lambuth and Rev. E. P. Scott. The former spent thirty-two years of his life in China before going to Japan, laboring unceasingly for the salvation of thousands and thousands of heathens who had never seen the Bible or heard the name of Jesus. Doubtless we have all heard of how the latter, while a missionary in India, as he walked the streets one day, saw one of the strangest-looking heathen he thought ever lived. Being told that he belonged to one of the most uncivilized and murderous of the inland tribes, and that no one had ventured to preach the gospel to them, he at once informed his fellow-missionaries that he must follow the Macedonian cry; so, imploring divine guidance and direction, and taking his violin and staff, started. He traveled on for several days, and finally found himself surrounded by the savages. Every spear was pointed at his heart. He thought life short; and, thinking of nothing else, he began to sing. With violin and closed eyes he began that old familiar hymn, "All hail the power of Jesus' name," and sang on till he reached the third stanza, and after singing,

"Let every kindred, every tribe,
On this terrestrial ball,
To Him all majesty ascribe,
And crown Him Lord of all,"

he opened his eyes. The spears had fallen from their hands and tears were flowing down their cheeks. They invited him to their homes, and he labored for many years among them. When ill health compelled him to return to America, they followed him for thirty miles imploring him to come back to them.

If men with such courage and fortitude can brave such dangers for these poor benighted heathen, then let us, in our Christian homes, give all the aid we can for missions, remembering that it is our Savior saying, "In as much as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

"Shall we whose souls are lighted
With wisdom from on high,
Shall we to men benighted
The lamp of life deny?
Salvation! O salvation!
The joyful sound proclaim,
Till earth's remotest nation
Has learned Messiah's name."

Our Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self threading shuttle, self setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.

"ARLINGTON B"

The "Arlington B" self threading sewing machine has a large high arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take up, convenient to set with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One darner, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one needle (braider packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one screw, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned, and processed over a nickel finish. Has six new bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearings polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack device to relieve straining the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—The ARLINGTON B is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel oscillating shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell without spring, can be run without bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

HEAVEN.

BY NANCY A. W. PRIEST.

Beyond these chilling winds and gloomy skies,
Beyond death's cloudy portal,
There is a land where beauty never dies,
Where love becomes immortal.

A land whose life is never dimmed by shade;
Whose fields are ever vernal;
Where nothing beautiful can ever fade,
But blooms for age eternal.

The city's shining towers we may not see
With our dim earthly vision,
For Death, the silent warder, keeps the key
That opes the gates elysian.

But sometimes, when adown the western sky
A fiery sunset lingers,
Its golden gates swing inward noiselessly,
Unlocked by unseen fingers.

And while they stand a moment half ajar,
Gleams from the inner glory
Stream brightly through the azure vault afar,
And half reveal the story.

O land unknown! O land of love divine!
Father, all-wise, eternal!
Oh, guide these wandering, way-worn feet of mine
Into those pastures vernal.

Housekeeper or Homemaker.

Are you a housekeeper or a homemaker? There is a vast difference in the two. The housekeeper prides herself on shining floors and neat shelves. Dust and dirt flee before a cyclone. "A place for everything and everything in its place," is her motto, and her husband and children know to their sorrow that "cleanliness is akin to godliness." Her dinners are always on time, her children's clothes are the perfection of neatness, and the wheels of the domestic machinery never annoy others by their grating. She gives her pitiful all to her family, and what does she get in return? An aching head and back, nerves that become the family bugbear, until her children go elsewhere for sympathy and comfort, because she is always too busy to stop and comfort or advise them. But the homemaker brings to her task a love which holds her husband and children fast in an immortal chain. At evening there is an easy chair for tired bodies, a smile and sympathy for aching brains; in all the plans and joys of life the homemaker comes first. Home is the magnet which draws the children together even after they have families of their own and are widely scattered. Home comfort and home sympathy give the worker strength through all the struggles of life. A homemaker wields her scepter in a basement or in a garret. Give her a tent in the forest and her fire of twigs burns brightly, her kettle boils merrily, and her smile and song rival the music of the birds. It is the homemaker who makes the name of a woman blessed. — Laura A. Smith, in Queen of Fashion.

He Had a Baby.

A touching story is related by a contemporary as follows:

"No, I won't drink with you to-day, boys," said a drummer to several companions, as they settled down in a smoking car and passed the bottle. "The fact is, boys, I have quit drinking; I've sworn off."

"What's the matter with you, old boy?" sang out one. "If you've quit drinking, something's up. What is it?"

"Well, boys, I will tell you. Yesterday I was in Chicago. Down on South Clark street a customer of mine keeps a pawnshop in connection with his other business. I called on him, and while I was there a young man of not more than twenty-five, wearing threadbare clothes and looking as hard as if he hadn't seen a sober day for a month, came in with a little package in his hand. He unwrapped it and handed the article to the pawnbroker, saying, 'Give me ten cents.' And, boys, what do you suppose it was? A pair of baby's shoes; little things with the bottoms only a trifle soiled, as if they had been only worn once or twice. 'Where did you get these?' asked the pawnbroker. 'Got 'em at home,' replied the man, who had an intelligent face and the manner of a gentleman, despite his sad condition. 'My wife bought them for our baby. Give me ten cents for 'em—I want a drink.' 'You had better take the shoes back to your wife; the baby will need them,' said the pawnbroker. 'No, she won't, because she's dead. She's lying at home now—died last night.' As he said this the poor fellow broke down, bowed his head on the showcase and cried like a child.

"Boys," said the drummer, "you may laugh if you please; but I—I have a baby at home, and I swear I'll never drink another drop."

Good Manners.

"A man is known by the company he keeps; and a man's company is known by his manner of expressing himself."

This applies not to verbal expression, but to vital expression. The manners of a man are the expression of his life. Manners are seen where one is known best. In the home, in the shop, among the commonplace, ordinary affairs of week-day care, when one is only normally conscious of himself and others, then manners appear. It is almost disgusting to specify the common manners of common people; but if you are privileged to travel in cars or overcrowded thoroughfares, to overhear boisterous and boastful conversations, to have fumes of malodorous tobacco blown in your face, to see floors and sidewalks used as receptacles for unwholesome refuse, and to meet other similar evidences of crude indifference or barbarous ignorance, you know the needs of a new gospel of good manners.

Christian young people should study to show themselves approved unto both God and men. Actions should not follow impulses. As representatives of Jesus Christ, we ought to think on the things which are pure, lovely, and of good report. We ought to incarnate these things. Mutual sympathy and mutual tolerance are possible only as a consequence of good manners; and Christian manners are the only good manners.—The New York Christian Advocate.

Love for Mother.

When gruff old Dr. Johnson was fifty years old, he wrote to his aged mother as if he were still her wayward, but loving boy: "You have been the best mother, and, I believe, the best woman in the world. I thank you for all your indulgence to me and beg forgiveness for all I have done ill, and of all that I omitted to do well." John Quincy Adams did not part with his mother until he was nearly, or quite, as old as this; yet his cry even then was: "O God, could she have been spared yet a little longer! * * * Without her the world seems to me like a solitude." When President Nott, of Union College, was more than ninety years old, and had been for half a century a college president, as strength and sense failed him in his dying hours, the memory of his mother's tenderness was fresh and potent; and he could be hushed to needed sleep by a gentle patting on the shoulder, and the singing to him of the old-time lullabies, as if his mother were still sitting by his bedside in loving ministry, as she had been well-nigh a century before. The true son never grows old to a true mother.

Keep Your Friends.

Never cast aside your friends if by any possibility you can retain them. We are the weakest of spendthrifts if we let one friend drop off through inattention, or let one push away another; or if we hold aloof from one for petty jealousy, or heedless slight or roughness. Would you throw away a diamond because it pricked you? One good friend is not to be weighed against the jewels of all the earth. If there is coolness or unkindness between us, let us come face to face and have it out, quick; before the love grows cold. Life is too short to quarrel in, or to carry black thoughts of friends. It is easy to lose a friend, but a new one will not come for calling, nor make up for the old one when he comes. —Universalist Herald.

When a man is too lazy to get above his neighbors by honest climbing, he stays on the ground and tries to make himself appear taller by belittling them.

The Roll Call in Heaven.

This incident is related by an army chaplain: The hospital tents had been filled up fast as the wounded men had been brought to the rear. Among the number was a young man mortally wounded, and not able to speak. It was near midnight, and many a loved one from our homes lay sleeping on the battlefield—that sleep that knows no waking until Jesus shall call for them. The surgeons had been an their round of duty, and for a moment all was quiet. Suddenly this young man, before speechless, calls in a clear, distinct voice, "Here." The surgeon hastened to his side and asked what he wished. "Nothing," said he. "They are calling the roll in heaven, and I was answering to my name." He turned his head, and was gone to join the army whose uniform is washed white in the blood of the Lamb. In the great roll-call of eternity will your name be heard? Can you answer "Here"? Are you one of the soldiers of salvation? —Christian Commonwealth.

A Great Man.

The Rev. Dr. Broadus recently related the following incident during a Sabbath-school talk in Detroit:

An old man used to sweep the street crossings for gratuitous pennies, near the Houses of Parliament, for many years. One day he was absent. Upon inquiry he was found by a missionary ill, in a little attic chamber, barely furnished with cot and stool.

"You are lonely here," the missionary said. "Has anyone called upon you?"

"Oh, yes," he replied, "several persons have called—Mr. Gladstone for one. He called and read to me."

"Mr. Gladstone called? And what did he read?"

"He sat on that stool there and read the Bible to me."

What a beautiful position! The greatest statesman in the world, sitting on a stood, in an attic, reading the Word of God to a street sweeper! Great men lose none of their greatness by kindness to God's poor.—Our Church Homes.

To make people love us we must love them. But we must not love them for the sake of making them love us, for the sake of larger influence, smoother sailing, and better positions. This flaw would quickly reveal itself. People must be loved for their own sake, with no thought back of it. To do this one must see in them something lovable; and if there are things of a contrary sort, they must be thrust aside and disregarded. More faith in men greatly helps more love. So does more pity. Where we can hardly respect, we can have compassion; where the love of complacency is impossible, the love of benevolence may thrive. Everything depends on the point of view. Compass it we can if determined, and compass it we must if we are to do much good. Love rules all, and finds a way everywhere.—Zion's Herald.

Losing the temper takes all the sweet, pure feeling out of life. You may get up in the morning with a clean heart, full of song, and start out as happy as a bird, and the moment you are crossed and you give way to your temper, the clean feeling vanishes, and a load as heavy as lead is rolled upon the heart, and you go through the rest of the day feeling like a culprit. And anyone who has experienced this feeling knows that it can not be shaken off, but must be prayed off. Get the habit—a glorious one—of referring all to Christ. How did he feel, think, act? So then must I feel, think and act. Should I please myself? "For even Christ pleased not himself."—Frederick W. Robertson.

Equanimity a Sign of Health.

Worry is a curse and a source of much unhappiness. It seams the face with lines and furrows, and has a most depressing effect upon that hyper-sensitive organ, the stomach, which at such times becomes a most unwilling laggard servant. Indeed, it is safe to say that unless encouraged by a cheerful temper and bright, or at least, hopeful thought, the stomach will play truant or sulk and do no good work. The physiological explanation of this is the close alliance of the great sympathetic nerves, which are worse than the telegraph for carrying bad news; the worry and anxiety which depress the brain produce simultaneously a semi-paralysis of the nerves of the stomach; gastric juices will not flow, and presto! there is indigestion.

One sign of mental health is serenity of temper and a self-control that enables us to bear with equanimity the petty trials and jars of life, especially those arising from contact with scolding, irascible, irritating persons.

Serenity of mind comes easy to some and hard to others.

It can be taught and learned. We ought to have teachers who are able to educate us in this department of our natures quite as much as in music or art. Think of a school of classes for training men and women to hold themselves serenely amid all the trials which beset them. As it is now, most of our educators urge us on to be ambitious to excel others, and in the end, if not careful, we lose our mental equipose and with it health and happiness.

One of the secrets of the mind cure is the health it gives to those who have lost their mental equipose through worry to throw it off again. Unburdening themselves, they are once more able to do their work and rejoice.—Journal of Hygiene.

Pure Air Rather than Medicine.

It isn't drugs or medicine that is needed at all; it is plenty of pure air that can be had. Open the windows and the doors, clear out the cellar and ventilate it thoroughly, remove the dampness, the mustiness, the ancient odor, the smell of decay which greets the nostrils when one enters from the health-giving atmosphere out of doors. Never mind if the outer air bears the taint of the gas-house, the manufactory, or some other unpleasant thing; it is also mingled with the health and strength giving forces of nature, and is certainly better for the human system than the same air which has been shut up and contaminated for an indefinite period, with no chance for purification.

Don't mind, even, if a little dust is brought in; a few minutes with the duster will put the house in good order again, and even at the worst, dust is not half so bad as disease. And as for the fear of draughts, with colds and a thousand resultant evils following in their train, nineteen-twentieths of that is imaginary, and the other twentieth is easily avoidable.—Good Housekeeping.

Some Health Hints.

Never take a meal under a feeling of exhaustion from exercise. Never go into a sick room when very weary. Never exercise violently before a meal. The exercise which benefits invalids and infirm people is that which is moderate and extended in space or time. One of the best exercises for women, who are not very well, is a walk in the streets or in the fields, with a cheerful companion. To find an exercise suitable for women indoors is very difficult; sewing is too confining, scrubbing the floor is too violent, and under the great variety of circumstances under which the women are placed in families, we do nothing more than to lay down a principle, and let each one act in reference to it; that exercise is best which keeps the body in motion and interests the mind pleasurably.—Troy Times.

Rev. Ezekiah H. McNabb.

Bro. McNabb was born in Leflore county, Miss., Jan. 9, 1860, and died in McNutt, same county, Oct. 24, 1895. He was the son of Ezekiah McNabb. Bro. McNabb grew to manhood in the same county in which he was born, and married Miss Rosa Beck, Jan. 6, 1889, who is left, with four little children, to mourn their loss.

Bro. McNabb was a local elder in the M. E. Church, South, on McNutt circuit, and was a faithful minister of the gospel as long as his health would permit him to preach. He was devoted to the church, and would make almost any sacrifice for her interest. He was ever ready to co-operate with his pastor in building up the church and for the conversion of sinners. He was for two years employed by his presiding elder in charge of a mission work in the bounds of the district. These two years were years of hardship, toil, and personal deprivation. He found, on taking charge of this work, that a house of worship was necessary to success in his field of labor. He determined to build, though much discouraged by brethren and friends. He set about the work, and only by heroic efforts did he succeed, doing a great amount of the work with his own hands. But success crowned his effort, and now there stands as a monument to his memory a house for the Lord. Having accomplished his purpose in this respect, he saw a home for the preacher was necessary to complete the job; so he went to work to build a parsonage, and by the same indomitable energy, and a deal of hard work with his own hands, he soon had a comfortable house for the preacher. So his work abides, but not in these material things alone. Having laid the foundation for permanent success, he began the work of building up the scattered membership and getting sinners converted. The Lord blessed these efforts of his faithful servant, and a most glorious revival of religion prevailed all around the work. Consequently he is embalmed in the hearts and memory of that people as, perhaps, no other man can be.

Bro. McNabb was one of the best men I ever knew, and this is the universal verdict of all who knew him. He was not only faithful in the direct work of the church as minister, steward, or Sunday-school superintendent, but he was ever ready to help the poor and needy. Though not able to give of earthly goods, he was ready to lend a helping hand in any way to give comfort and bring relief to suffering humanity. He was a very spiritual man, and his hearty "Amens!" in the public services would help his pastor to preach and the congregation to hear. Having thus lived, he was ready when the change came, and had nothing to do but wait until his Lord should call him to his reward.

The large and sorrowing congregation that attended his funeral services was but an index to his universal popularity, and showed the very high esteem in which he was held by the entire people. But he is gone, and we miss him in the family circle, in the social circle, in the church of God, and everywhere where good was to be done.

He died of pneumonia after about a week's confinement to his bed. He passed away calmly, peacefully, and triumphantly. We buried his little two-years-old Ezekiah the day before we buried the father. He knew not of the death of his little boy, but soon they met on the other shore. May the God of all grace comfort the dear wife and little children, and bring them finally to the home of the blessed!

OBITUARIES.

KEARNEY—GOSTIN THOMAS KEARNEY was born Nov. 15, 1865, at the family homestead, in Madison county, Miss., and died in the home of his birth, Oct. 19, 1895. He was the oldest living son of the Hon. Walter G. Kearney. He obtained his education in the public schools of his native county and in the State University at Oxford. He had an excellent mind and a most retentive memory. He was a great reader, devouring the contents of every book and periodical which came within his reach. He had a great fondness for historical works, and the newspapers were his especial delight. Few men were better posted in politics, or had a more intelligent comprehension of the situation of local, State or National affairs.

He had the gentlest, tenderest nature; his generosity knew no bounds. He was never heard to mutter an unkind word to any member of his family. Indeed, a noble trait of his life was to speak no ill of any human being. He loved his mother with a devotion unsurpassed, and had the deepest affection and profoundest respect for his father. To each of his brothers he was a true friend and comrade, and was in turn sincerely loved by them. For his only sister, Miss Belle Kearney, even from his youth and extreme boyhood, he entertained the most loyal attachment and a knightly admiration.

He joined the Methodist Church when he was about twelve years of age, and had always the greatest veneration for Christianity, giving most liberally to the support of its ministers. He was very fond of reading the Bible, and had so diligently studied the sacred pages that he had become familiarly conversant with its blessed teachings.

It is sad to contemplate the death of one just in the prime of his manhood, when he could have been so useful, so helpful; but God who called him hence doeth all things well. C. G. ANDREWS.

JONES—ONA JONES, the eleven-year-old and only daughter of Rev. Bro. and Sister L. J. Jones, was taken suddenly ill on Oct. 31, and suffered violently until Nov. 5, when she said good-by to this world and went home to heaven.

It was the writer's privilege to be with little Ora the last two days of her life, and never before have we witnessed such a manifestation of the power and love of God. On the night of Nov. 3 she spent several hours in sending messages of comfort and encouragement to absent friends and loved ones, in expressing her love and gratitude to us who stood around her bedside and watched over her; and while we used the means as best we could to quiet and ease her pain, she quoted beautiful verses and promises from the Bible, and in singing stanzas of beautiful hymns and shouting hallelujah and praises and "Glory be to God!" Among her last words were, "Friends, I am going home to glory, and I want you all to meet me there;" and to papa and mama: "Don't weep for me. I am not afraid to die; I am going home. I love Jesus, and I know he loves me, too. I know when I get up yonder I will be happier than I could ever be in this world. Yes, I can hear the sweet music of heaven now. Glory be to God! I can see little brother and sister now. Oh, how beautiful they are! Now I hear Jesus calling little children like me to come unto him. Yes, glory be to God! he is right here now to take me home with him. Good-by, good by!" She then quietly fell asleep in the arms of Jesus.

May God bless and comfort the bereaved parents! B. N. SAYLS.

CLARKE—FLORENCE, daughter of C. H. and Addie Clarke, was born Oct. 6, 1881, in Washington county, Miss., and died Oct. 18, 1895. She professed faith in Christ at eight years of age, and was received into the Methodist Church at Greenville, Miss., by Rev. J. A. Bowen.

I have known Florence for three years, and she has often been in my home. I have been her pastor for two and one-half years, and I have never known a more consistent, conscientious Christian. She was obedient to her parents, and kind and affectionate to her brothers and sisters. She was loved by all who knew her. Even the servants were won by her kindness and wept at her death. She died of that dreaded swamp disease, hematuria. She seemed to be conscious that she would not recover, and so expressed herself. She sang several hymns, the last one being "Sweet By and By," and then fell asleep in Jesus.

Weep not, loved ones, for your darling. She was God's, and he has taken her to himself to draw you heavenward. Be faithful, and you shall join her in the beautiful beyond, where parting will be no more. J. C. MIMMS.

HODGES—Bro. JOHN CASON HODGES, son of J. C. Hodges and Mary Green Hodges, was born in Charleston, S. C., Oct. 15, 1829, and while he was small his parents moved to Mississippi. He was married to Miss Estasia Green, by whom he had five children; three of whom are living. He joined the M. E. Church South, during the year 1852, and has been an acceptable member forty three years. During the last thirty years he has been almost totally blind. I was with him three times since I came to this charge. He suffered much during the last three months of his life from cancer of the tongue, but was patient with it all. He died in the faith Aug. 9 1895, leaving three children and many grandchildren. May God comfort the bereaved!

MORRIS—NETTIE MORRIS, infant daughter of Monroe and F. E. Morris, was born Aug. 4, 1891, in West Feliciana parish, La., and died at home, near Jackson, La., Oct. 9, 1895.

Little Nettie was the idol of the family, being the youngest. She gave papa and mama sunshine in their home for only a few months, and God took her to himself. Cheer up, fond parents; you shall meet little Nettie by-and-by.

nothing lost

Scott's Emulsion makes cod-liver oil taking next thing to a pleasure. You hardly taste it. The stomach knows nothing about it—it does not trouble you there. You feel it first in the strength that it brings: it shows in the color of the cheek, the rounding of the angles, the smoothing of the wrinkles.

It is cod-liver oil digested for you, slipping as easily into the blood and losing itself there as rain-drops lose themselves in the ocean.

What a satisfactory thing this is—to hide the odious taste of cod-liver oil, evade the tax on the stomach, take health by surprise.

There is no secret of what it is made of—the fish-fat taste is lost, but nothing is lost but the taste.

Perhaps your druggist has a substitute for Scott's Emulsion. Isn't the standard all others try to equal the best for you to buy?

TWELVE FULL-PAGE MAPS IN COLORS.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn, New York, in the "New York Evangelist:" "Of all Bibles yet issued in our country, the most superb in execution and completeness of contents is the 'Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.' Sabbath-school teachers will find this elegant volume a little library of information in itself."

REV. ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., President of, and Professor in, the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.: "It pleases me very greatly. I regard the help which it affords to a correct pronunciation of Scripture proper names as doubling the value of the edition. I trust the book will be received as it deserves to be."

The Corbett-Fitzsimmons imbroglio has conferred one great blessing on the country. It has created a greater disgust for the pugilistic cattle than anything that ever happened.

The mayor of Chicago has determined to stop railroad companies' laying tracks in the streets on Sundays. The roads choose that day, because the citizens can not get an injunction then.

Leadville, Colo., has no Chinese, and never has had. If one strays in there he is given the alternative of leaving in a given number of hours, or he hangs. He generally does not overstay his time.

When General Gordon delivered his lecture on "The Last Days of the Confederacy" in Boston recently a G. A. R. post occupied the platform with him, and the papers spoke of him and his lecture in the highest terms.

A cheese dealer of New York has sent the President a bill for $3.40 for cheese furnished the White House in May. He says that six months is too long a credit for a President, and threatens to sue unless the bill is paid at once.

The Episcopal Churches in this city have, during recent years, been developing many methods of practical Christian work, and among the most recent undertakings, but one which has been in course of development for some time, is the school for deaconesses organized last Friday.

On last Wednesday the New West India Line steamship "American" arrived at this port, and her advent broke all previous records of monster steamships, the "American" being by all odds the largest vessel which has ever visited this port. She has a carrying capacity of about 22,000 bales of cotton.

The coronation of the statue of Our Lady of Prompt Succor and Child took place at the Ursuline Convent, in this city, last Sunday. Through the efforts of the ladies a sum of $2,065 in cash was collected and gold for the crowns valued at $1 500. The stones used in the work have been valued at from $6 000 to $8 000. The actual manufacture of the crowns cost $650.

The first gun in the campaign for municipal reform was fired on Nov. 6 by the organization of the Citizens League of New Orleans, whose objects, as declared by the constitution adopted, are to elect honest and able men to municipal offices, and men of integrity to the Legislature from the city of New Orleans, who shall pledge themselves to vote for a change in the election laws insofar as they may apply to the city of New Orleans, which will give the people the right of an expression of their will at the polls.

It is reported that Charles Broadway Rouss, on Saturday, sent $25 000 to the New York Association of the Alumni of the University of Virginia to go into the fund to replace the 60 000 volumes of the university library recently destroyed by fire. George H Byrd and Mrs. Sinclair also contributed $1 000 each for the same purpose. The New York Association itself subscribed $2,500 when a meeting was called by its president, Dr. George Tucker Harrison, at which the association passed resolutions pledging itself to restore the whole library.

FOREIGN.

Czar Nicholas, of Russia, owns the largest landed estate in the world. It is 100 000 000 acres.

The press of Mexico is unanimous in demanding that the Mexican government should buy Cuba, or get it in some way.

Saturday last was Lord Mayor's day in London, and the usual mummery and show marked the induction of the new lord mayor into office.

The ambassadors of the powers do not regard the new Turkish ministry with favor; it is not expected to last long, and it is not thought that it will be able to do anything worth mentioning towards clearing the political atmosphere.

The United States ambassador, Hon. Thomas F. Bayard, delivered the inaugural address on Nov. 7, to the Philosophic Society in Edinburgh. It was entitled "Individual Liberty, the Germ of National Progress and Permanence."

The Turkish minister for foreign affairs, Said Pasha, has promised the ambassadors of the powers a definite reply within two days as to what steps the porte intends to take for the restoration of order in Armenia, and to provide for the protection of Christians in that part of the Turkish empire.

If the disorders continue in Armenia the Russians in a few days will march into that country without waiting for the sanction of the powers. It is said that a conference of the European powers will be held concurrent with this move, either in Constantinople, London or Berlin, to decide the duration of the Russian occupation and the geographical limits thereof.

New Prospect Camp Meeting.

Despite the devil in the camp, we had a good camp meeting. Many precious souls were saved, about thirty young men and young ladies and a few children were happily converted, and thirteen persons joined our church. Twenty babies were baptized during the meeting. Christians shouted and praised the Lord, and backsliders were reclaimed. Bright faces, triumphant shouts, touching prayers, sweet songs and handshakings were some of the characteristics of the meeting. I have received fifty-two members and baptized thirty babies during the year.

Our piney-woods' preachers, so called by some, did most of the preaching at New Prospect. I am not surprised at such fine results. God will always honor the preaching of such saintly men as Rev. C. A. Powell, P. E., of the Seashore district; and P. Howard, Robert Selby, G. R. Ellis and Lyman Roberts. May God richly bless the labors of these brethren!

Bishop Keener did the right thing when he appointed Rev. C. A. Powell presiding elder of the Seashore district. Bro. Powell is a Christian gentleman of the highest order. He is a preacher's friend, a good man, a safe guide, a wise counsellor and a first-class presiding elder, and every loyal Methodist in this district is in love with him. May God give us more such men! I trust he will be our presiding elder next year. God bless you, Mr. Editor, and also the ADVOCATE and its readers!

Vancleave, Miss.

As staple as sugar, and equally if not more useful is Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

"The Old Oaken Bucket" was written in 1817 under the following circumstances: "The family was living at the time on Duane street, New York. The poet came home to dinner one very warm day, having walked from his office near the foot of Wall street. Being much heated with the exercise, he drank a glass of water—New York pump water—exclaiming, as he replaced the glass on the table: 'That is very refreshing; but how much more refreshing would it be to take a good, long draught this warm day from the old oaken bucket I left hanging in my father's well at home!' Hearing this the poet's wife, who was always a suggestive body, said: 'Samuel, why would du't t pretty subject for a poem. The poet took the hint, and under the inspiration of the moment sat down and poured out from the very depth of his heart those beautiful lines which have immortalized the name of Woodworth."—The Critic.

There are some spirits which must go through a discipline analogous to that sustained by Elijah. The storm struggle must precede the still small voice. There are minds which must be convulsed with doubt before they can repose in faith. There are hearts which must be broken with disappointment before they can rise into hope. Blessed is the man who, when the tempest has spent its fury, recognizes his Father's voice in its undertone, and bares his head and bows his knee as Elijah did. To such spirits it seems as if God had said: "In the still sunshine and ordinary ways of life you can not meet me; but, like Job, in the desolation of the tempest you shall see my form and hear my voice, and know that your Redeemer liveth."—F. W. Robertson.

Illustrations are helpful in making a sermon stay with the hearer. An abstract statement appeals only to the hearer's intellect. It has to be suspended in mid-air and held there by a purely intellectual process. It is hard for him to reproduce, and frequent reproduction is necessary in order to retention. But the same truth may be suspended on a framework and it will stay. An illustration puts the hearer's imagination to work. He sees the picture; once grasped, that image becomes exactly a thing of memory. It is easily apprehended and still more easily recalled. The average congregation will remember an illustration much longer than a formless truth, because it is the property of two of the intellectual powers.—Central Baptist.

Is it not perfectly erroneous to talk of the failure of missions, when they started with 120 despised Galileans, and when now there are at least 120,000,000 of Protestants, and they have in their power almost all the wealth and almost all the resources of the world!—Archdeacon Farrar.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

For Over Fifty Years

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

To Whom It May Concern

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of Mini-cu-ol. I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all true that is claimed for it and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, sea ds and all kinds of sores, it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. It is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine that is worthy of a place in every household. W. C BLACK.

A Boon to Embroiderers.

It is hardly more than a year ago that a progressive concern hit upon an ingenious way of putting up its justly celebrated "ASIATIC DYE" Wash Silks in paper holders in such a manner that embroiderers are saved the trouble of unwinding the skein and rewinding it again on card-board, as was customarily done with the old-fashioned skeins to prevent them from roughing and snarling. The Brainard & Armstrong Silk Co., New London, Ct., which holds the exclusive right to put up its silk in this manner, has again demonstrated its originality by the recent publication of a "Doyley and Centrepiece Book," which has chapters on Embroidery Stitches, Centrepieces, Doyleys, Ideal Hunilon, Luncheon and Tea Cloths, Cut Work and Table Spreads in Denim. It contains over seventy engraved illustrations of patterns, and full information as to where they can be obtained, and the proper stitches and threads to be used in working each individual part. In a word, the book deals so comprehensively with the subject that every lady who embroiders can not fail to find it useful.

Bright Christianity.

The Author of the sunshine didn't light at night the dreary church of dim religious shadows—he made the light of day, and told men how to light the night. Progressive Christianity works in the light—the meeting house of dimness isn't the church of success—there is cheer and Christian comfort in the well-illumined meeting room. I furnish the artificial light of night—I have a hook on church lighting—129 pictures of chandeliers for gas, oil, electricity—I have reflectors and side lights—I tell you how best to light your church, and charge you nothing for the information.

THE SCULPTOR BOY.

Chisel in hand stood the sculptor boy,
With his marble block before him;
And his face lit up with a smile of joy
As an angel dream passed o'er him.
He carved it then on the yielding stone
With many a sharp incision;
With heaven's own light the sculpture shone,
He had caught that angel vision.

Sculptors of life are we, as we stand,
With our souls, unscarred, before us,
Waiting the hour when, at God's command,
Our life dream shall pass o'er us.
If we carve it then on the yielding stone,
With many a sharp incision,
That heavenly beauty shall be our own,
Our lives that angel vision.

After the Revival.

I am pretty confident that we often overestimate the good done in a great revival of religion, and just as often underestimate the value of regular, quiet worship. Revivals of religion are indispensable to the progress of the church. We can not get along without them. Men and women are so constituted that they need stirring up. This is true of them in every department of life—in both politics and religion. We have—have to have—revivals in politics. The people become lax, laggard, cold and indifferent, and they have to be stirred up. They need to be interested, to become excited. It seems that it ought not to be so, but it is so, and we have to deal with men as they are, and not as they ought to be. The political pot has to boil in order to get good citizens, and even patriots, to do their duty. This is true in religious matters. The reason for it is found in the nature of men. They grow cold and indifferent, and have to be stirred up. Their minds and hearts become absorbed and preoccupied with the cares and concerns of this world. This is true to some extent with the best of us. It ought not so to be, but so it is, and we have to do with the facts as they are. During a great revival of religion it looks as if religious interest would never cool down again; that we would go right on up the hill of God, and spend the rest of our days among the "delectable mountains." Some of the best of us think and, perhaps, say: "Well, I never will fall back any more; never grow cold, or become lax and indifferent again." It is surprising, even to ourselves, how soon we cool down. The ecstatic feeling does not last long. It is a luxury and a great joy while it does last, and we often grieve that it does not last forever. Some clever people think religion is all ecstasies, all luxuries, but it is not. I doubt if the human frame and mind could last long in this high region and in this rare atmosphere. We are of the earth, earthy, and we have much to do with the commonplace, every-day affairs of this life. We be men and women, and not angels. We live on the earth, and not in heaven; among men, and not in companionship with disembodied spirits. Revivals and ecstasies come occasionally. They do not last continuously; never did, and, perhaps, never will in this world. Some people imagine they do not have religion, or can not enjoy religion apart from a highly exalted state of feeling. This leads them to underestimate the regular, stated means of grace and worship of God. The fact of the business is, the most of our religious life, and, really, the best of it, is on this lower plane, if, indeed, we might call the best the lower. The regular preaching of the Word, the prayer and social meetings of the church, the Sunday-school, family and private prayer, reading the Word of God and reading good books and papers, visiting the sick, comforting the distressed and looking after the poor and needy, doing good of every possible sort—these are the things that bring religious life, health and strength, and give that quiet, sweet peace that fills the soul from day to day. This is the best of the religious life. Right along here the most people make the greatest mistake. It is the neglect of these things that brings leanness to our souls. Amid the stir and excitement—the ecstasy—of a revival their hearts are free and anxious to do these things; but when they cool down it takes courage, pluck and will-force to do them. They ought to do these things whether their hearts be free to them or not; whether they feel like it or not. Do them anyhow. This is practical, every-day religion—the kind that develops character and makes strong men and women.

Too many of our people spend too much time longing for a revival, a religious excitement, tidal wave, to bear them on towards the kingdom of grace and glory. Religion with them is an excitation of feeling, a luxury, a kind of spiritual dissipation. The preacher or preaching that does not stir them in this way is no good. They do not go to hear it. Bible reading is dull, and the weekly prayer meeting commonplace. With them religion is all feeling, and nothing else. Religion as an all-controlling principle and a life is an idea that has never once entered into their minds. It is simply an annual dissipation, and not a daily principle. Their notion is that religion is for enjoyment, and not for service—a selfish pleasure rather than a willing service. Their idea of religion and money is the same. They want both to consume them on their lusts—both for pleasure, for personal gratification. After the revival this class come to the church to preaching, prayer meeting and Sunday-school for a few weeks, and then they lag behind and fall away and fall into their old ways until the revival season comes on again. They march up the hill, and then march down again. They are either on the mountain top or in the valley low—mostly in the valley, or in the "Slough of Despond." GILDEROY.

Alarmists.

The honesty and bravery which speak out openly and promptly against any evil, regardless of whom it involves, are certainly very commendable; but to be constantly finding something alarming, when there is no real cause for alarm, indicates something antipodal to true courage; and the cry of "Wolf! wolf!" when there is no wolf, is inconvenient and annoying. We are growing weary of these startling cries from certain well-meaning alarmists in our church.

A few presiding elders gave to paragraph 120 an interpretation contrary to that commonly received, and at once a number of good brethren rushed into print with charges of "ecclesiastical tyranny" and "lording it over God's heritage," coupled with prophecies of a rending of the church. The alarm of these brethren would be intensely amusing if they were not in such serious earnest, and their cries of alarm did not startle for the moment others who are not thinking. A cry of alarm always startles one who is not expecting it. Why did not these brethren stop and think? They ought to have known that the church intended no "ecclesiastical tyranny" when it enacted paragraph 120; and if it should transpire that the language of the new law is really susceptible of such interpretation, it will be amended or repealed at the next General Conference. There is not the slightest ground for such alarm as has been innocently excited by good Dr. Sawyer and others over paragraph 120.

Another scare equally absurd was gotten up over Dr. Messick's ruling anent local-preacher evangelism. The good brethren did not wait until Bishop Galloway got hold of the question, but rushed out, crying, "Wolf! wolf!" with the vehemence of genuine fright. One word from the Bishop hushed the outcry. Almost all of us foresaw that it would be that way. Why did not these alarmists see it? Groundless fright is very funny, but annoying also.

Somebody suggested that some local preachers were about to have their licenses taken from them for preaching the "second-blessing" theory of sanctification; somebody else added that it had been done; somebody else went further and declared that men were being "turned out of Annual Conferences for preaching it." As a matter of course, nothing of the like has ever been done; nor is there any sort of probability that anything of the kind will ever be done. What ground for so ridiculous a rumor can be conjured up I can not imagine. The man who started it must have been densely ignorant of the spirit and polity of our church, or very reckless with the truth; and the men who believe and repeat it are an astonishment to us all.

It is a strange fact that very many—can I say most?—of the brethren who accept the "second-blessing" doctrine attitudinize as martyrs. They are evidently taught by their leaders to expect to be persecuted. Now, when I read in the New Testament of what persecution means, and then hear men in Mississippi, in the closing years of the nineteenth century, say that they are persecuted, I am amazed. A man in this year of grace and this State of the Union expecting to be persecuted, and that, too, by Methodists, is a picture ridiculously unseemly. It would only be a laughable one were it not that such a suggestion carries with it a statement as antipodal to the spirit of New Testament religion as night is to day, and as false as it is uncharitable. Brethren of the "second-blessing" school preach in my pulpit, and I in theirs. Some of them are my best friends; I love none better than these; we are brethren beloved. I am tired being told that I persecute them; it is utterly and basely false. If any man thinks that because I oppose the "second-blessing" theory, I oppose the men, or persecute them, he neither knows me nor the meaning of argument. I oppose the theory, and shall, because I believe it a false one. When I was ordained I vowed solemnly to try to "banish and drive out all erroneous and strange doctrine contrary to God's Word." I believe this doctrine to be such an one; and honestly as I believe such, so faithfully shall I oppose it—not by persecution, not by any sort of repression, but showing it to be contrary to God's Word. If any preacher in the Mississippi Conference has in any way persecuted any other, or any man, woman or child, for holding or teaching the "second blessing," I stand ready to prosecute such preacher until he be expelled from the church. A persecutor has no place in a Christian church. In this I think my brethren are with me.

It is strange to me that men who name themselves after our Christ can not discuss questions of church polity, such as paragraph 120 and the evangelist question; and the doctrines of theology, such as the "second blessing," without flying into the face of Christian charity, and leveling such charges as "tyranny," "persecution," "bad spirit," and "impure motive." Because men do not agree with us does not mean that they are bad. The very best men can be mistaken. "Charity thinketh no evil."

Regarding Bro Harmon's Perplexity.

I noticed in a recent edition of the ADVOCATE that my good friend, Rev. N. B. Harmon, has been disturbed by the fact that no ecclesiastical censure has been expressed against Bro. Lyons and myself for permitting a woman to speak in our churches, while other brethren have been made to feel the pressure of such censure, notably the case of Bro. Breland. I will not speak for Bro. Lyons, but only for myself.

It is a fact that Miss Tucker did speak in the Wayne Memorial Church; but Miss Tucker did not come to formally preach or conduct a protracted service. She was passing through the city, and was invited by me to speak at the evening service, which she did to the edification of a good audience. Her theme was her work and experience as a city mission worker. Just such a talk as any missionary, foreign or domestic, might make.

It may be that some will fail to see the distinction between this and a formal preaching of the gospel, or assuming charge of a protracted or camp meeting. But be this as it may, I see such a distinction, and am content to abide with this view.

In the Living Present.

A man recently drank, on a wager, three pints of rum within half an hour, and died after swallowing the last pint. The coroner's jury charged the one who ordered the drink and the one who supplied it with manslaughter. The finding was generally commended. But how would it have been had the man died from delirium tremens after five years' drinking of liquor procured at the same place? One method kills a man quickly; the other by slow and agonizing stages. What is the difference?

New organizations multiply. The latest has been formed in China. Its object is to emancipate women's feet from bondage. It is called the "League of the Christian Shoe; or, Society of the Heavenly Foot."

Of the governors of States in our country, ten are Presbyterian, five Episcopalian, four Methodist; and one a Baptist. Interrogated, the governor of Louisiana replied that he is not a member of any church, inclining, though, to Methodism. The governor of Mississippi is a Methodist.

Satolli has been made a cardinal. That makes him eligible to the papacy. No doubt he will attain to it in due time. It being deemed advisable, temporarily, to remain in this country, his title has been changed to pro-delegate. Satolli is a poor linguist. He can not converse in English, though he has resided in this country for several years.

The Free Church of Scotland, after fierce discussions, resolved, under certain circumstances, to ordain men as evangelists. They are to travel in the highlands, a section of country largely devoid of church organization.

The Medical Herald assures that nervous headache may be cured by the simple act of walking backwards for ten minutes.

The Empress of Austria, able to converse in seven languages, has a linguistic competitor in Queen Margherita of Italy. The latter is now studying Hebrew. That acquired, she will have mastered ten languages.

Paul Krueger, President of the Transvaal Republic in South Africa, is idolatrously loved by his people. Seventy years old, he is known to be heroic, generous, liberal, devout. Licensed to preach, he frequently fills the pulpit. The treasurer of the Republic reports an annual surplus of $20,000. Krueger and his subjects are Dutch Hollanders. After many bloody struggles, headed by Krueger, the English government acknowledged the independence of the Transvaal in 1852.

The Mississippi Methodist Orphanage.

MR. EDITOR: We believe that the time has come when the Methodists of Mississippi should have the privilege of taking charge of their own orphans. We can not be excused until both of our Conferences give the people a good opportunity to establish and support a Methodist orphanage in our State. I have all confidence in the Methodist preachers and people of Mississippi. I believe that as soon as they have the facts presented, and the opportunity comes in their reach, they will establish an orphanage that will be an honor to the church and a blessing to the needy.

Permit me to give a sample of the interest our people have on this subject. Two of the leading bankers of our State have said to me this year in substance as follows: "Every year the Roman Catholics come to us for money to help support the orphans of Mississippi. We pay the money cheerfully because it comes so near to our hearts. Then we ask the question, Why is it that our Methodist Church has no orphans' home, and thus give us an opportunity to support our own orphans?" One of these bankers is a layman in the Mississippi Conference, and the other is a layman in the North Mississippi Conference—both good and true men. We have heard many other laymen use similar expressions. Just here I call attention to three facts.

1. The Methodist people of Mississippi are contributing liberally to the Roman Catholic Church to take care of their orphans.

2. Methodists send many orphan children to the Catholic Orphans' Home, and practically all of these orphans leave these institutions zealous Romanists.

3. Our people are forced to do this because the eighty thousand Methodists of Mississippi have no orphans' home.

The conclusion is about this: The two hundred thousand Protestants of Mississippi are furnishing the money, the two homes, and the orphans, and employing twelve thousand Roman Catholics to manage and teach the children and get all the honor for it!

Thank the Lord our people are waking up, and it is high time. The Presbyterians are building an orphanage at Columbus, Miss. To the Methodists we can say that "the joint commission appointed at the recent session of the Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences to consider the advisability of establishing an orphans' home under the auspices of the M. E. Church, South, in Mississippi, met in Winona, Miss., March 26, 1895," and "on motion of Rev. R. J. Jones it was ordered that we recommend to the Annual Conferences the appointment of a Board of Directors, to consist of three preachers and two laymen from each Conference, whose duty it shall be to procure a charter for the Mississippi Methodist Orphanage, and as soon as practicable locate and put in operation the same; and that the president and secretary of this joint commission report this action to the next sessions of our Conferences." Seashore District.

MR. EDITOR: For the information of those who seem anxious to know, but are painfully and stupidly slow to comprehend, I will state that the basis of my action in relieving Bro. Breland from the charge of Whittington circuit was to make it possible for me to do what the law of the church requires me to do—i. e., to control, when present, the services held in churches in my charge. (See Dis., ¶ 120, ed. 1891.) The ground of my objection to, and the reason for my protest against the employment of Mrs. Snell at every place in my district, was not that she is a woman, but this: She is unauthorized and unlicensed, and, therefore, irresponsible, so far as the doctrines, discipline and government of the M. E. Church, South, is concerned. It is unquestionably an offense against the entire constitution of the M. E. Church, South, for any preacher in charge, or presiding elder, to place unauthorized and irresponsible persons before the public to expound her doctrines, or to have control of her services. And all this ado about there being no law against such conduct is absolutely puerile.

Every well-informed Methodist preacher and layman knows that the government of our church is that of supervision, commencing at the General Conference and extending to the most obscure private member, the duties of each and everyone being clearly defined. Every well-informed Methodist knows, furthermore, that we have no self-appointed or self-constituted workmen in our church. "The pulpit," says Bishop Keener, "is the key to the position with all churches."

These things are too plain not to be known, and it is nauseating to read what is sometimes written on this vitally important subject. It is a transparency that Methodism, by her patronizing preachers and people, has well-nigh reached the chaotic period in church government. And I am fully persuaded that the time has already come when those in authority should call a halt, and see to it that the command is obeyed. Our doctrinal and our connectional integrity must be conserved and protected, even at the cost of puncturing some inflated individuals. Far better to practice a little timely surgery than to lose our identity and our right to exist as a church.

"Whose Glory Is in Their Shame."

One of the unsavory features of the stage, as it exists to-day, is the conduct of some of its representatives, who make an open display of their immoralities, and turn these into capital in their histrionic business. Actresses whose lives are notoriously lax are in demand for the leading parts in certain plays. These women attract the crowd; their lives are invested with a certain zest, a morbid interest attaches to them, on account of their scandalous conduct; and the theatrical managers, the newspapers and the actresses themselves combine to make the shameful facts in their career the source of financial profit. The production of "living pictures" on the stage for the delectation of the crowd, the presentation of plays which are rank with iniquity, which are not only flavored with Frenchiness, but which are rotten with vileness—so bad that they could not be read or reproduced in a parlor among decent people—these are among the signs of the times which may well occasion thought and concern, especially when we reflect that these dramas are witnessed not by the ignorant and thoughtless alone, but largely by "society folk," who are supposed to be well-bred, and to know what is proper, and what, on the other hand, is unseemly and indecorous. Many plays, now on the stage, are ingeniously devised instruments for the propagation of uncleanness. The best critics of the stage, on our leading dailies, take occasion frequently to call attention to the growing indecency of many modern dramas. When men, whose province as dramatic critics has required them, year after year, to report dramatic performances for the press, find themselves shocked and indignant at the immoral elements now prevalent upon the stage, their warnings may be widely heeded and repeated by all who study and help to form public opinion.—Central Advocate.

A Magnificent Gift.

Whatever else may be predicated of Mr. Andrew Carnegie, one fact remains indisputable: he has made himself by large, wise, and noble gifts, a public benefactor. His latest contribution for the good of the people—supplementing other similar gifts made within the last eight years amounting to more than $3,000,000—is embodied in a million-dollar library building, donated to the city of Pittsburgh, and dedicated early this week. Five years ago he gave the city of Allegheny a similar institution costing $250,000. In Scotland, at several points, and in other cities in this country, he has established public libraries. It seems, indeed, that he has chosen this avenue of beneficence as his favorite method of serving the public. This purpose he began to cherish in boyhood. During a period when he was struggling for a living he was allowed by a generous man to browse among his books, and every Saturday enjoy the advantages of a little collection of four or five hundred volumes. It was then that he resolved that if he ever became rich, he would use his wealth to supply free libraries, where other poor boys might enjoy the opportunities and facilities for instruction which such institutions afford. This latest addition to the Carnegie free libraries is a beautiful building, with an art annex, and with accommodations for 300,000 volumes. The city is to furnish $40,000 a year for the support of the institution, and Mr. Carnegie, it is stated, will give money to buy a good collection of pictures to start with.—Central Advocate.

Firing into the Air.

There is a good deal of firing into the air which is not material, but produces much the same effect. It makes a tremendous noise and fills the air with smoke, says the Christian Register. It is a favorite device of politicians. It attracts crowds, it has in the Fourth of July spirit. In Congress it is called buncombe. It means an explosion of noisy words, brilliant flashes of rhetoric from the mouth of the speaker, and a great deal of smoke in the air, which thoroughly beclouds the subject, so that no one can clearly see the issue. But it brings votes. Many reputations have been built on such noise and display, but they are not reputations that last. The smoke subsides, the noise dies away; and what is left? Perhaps an echo, but even that fades into silence.

The pulpit makes the same mistake. There is a good deal of firing into the air. The piece is elevated above the heads of the people. If there is a bullet in the gun, it reaches no brain or heart. It is shot too high. But sometimes there is nothing but a blank cartridge. It makes plenty of noise and plenty of smoke; the air is reached, but not the conscience. There is an explosion of crackling sensationalism. How the adjectives are belched forth! What a detonation of verbiage! There are tropes and metaphors, rhetorical fire, the powder of assumption and arrogance in the ear-deafening report, but, after the noise has died away, what is left but smoky smell of sensationalism! Such pulpit discharges can not take the place of rations. They do not feed hungry congregations, nor do they mean war upon vice or injustice. An idea may be accompanied by the sound of the powder which propels it; but its efficiency is shown not in the noise it makes in the air, but in its power to penetrate and lodge in the mind.—Mid-Continent.

When you hear a man shrieking for his rights, don't imagine that he is dying for an opportunity to do right. It is the right to do wrong that he is after.

MY WORK TO-DAY.

To shun the world's allurements,
To bear my cross therein;
To turn from all temptation,
To conquer every sin;
To linger, calm and patient,
Where duty bids me stay;
To go where God may lead me—
This is my work to-day.

I think not of to-morrow,
Its trials or its task;
But still, with child-like spirit,
For present mercies ask.
With each returning morning
I cast old things away;
Life's journey lies before me—
My prayer is for to-day.

Hymns Suggested by Remarkable Incidents.

In the Holy Scriptures we have a number of songs and Psalms suggested by remarkable providential incidents, the Holy Spirit being pleased to embalm for all time these memorable events and occasions in strains of inspired song. This, so far from detracting from their value, has intensified both their worth and usefulness. It brings them into sympathy with our hearts and providential conditions. For example, take Miriam's triumphant and grateful song on the Arabian shore, when the Egyptians, horse and rider, were overthrown and perished in the sea. Her inspired song is all the more eloquent from its glorious associations. And so of the inspired song of Deborah when she poured forth her grateful and patriotic heart over the crushing defeat of Sisera, the general of Jabin, king of the Canaanites, who had oppressed for twenty long and sad years the Israelites. How touching and sad the one hundred and thirty-seventh Psalm, in which captive Israel is represented as sitting by the waters of Babylon weeping as they sadly remembered Zion, and when required to sing, sorrowfully answered, "How can we sing the Lord's song in a strange land?" Oh, it was quite too much! Sad memories subdued and crushed them; they could not sing.

Some of our most eloquent and profitable hymns were suggested by sorrows, sore disappointments, and dark temptations. When overwhelmed, they cried to the Rock that was higher than they, expressing their state through strains of holy song.

The devout, refined, and eloquent Cowper was the victim of attacks of deep despondency, almost despair. On one of these sad occasions he took a seat in a carriage and bade the coachman drive to London Bridge, from which he meant to plunge himself into the river, and escape from his intolerable woe. But the driver got entangled in the smoke and fog and labyrinth of London streets, and, after long searching, despaired and returned home, and the poet by this time had risen above his despondant spell, sat down and wrote the beautiful and comforting hymn, No. 43, "God moves in a mysterious way his wonders to perform."

Gerhardt, a German, was a godly and plain spoken preacher. The elector of Brandenberg, in whose dominions Gerhardt lived, disliked this plain preaching, and admonished Gerhardt that he must desist from it; but he could not thus compromise his conscience, so the cruel elector in his anger drove him from his home and his means of livelihood. Gerhardt and his family left to find a home, he knew not where. At nightfall he stopped at a wayside inn. After dark he retired to a grove near by to meditate and commune with God. While thinking on his forlorn condition, these divine words came into his mind: "Commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also in him, and he will bring it to pass." He was comforted, and, as he meditated, his thoughts shaped themselves into a song of trust. He repeated it to his wife; she was comforted. They knelt, prayed; then arose and sang the hymn; then retired to rest; but they had hardly done so until a loud knocking was heard at the door. The landlord asked, "Who's there; what's wanted?" A horseman answered, and inquired, "Has Paul Gerhardt passed this way?" "Yes," said the landlord, "he is in my house." The horseman said, "Let me see him immediately." He handed Gerhardt a large sealed letter. It was from the good Duke Christian of Meresburg, saying, "Come into my country, Paul Gerhardt, and you shall have church, people, house and home, and livelihood and liberty to preach as your heart may prompt you." So all was well.

The hymn No. 839, by John Wesley, "Happy is the pilgrim's lot;" Hymn 519, by Dr. Watts, "How vain are all things here below," and Hymn 647, by Dr. Muhlenberg, "I would not live alway; I ask not to stay"—Dr. Tillett, in his admirable book, "Our Hymns and Their Authors," says it is understood that these hymns were written under deep depression of mind caused by disappointment in love.

Nearly fifty years ago Bishop Soule, who had but recently returned from an official visit to England, told me that the beautiful hymn, No. 595, "How tedious and tasteless the hours," a hymn that sparkles with brightest gems of imagery, was originally a love song, written by one who wished to express her admiration and devotion to her lover, but was elevated by the genius and devotion of John Newton into a song of praise to our redeeming Lord.

At Whose Hand Shall Their Blood Be Required?

Let every Christian ask himself this question, and then think of the many souls that are breaking the Fourth Commandment; then, after doing this, ask yourself one more question, What am I doing to stop Sunday work and spread scriptural holiness in the homes of those that are now breaking God's commandment? A murderer, a thief, and the Sabbath breaker, in minor points, are punished by the law; but when it comes to the great question of money-making, the law of man and God are alike unrecognized.

Only a few weeks ago there were crimes committed in China and Japan that almost made our blood run cold; yet there are crimes committed every Sabbath in our own land and State that are just as great in the sight of God. God gave one commandment just as surely as he gave another. He did not say, "But the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God; in it thou shalt not [sometimes] do any work," any more than he said, "Thou shalt not [sometimes] steal;" and he looks with the same condemnation on the Sabbath breaker as he does on the thief or murderer. Let none imagine that because God has prospered the railroad companies, and that preachers and Christian workers have been silent in their condemnation of these Sabbath breakers, that it is any less crime for them than any other man. It is the duty of every preacher to teach people the law of God. "Cry aloud and spare not; lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and shew my people their transgression." The preacher is a watchman, a shepherd, and a leader. The good watchman seeth the enemy coming, warns his people; the "good shepherd will die for his sheep," and the good leader will lead his people in paths of righteousness and peace. The Lord says: "If thou turn away thy foot from the Sabbath, from doing thy pleasure on my holy day, and call the Sabbath a delight, the holy of the Lord, honorable; and shalt honor him, not doing thine own ways, nor finding thine own pleasure, nor speaking thine own words: then shalt thou delight thyself in the Lord, and I will cause thee to ride upon the high places of the earth, and feed thee with the heritage of Jacob thy father."

Let every Christian who reads this article pray earnestly and with faith for a plan to influence the law-makers of our State to prohibit the running of trains on Sunday. B. W. LEWIS

Rev. J. A. Parker, D. D., and "A New Code."

MR. EDITOR: I was very much surprised to see the article from Bro. Parker under the above heading, as he is generally very wise and safe on our laws, but he is evidently at sea in his late article. I would not have been surprised to have seen it from some other pens, but I must confess I was from his. He can not see any difference between the services held at Seashore Camp Ground by Mrs. Chopin (Mrs. Snell and Mrs. Kells being present) or those held by Mrs. Juliana Hays in the interest of the Woman's Missionary Society, and the late meeting at Palmer Camp Ground. Moreover, he can not see any difference between the official acts of the pastors at the former and the latter. The first was strictly according to law; the second was contrary to law. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union and the Woman's Missionary Societies are legitimate. The latter is authorized by our church, and no one will deny that a woman can hold services of that kind in any of our churches without violating any law, but according to law.

The brethren of the Seashore district, when they passed those resolutions which Bro. Parker censures, did not refer to that kind of work. Nor would the worthy presiding elders of the Vicksburg or Seashore districts object to ladies conducting that kind of service in any of our churches or district.

But the late Palmer Camp Ground affair, if it had been carried out, would have been contrary to law. There is a law authorizing the Woman's Missionary Society and giving them the right to hold services in our churches, and no one with a grain of sense would deny it. But there is no law authorizing woman to preach and hold regular preaching services; and the church has denied them the right by failing to make a law authorizing it or the granting of license.

Now, why a man as clear headed and as conservative as Bro. Parker generally is, should have fallen into the quicksands of such an error, I do not know. There is absolutely no similarity in the two cases referred to. One was perfectly legitimate; the other was not. And the pastors of the former and the pastor of the latter acted very differently; the former according to law, the latter against law.

Now, why should Bro. Parker raise a cry against the presiding elder of Seashore district and the brethren that passed the resolutions referred to? I think they acted wisely and according to law. Why not? If persons are allowed according to law, or without law, to travel and preach all over the country without license, and we open our churches and pulpits to them, then why give anyone license? Why not let every man and woman preach without license, if they want to?—and some brother will open his church and pulpit to them. Why not?

Bro. A. wants Mrs. So and So, Bro. B. wants Mrs. So and So, and Bro. C. wants Mr. So and So. Why not get them? Who has the right to say, No? Open your church and sacred pulpit to them all. Why not? If to one, why not to another? If one brother has the right to invite an unlicensed person into his pulpit, why not another brother invite another—his preference—and let them all preach, women and men? Why not? I do not believe many of our blessed women want to preach, and do not believe they indorse women preaching. "Well," says one, "but Mrs. Snell is a good woman." Very well, I have no doubt of that; but does that justify her in her course, or justify our preachers in their course? If so, then all good women without license can and ought to be allowed to preach, if they want to. I have no doubt that she is a good woman, but must I invite every good woman or man that wants to preach in my pulpit? No." "But," one says, "the Lord blesses her work or meetings." "Well, must I invite and allow every woman and man without license to preach in my church and pulpit because the Lord blesses the meeting? No. If so, then why did the Louisiana Conference refuse admission to the man who had two wives? Did the Lord not bless the meetings he conducted? Why not allow him to continue to preach, if we only judge him by the result of his meetings? The Lord will bless a meeting sometimes, not because of the means or leader, but in spite of the means or leader. When God's people assemble, and sing and pray and work and agree as touching the salvation of souls, souls will be saved, not so much because of the man doing the preaching, but in spite of him or his moral conduct or condition. What of a great many impostors that have gone about preaching and holding revival meetings, and doing, as everybody thought, much good? If we judge of their fitness for the work by the results, we would have to let them go ahead."

Now, I am not in favor of arresting the character of any brother who has invited unlicensed persons into his pulpit or church to preach up to this time, except those who had been advised not to do so, as it was contrary to law, by their presiding elder or some one else. But I do think the character of any brother who was advised by his presiding elder not to do it, and yet did it, or any brother that persists in it, ought to have his character arrested. When a majority of our great church, or delegates, agree to license woman to preach, in General Conference, then I will say no more, no matter what I think; but until they do, I do not think it ought to be allowed, and I do not think a majority of our wisest and best women—God bless them!—desires it or even approves of it.

Now, Bro. Parker and other brethren of the ministry, let us think before we further go. A. D. MILLER.

Oak Ridge, Miss., Nov. 9, 1895.

Dr. Parker's Mistake.

History teaches that no government, civil or ecclesiastical, can maintain its autonomy, except loyalty to its principles and laws exist in the hearts and minds of its citizens or adherents. True liberty, we are told, is freedom of action within the bounds of law. It recognizes the rights, but not the whims and opinions, of all. It never wrongs any, but restrains the one who heedlessly or wilfully infringes on the rights of others. Back of all law is authority. In connection with this is power to execute its sanctions and penalties, else all law is nugatory and useless. Law—just—is truth—i. e., man's best conception of truth. This thought is fundamental. When lost in the mazes of a forest we seek landmarks. The surveyor begins at a corner. So we trace fact back to truth, its source. Within statutes are facts, expressions of law, truth expressed. Think on these things.

Now, courtesy is one thing; right is another. A man is my guest by courtesy; another is debarred entrance to my home. Neither had any right in my house; neither is wronged. My house is my castle. A camp meeting is in progress. In connection with the church that owns the property and conducts the services is a society known as the W. F. M. S. of the M. E. Church, South. It has the official recognition and sanction of the General Conference. Its officers—I know not a single exception—have ever been loyal to our ecclesiastical system in truth and fact. Frequently have I heard them disclaim any intention to invade the function and office of the ministry. They provoke us to good works by their zeal and consecration. Home and foreign mission schools, church edifices in China, Japan and Mexico, are monuments of their zeal and energy. All honor to this noble band of Christian women! Modest and unassuming, when the church says "Forward!" there is a noise of going in the mulberry tops. But they claim not authority. I never saw them advertise in the ADVOCATE, "We will take charge of the Seashore Camp Meeting." When the presiding elders in charge said to Sister Hayes or Chopin, "Lead the meeting; this is your day," who dreamed that by virtue of this fact they had charge. My dear Dr. Parker, the south wind blowing softly from the Bay made you sleep too late the morning you penned that thought. You had the "dolce far niente," and had it bad. Evidently, so far as opinions are concerned, the brethren are mixed in what they say about Sister Snell. One seems supremely disgusted, another marvelously elated by her methods. This has nothing to do with the case. Of some things I am sure—that is, so far as human testimony goes. She is a Methodist; joined the church in Monroe under Bro. White. She calls her talks "preaching," and says she is called to preach. Never has this call been recognized in an official way by the church. She is national evangelist of the W. C. T. U.—an institution that wants the earth, the smaller stars and nebulæ, and even invades the sacred, conservative precincts of the English nobility. They have more platforms than small-footed women can stand on, and I fear that the main plank of temperance is so tilted that most of them have slipped off, and are floundering around regulating politicians and instructing the preachers.

Lofty and beautiful is the character of Dinah Morris in George Eliot's "Adam Bede," embodying, as she does, womanly modesty and gentleness with the highest type of Christian devotion and earnestness. In this "study" Mrs. Lewes gives us the ideal lay preacher of early Methodism. Who ever dreamed of such a creation of genius, yet true to life, taking charge or having control of the services?

My dear Bro. Parker, when the north wind blows and clears the atmosphere, read your logic again, and do not try to make law of a courtesy.

S. J. DAVIES.

A Slight Inaccuracy.

In his article, "A New Code," our good Bro. Parker makes a slight mistake when he asserts that Mrs. Chopin and Mrs. Hayes "controlled" services at Seashore Camp meeting. It was the writer's inestimable privilege to be present in 1886, when these noble women held services there; and having also been present when the hours were chosen, and the speakers selected, she is in a position to testify that these services were all under the control of the three presiding elders having charge of the meeting.

Our Dead Hero.

MR. EDITOR: I send you a liberal extract from a much-prized letter of Mrs. M. I. Lambuth, believing it will interest many of your readers who cherish the memory of our sainted missionary hero. Some may not know that the last session of our Mississippi Conference adopted an appropriate epitaph for the grave of Dr. Lambuth, and left it with our dear sister to have it translated and inscribed on a suitable stone.

This reminder of the sleeping dust of one who lived and died on "picket duty" for us ought to stimulate to great diligence in providing means to "send more men" and to educate the future mothers of the "Sunrise Kingdom."

May these things be!

In hope, J. P. DRAKE.

Sister Lambuth is now in Kobe, Japan, devoting her remaining days to the training of young Japanese women for home-keeping. D.

Rev. J. P. Drake, Edwards, Miss.—

DEAR BROTHER: Your kind letter came in due time. Dr. Andrews' is also in hand.

The kindly given expression of the Mississippi Conference for the resting-place of their gone-before brother will be rendered in English, Latin and Japanese, if possible. When I am in Kobe again, it will be my first work to arrange for a stone upon which to engrave the same.

As to the expenses connected with the sickness, death and burial of the dear one of whom I write, none other than ourselves—mother and children—have shared. No rule yet established by the Mission or Board of Missions provides for such things. I do not ask it. You are kind to think of it. May God bless you for it—the thought I mean.

As the grave now appears, there is a stone pulpit-top, with a Bible open to the words, "I have finished the work thou gavest me to do." On the east-face, name, birth, date of death. On the west-face a few lines more. A horizontal stone covers the grave and an iron railing surrounds the whole. When I am in Kobe, we will have a second horizontal stone prepared. Upon that, in half horizontal position, or whatever else seems to be most appropriate, will be put the Conference epitaph. Then I will send you a photo of the whole.

Bishop Galloway will be able to tell you of it as it was when he was there.

The annual meeting of the W. M. F. S. of Louisiana was held in Crowley, Oct. 11-14. The president, Mrs. Fullilove, and recording secretary, Miss Paxton, were in their places, having never failed to be present since their election in '84.

The absence of corresponding secretary, Mrs. Foster, on account of sickness in her family was deeply deplored. For the same reason, the delegation was small, but the reports were encouraging and increasing interest was manifested by those present.

The receipts for the year averaged about the same as usual. The Conference fund was emphasized and fixed at twenty-five cents.

One missionary candidate made verbal application. Many superior papers and letters from missionaries were read with great profit.

The same officers were re-elected, with some changes in district secretaries. Miss Susie Lyons, of New Orleans, accepted the office of State superintendent, and the executive officers beg to recommend her in all her efforts to the support of the ministers.

Rev. Winans Drake preached a fine, thoughtful sermon on Sunday, which stirred the zeal of the large congregation.

Many courtesies were extended the delegates, and Christian hospitality abounded in the hearts and homes of the beautiful little city.

On Monday, after renewed vows of consecration, the usual benediction was sung, "God be with you till we meet again," and the meeting adjourned to meet next year in Mansfield.

Labor On.

How easy to labor when the "pleasure of the Lord" seems prospering in our hands. Work is then a luxury. It is its own reward. But to labor on with no signs of success, amid discouragements and in the face of opposition—it is this that wears the body and chills the soul. And yet it is just this that many of our most worthy Christian workers have oftentimes to do. Success is not always an evidence of fidelity in work; certainly the want of it does not prove unfaithfulness or inefficiency. Humanly speaking, the personal ministry of our Saviour was a failure. But how faithfully did he labor on! Let us follow in his footsteps. Any of us can work when immediate success crowns our every effort. But it takes the highest type of faith and devotion to labor on with "failure" written upon every endeavor. "Never despair," wrote Edmund Burke to his friend—"but if you do, work in despair!" Now turn to our 500th hymn, and let the sweet words of Montgomery inspire us with renewed devotion.—Southern Advocate.

Billy Bray, the converted Cornish miner, was always happy. He said, "The Lord sent both vinegar and honey, but he sent the vinegar in a spoon and the honey in a ladle, praise the Lord!" Even so; our blessings do exceed our trials, for grace makes trial a blessing to the believer. There is always something for which to be joyful, and always some kind of opportunity to express it. This calls to mind another of Billy Bray's expressions. Some of the people in his church told him that if he did not quit praising God so much in the meetings, they would shut him up in a barrel. "Then I'll praise the Lord through the bunghole," was the response of the happy man. A Christian can live a joyous life without being in a state of constant effervescence or ebullition, but there should be enough of happiness shown in the outward life to convince the world that the believer, above all others, has the most to make him happy.—Selected.

A pair of oxen whisked a great log over the uneven ground as though it were a trifle. Their great strength was utilized and directed in such a manner as to accomplish the feat by the yoke upon their necks. The yoke placed the weight of the load upon their shoulders, where was their greatest strength. When Christ said "Take my yoke upon you," he did not mean thereby that he was to place a burden upon men. He meant just the reverse of this. He offered to men that which would relieve them of the pressure of their burdens by placing the weight of their burdens where they could most readily carry them. The gospel neither brings burdens to men nor takes them away entirely. It puts man into a new relation to them by applying the infinite energy in the soul of man to them in such a way that what was burdensome and difficult before, now becomes a matter of ease. It so adjusts the trials and the ills of life to the sources of man's greatest strength that he is enabled to carry his load with ease and delight.

Life is God's gymnasium. He takes the measures; we do not know what they are. He puts us in our places, and gives us what discipline we need. The ministers call churches means of grace, and prayer a means of grace, and the Bible a means of grace; and so they are. But also your shop is a means of grace, and your kitchen is a means of grace, and your social gathering is a means of grace, your dull and stupid clerk is a means of grace, and your more dull and stupid cook is a means of grace—or disgrace, just as you choose to make them. Let a man go into life believing this, taking life as his school preparing for the life beyond, and what a glorious thing it is to live! Even failures do not discourage such a man, because he says: "I have failed once, and, now I know what my weak point is, I will correct it next time." Christ supplies our need by teaching us the meaning and significance of life.—Lyman Abbott, D. D.

You can not set the world right or the times, but you can do something for the truth; and all you can do will certainly tell if the work you do is for the Master, who gives you your share, and so the burden of responsibility is lifted off. This assurance makes peace, satisfaction and repose possible even in the partial work done upon earth. Go to the man who is carving a stone for a building; ask him where is that stone going, to what part of the temple, and how is he going to get it into place, and what does he do? He points you to the builder's plans. This is only one stone of many. So when men shall ask where and how is your achievement going into God's plan, point them to your Master, who keeps the plans, and then go on doing your little service as faithfully as if the whole temple were yours to build.—Phillips Brooks.

Thomas Carlyle said: "The tendency to persevere, to persist in spite of hindrances, discouragements and impossibilities—it is this that in all things distinguishes the strong soul from the weak." Judged by this standard, Paul was a man of very strong soul. There was in him the most stubborn determination to overcome every obstacle which stood in the way of his achieving honor to his Lord. We always look with sadness on that Christian who allows ordinary hindrances to hold him back from victory. It is a sign of pitiable weakness. Increase of strength comes by increasing perseverance in overcoming impossibilities. No soul develops into sterling strength without hard pushing.

Two good men on some occasion had a warm dispute, and remembering the exhortation of the apostle, "Let not the sun go down upon your wrath," just before sunset one of them went to the other, and, knocking at the door, his offended friend came and opened it, and seeing who it was, started back in astonishment and surprise, the other at the same time, cried out, "The sun is almost down." This unexpected salutation softened the heart of his friend into affection, and he returned for answer, "Come in, brother, come in." What a happy method of reconciling matters, of redressing grievances, and of reconciling brethren!

Let it be borne in mind that all progress is due to dissatisfaction with things as they are. While all change is not improvement, there can be no improvement without change. Hence those who perpetually say, "Let well enough alone," are not the best friends of the race, though they sometimes do a good service in checking too rapid or too radical alteration and holding new projects under challenge till they have proved their right to supplant the old. That which exists is not "well enough" if something better is fairly within our grasp; and oftentimes its being better can not be clearly seen until it has been tried. It is a sin to be too readily satisfied with our condition. The only motto is, "Onward and upward."

A Character Sketch of the Late Rev. A. A. Houston of Abbeville, Miss.

BY J. H. SMITH,
Of Olive Branch, Miss.

The memoir of Rev. A. A. Houston, in the ADVOCATE of the twenty-fourth instant, stirs tender memories of the long ago, and by your consent I will gather a few modest flowers from memory's urn, and lay them tenderly on the grave of this departed saint, who was, as much as any other man, my spiritual father.

As far back as I can remember, Bro. Houston's widowed mother lived near our home, and some of my earliest recollections are the visits of "Aunt Es'er" (as we called, not Esther) to our home, and going with mother to see "Aunt Es'ar." They could hardly keep me "out at play." I delighted to be where she was, and hear her talk. She was so kind and gentle. Bro. Houston lived in our neighborhood when I was quite small.

He was about six feet two inches tall, large frame, weighed about 200 pounds, no surplus flesh; had big feet, big hands, long arms, full chest, broad shoulders, full face, broad forehead, hazle eyes, fair complexion, and as straight as an Indian. When I knew him he had white hair and beard. I thought him the cleanest, nicest-looking man I had ever seen, a real picture of apostolic grandeur. He had a heavy, strong voice, that was not rough, but mellow and musical, which, when under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, could play on every key of the human heart, could inspire with dread alarm, or hope and joy. Some claim that in his most earnest tones he could be heard preaching or singing for a mile. I can see him now. His full, pleasant face, with tears trickling down his cheeks, and hear that trumpet voice, as he plead with lost souls to "seek redeeming grace."

Bro. Jaco says: "He was equally at home, taking a collection, conducting a revival, or preaching a funeral sermon, and, I would add, or preaching to the young. He would talk to us boys about yoking up and working our calves. 'They had to be broke, had to learn, and be trained to work before they were any good.' So it was with a boy, he, too, had to be 'trained up in the way he should go,' or he would be good for nothing, and sometimes he, too, was very hard to break; but he must learn obedience, sad work for the Lord, or he could not go to heaven at last."

We were sure of a good meeting at Liberty (his old home church) if Uncle Alex. was there. The young people regarded him as a father. He had lived in the same section for about sixty years. He was one prophet who had honor in his own country and among his own kin. He had married the young, buried the dead, prayed with us when we were penitents, rejoiced with us when we were converted, and we loved and reverenced him.

He was an original character. If he had been helped in thought by something he had heard or read from others, he studied it well before appropriating it, and he used his own terms to express it.

The first Annual Conference I attended was at Grenada, Miss., in 1881. At the close, when Uncle Alex. and I were on our way to the depot, we were discussing the different preachers who had preached during the session. He finally said: "Well, I don't reckon I preach like anybody else, and anybody else preaches like me; and I have about concluded, if they can stand me, I can stand them." This was one secret of his great success. He was content to be himself. He did not have a string of stereotyped expressions, nor did he discuss stiffly something that his audience knew and cared nothing about. He had confidence in the gospel, and believed it would be a benefit to those who were there hearing it. So he preached a living gospel to a living congregation, and used the arguments and words that would best deliver his message then and there.

On his return from Montgomery, Ala., where he attended the convention looking to the union of the Protestant with the Southern Methodist Church, he said playfully that he had seen a real Bishop, and they didn't have the horns he expected, but that they were very pleasant, affable gentleman, and didn't seem to think themselves any better than he was, and that he could heartily unite with such a church and such men. And so from that time old Liberty Church has been loyal to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

As a collector he had no apology to make, but went at his work in a business-like way, and nearly always succeeded.

As a funeral preacher, he had great confidence in the gospel's power to comfort and save. So with such subjects as we find in St. John xiv, and Heb. iv, he would comfort the bereaved with promises of the rest by and by, and of the hope of the happy meeting of loved ones in the home above.

But his whole nature, strength, energy and life were thrown into a revival more than anywhere else. He tried no new or strange methods. With him the garments of salvation were not moth-eaten. The old, old story did not need to be dressed up in new clothes. His favorite themes were repentance, faith, the new birth, eternal punishment and everlasting life, but the theme that suited him best and seemed to electrify every fibre of his soul, was "Redeeming Grace."

He loved the grand old standard hymns of the Wesleys, Watts, and others, with sometimes a soul-stirring chorus. "Oh, how I love Jesus," "Lord, revive us," and "There is rest for the weary," and "You must be a lover of the Lord." That grand old hymn of John Newton, "Amazing grace," seemed to give extreme delight. A lady said, "Bro. Houston can sing 'Amazing Grace' with more grace than anyone I ever saw."

He had a happy way of making capital of passing events. One night while he was earnestly preaching, the congregation was startled by a sudden rattling of a chain. He announced that they need not be alarmed. It was not Satan coming with his chains, but only a neighbor's dog that had been tied at home, had broken loose and came in with his chain. "Oh! that men would break the chains of bondage to sin and Satan, and rush for life to the kingdom of grace."

He believed in the altar service. "the mourners' bench," and was a power there. O, how he could exhort and pray. He said: "There was no use to fan the mourners, for if they were in earnest they were cold enough in the dying to sin, and if they were not in earnest, they would take care of themselves." He said no one need come to the altar at one of his meetings to keep the meeting going, for if he could get hold of their hand he could tell whether they were in earnest, whether they cried or prayed aloud or not; that if in earnest their hands would be cold.

I am not surprised to hear that he died in full triumphs of a living faith. Many of his spiritual children preceded him to the home of the good. It was a happy meeting when he reached the golden gates. Thank the Lord, Wesley's statement is still true. One thing about our people is, "They die well." What a blessing, we still have examples teaching us how to live and showing us how to die.

No Weakening Effect.

Hood's Pills are especially adapted to family use because they are gentle and mild in action, yet thorough in effect. Mrs. Gus Roser, of No. 5912 Patton St., New Orleans, La., writes: "I have used Hood's Pills, and have found them excellent. They act without any pain or weakening effects."

Hood's Pills cure sick headache, biliousness.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. J. C. Park, P. C., Booneville, Nov. 11: "We will close our work for the Conference year in two weeks. Our report will show 76 added to the church, 5 infants baptized, Conference collections in full, with foreign missions 80 per cent. in excess of assessments, and nearly doubled last year's receipts; $210 raised from 'woman's work,' and about $1,350 from all sources. We have had a year of advancement on many lines, and praise the Lord for what he has wrought. Conference will find us happy."

Rev. Thomas B. Clifford, Courtland, Miss.: "We are looking forward with pleasure to the twenty-sixth session of the North Mississippi Conference, which is so soon to convene in the progressive little city of Water Valley. We are closing up our second year's work on the charge, and everything seems propitious. All the collections for connectional claims will be easily in full, and prospects are good for payment of other assessments in same ratio. We report a church built at each of the railroad appointments on the charge during this year. 'The Lord reigneth; let the earth rejoice.'"

Rev. H. P. Lewis, Nov. 13: "We have had during the greater part of the year our hearts, heads and hands full. We have had a good year, spiritually, and in other respects. Our protracted and camp meetings resulted in over twenty accessions and a good number of conversions, and a pretty general spiritual uplift among our people. During the year 24 have removed by certificate; removed by death, 4; received by certificate, 13; received on profession of faith and baptism, 20; received from the Baptists, 5. Sunday-schools and prayer meetings doing well. Finances pretty well up. God bless the Summit charge!"

Rev. H. J. Bolls, Plain Dealing, La., Nov. 8: "We are now closing up our second year's work on the North Bossier charge. Our work is very large, embracing a large part of Bossier parish, and numbering six regular organized churches, besides other places where services are held occasionally. Have had some most excellent meetings, but few have joined the church. I have had less additions to the church this year than any year since I have been in the ministry, but a glorious, good work has been done in the church. Many of the church members have found peace and pardon through faith in Christ. We have some as good people here as can be found anywhere, and some that are very indifferent and unconcerned about the salvation of their souls. I think that the North Bossier circuit is gradually moving up. Some of our members that have been dull and dead have become more active and efficient in church work, such as prayer meetings and Sunday-schools. Finances considerably behind, but we hope to have a good report at Conference."

Rev. D. P. Bradford, P. C., Shubuta circuit: "We have closed our protracted meetings. In our meeting at De-Soto, my son, of the North Alabama Conference, did all the preaching; church was strengthened. At Salem we had Bro. Farmer, who came to us recently from the Protestant Methodist Church. His work was faithful and efficient. We had twelve accessions. At Shubuta we had Dr. Cooper, of Meridian, and Bro. T. B. Malone, of West Point, who is a most delightful singer and preacher. The church and community were delighted with these sweet-spirited men. Here we had eleven accessions. Next was our meeting at Quitman, where we listened with increased interest to our dear Bro. Peebles, of Enterprise. We were all edified and greatly blessed by his preaching. There were four accessions to the church. I am closing my third year on this work; one of the most delightful charges I have ever served. A Board of Stewards who seem to take pleasure in the work of the church. Every dollar of our assessments will be paid, with something additional for some of the causes. This Board of Stewards gladly hand the preacher all they can collect above assessments, although it may be enough to buy a nice suit of clothes."

HEBRON CIRCUIT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Our fourth and last quarterly meeting for our term of four years has just come off. It was an occasion of both comfort and sadness to our presiding elder, Dr. T. C. Wier, and myself. Comforting to know that our four years have been so pleasant, and such strong attachments formed between the pastors and their people. Sad, because in two weeks we both take the parting hand for Conference and other fields of labor. This in many respects has been the crowning year of the four. More church pride and enthusiasm on all lines of church work than ever before. More family altars and better prayer meetings and more solid piety and less worldly-mindedness than ever before. More church papers taken, and better preparation for Sunday-school than ever before. Our collections will be 20 to 25 per cent. better than ever before.

This work is in the southeast corner of our Conference—two appointments in Alabama, one in Mississippi. Our comfortable parsonage is on the west bank of the Tombigbee river, in as pretty and fertile section as can be found outside the delta in this Conference. It is thinly settled by whites, as intelligent and hospitable as any we have known. If any people are more thoughtful of their pastor and his family than these, I would like for our lot to be cast among them next year. As it has been said of many other places, so it may be said of this: The women are the salvation of this country. If their husbands loved the church as they do, and consecrated their money to the Lord, wonders could be worked here; but it is gratifying to note their husbands are on the up-grade. In many respects the pastor sent to this people next year will be fortunate, and if he is a man true to his calling, unwavering, making no compromises with the world, lasting good will be accomplished. "May the peace of God that passeth all understanding" be upon both the preacher and the people. D. W. BABB

That Tired Feeling

The great benefit which people overcomn by That Tired Feeling derive from Hood's Sarsaparilla proves that this medicine "makes the weak strong." J. B. Emerton, a well known merchant of Auburn, Me., says: "About 5 years ago I began to suffer with very severn pain in my Stomach, gradually growling worse. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, being convinced that I was troubled with Dyspepsia and Liver and Kidney troubles. I improved at once and am very much better and feel more like working.

We invite special attention to our new sewing machine offer. This machine is a most excellent one in every respect. We have never made a better premium offer. Let no one confound this machine with any one previously offered. It is a different machine altogether. Take notice that we prepay freight and guarantee entire satisfaction.

The Holman Bible for $1 65.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.65 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to Nov., '96. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two full years in advance, i. e., up to Nov., '97, can get this Bible at $1 35.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2 45 instead of $1 65. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2.45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We are now prepared to fill orders for Bibles (both kinds) promptly.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

A NEW AND WONDERFUL BOOK

Touching Incidents

— AND —

Remarkable Answers to Prayer.

AS RELATED BY

John Wesley, Bishop Simpson, John B. Gough, Edward Payson, James Caughey, Bishop Bowman, John Knox, Martin Luther, C. H. Spurgeon, Wm. Carvosso, S. A. Keen, A. B. Earle, B. Fay Mills, D. L. Moody, Guy Fox, Chas. G. Finney, T. DeWitt Talmage, Frances E. Willard, George Muller, James H. Potts,

Any Many Others.

Western Christian Advocate: "It is simply wonderful. No one can read the book without having his faith in prayer greatly strengthened."

Union Signal: "Its high religious tone, its fascinating spirit, and the high rank of its contributors, make it a strong faith tonic and an inspiration to prevailing prayer."

B. Fay Mills: "A wonderful book, an excellent book."

Cumberland Presbyterian: "It is indeed full of touching incidents calculated to quicken the faith of all who read it."

Pres. Franklin College, New Athens, O.: "This is one of the best and most interesting books we have ever seen."

Central Congregationalist: "Many of the incidents are exceedingly pathetic, and can scarcely fail to stir any tender heart to tears. It is a rich mine of illustrations for a preacher, and deserves to be in every minister's library, while no Christian heart can fail to be deeply interested and profoundly stimulated by it toward faith in God."

Methodist Recorder: "It is a well-bound book, full of incidents and illustrations for public speakers, and will encourage every reader to greater faith and more earnest prayer."

Christian Herald, edited by T. DeWitt Talmage: "Mr. S. B. Shaw has done a wise thing in making a compilation of Notable Answers to Prayer. Such incidents encourage the despairing Christian and are useful to Christian workers in leading their hearers to pray for themselves."

Christian Arbitrator: "Some of the incidents are very touching; we could only read them with tear-dimmed eyes."

The book contains 320 pages, and when open measures 8½ by 12½ inches, and is beautifully bound in full cloth.

It is equally adapted to the learned and unlettered.

Young and old, saved and unsaved, all read it with delight. Leaders of the various Christian denominations commend it highly.

OUR OFFER.

We will send the work, postpaid, to any address on receipt of publisher's price—$1; to preachers, 75 cents. We will do better than this for our subscribers. Any subscriber who will pay his subscription up to January, '97, can have the work sent to him, postpaid, for 50 cents, provided he has not had the benefit of any previous premium offer. Those who have had the benefit of a previous offer should write us for terms. Better still: Any subscriber who will pay his own subscription up to January, '97, and send us one new subscriber at the regular rate—$2—will receive a copy of the work free. Remember that delays are dangerous, and write at once.

Your Preacher's Salary.

Has your preacher's salary been paid? Perhaps you don't know. Well, if you'll try right hard, you can find out. If he has not been paid, then what? He will go to Conference in a few days, and if he should be removed, it will never be paid. Everybody understands that. If he should be returned, it may be paid or it may not. As apt as not, the money due him for the present year will be applied to the payment of the next year's salary. This is what often happens in such a case. Is this right? His assessment was barely sufficient for his maintenance in a decent way. The chances are that no margin for the purchase of books was ever thought of by the stewards in fixing his assessment. Yet the preacher is expected to study diligently in order that he may preach sermons that are full of strong and vigorous thought. The full tale of bricks is demanded, straw or no straw.

Friend, make it your business to find out something about this matter, and be sure that you do your part now before the preacher goes to Conference.

A Trip to Zachary.

By invitation of the pastor, Rev. J. O. Bennett, we lectured last Wednesday night at Zachary, La., for the benefit of the parsonage. We had an audience of more than two hundred. Not many places of the size of Zachary can furnish so large an audience at a pay lecture. This, however, is what would be expected by those who understand the situation. This community has for many years been noted for its intelligence and refinement.

Bro. Bennett is winding up a very successful year. He has had several conversions and accessions, and will report his assessments all paid in full. During our stay we were most delightfully entertained in the hospitable home of our old friends, Bro. and Sister G. B. Brown. We also spent a few pleasant hours with the inmates of the parsonage, Bro. and Sister Bennett.

Sam Jones very truthfully says: "If all the wealth of the United States were divided out to-day, each man would get about $1,160, and in less than six months some fellows would be riding in palace cars, and others would be walking cross ties howling for another divy."

The Mississippi Methodist Orphans' Home.

We invite attention to the communication of Rev. J. A. Bowen concerning the Mississippi Orphans' Home. The Methodists of Mississippi have delayed action in this matter too long already. For generations we have been turning over our orphans to Rome to be cared for. A more suicidal policy can hardly be conceived of. Rome is to-day one of the deadliest foes that true Christianity has to contend with. This fact is recognized by all the great evangelical forces of the Christian world, and by none more fully than by Southern Methodism. What mean our missions in Mexico and Brazil, if they do not mean that we regard Romanism as an anti-Christian religion? Who does not know that the votaries of Romanism in those countries are as sadly in need of the gospel of Christ as the Pagan tribes of the Orient? Well, if Rome is a foe to true Christianity in Mexico and Brazil, is she a whit less so in the United States? Of course, in this enlightened, liberty-loving land her tactics are different from what they are in less-favored regions. This is necessarily the case. But the man who, for this reason, supposes that Romanism in America is essentially different from Romanism elsewhere is blind to the facts of history. True scriptural Christianity has no more dangerous foe to contend with, even here in this "land of the free," than Roman Catholicism. She is the bulwark of iniquity, the foe of moral reform. We have on several occasions enlightened our readers concerning her doings in this city. We have told of her Sunday festivals, at which gambling of all kinds is carried on openly, and intoxicants are sold without stint to any who will buy—all to raise money for the church. Let any sensible man ask what chance there is to enforce a Sunday law, or to suppress gambling or the liquor traffic, where Rome holds sway.

Does some one ask, "What has this to do with the establishment of a Methodist Orphans' Home?" We answer, It has everything to do with it. Rome's orphanages are to her a tower of strength. There would be less to say on this subject if Rome were merely caring for her own. But this is not the case. As a rule, Protestants (Methodists no less than others) have been wont to turn over their orphans to Rome to be educated. Not only is this the case, but our people give liberally every year for the support of these Catholic institutions. If the Methodists and Baptists of Mississippi had all the money which they have given in the last fifty years for the support of these Catholic institutions, they could each found a well-equipped orphanage. And for all this Protestantism gets no credit whatever. Rome gives her no credit, and Protestants themselves are continually eulogizing the liberality of Catholics, without stopping to inquire how much of Rome's money comes from Protestant pockets. It is thus a simple fact that we are, and have been for generations, turning over our orphans to Rome to be educated—paying her for making Catholics of them. If this is not ecclesiastical suicide, what is it? This is a folly in our Israel which ought to stop. Mississippi Methodism has resources enough to carry on all her educational and other enterprises, and found an orphan asylum besides. We are behind the rest of the world. Within the last few years orphanages have come into existence in many of our Southern Methodist Conferences. Moreover, no duty is more solemnly enjoined in God's Word than philanthropic work of this character. He who thinks otherwise must surely have a copy of the Bible with the twenty-fifth chapter of Matthew eliminated from it.

Status of Methodism.

(An extract from a paper by Dr. H. K. Carroll, Superintendent of the Census.)

The glory of Methodism is, that it won its membership, not from other churches, but from the unconcerned and unconverted. The census of 1890 shows that we have organizations in 2,205 of the 2,709 counties in the United States. Wherever there are sinners, we must have converts; wherever converts, societies; wherever societies, churches.

Thus we have more societies than any other division of Christianity. For all branches of Methodism there are 51,489 societies. The Baptists have, in all, 42,909. No other denominational family has a number equaling one-fourth of the total of Methodism except the Presbyterian, which returns 13,476; the Roman Catholic bodies stand next, with 10,276. The total for all bodies is 165,177.

The Methodist family has nearly one-third of all the societies of all the denominations in the United States. It has also 30,000 itinerant preachers. In the value of church property, $132,140,179, including only church edifices, furniture, and grounds, the Methodist family also stands first, the Catholic family, which reports $118,371,366, coming second.

In number of communicants, 4,500,000, we take the second place, the Catholics standing first, with 6,250,000. This, however, is due to the fact that the Catholic Church reckons eighty-five per cent. of the Catholic population as communicants, while Protestants count only thirty per cent. of the Protestant population as communicants. If this difference be kept in mind, the discrepancy between the 4,500,000 Methodists and the 6,250,000 Catholic communicants will not be so great. As a matter of fact, the Methodist population is twice as great as the Catholic.

The Liquor Ring and the Sunday Law.

The liquor dealers of New Orleans have started a movement for the repeal of the Sunday law. They have issued an appeal to the voters of the State, urging them to vote for no man who is not pledged to vote against the Sunday law.

"Forewarned is forearmed." The good citizens of the State should also organize and go to work at once. No man should be voted for who has agreed to do the bidding of the New Orleans liquor ring. And what is done must be done quickly. Thoroughly united, well organganized and abundantly supplied with money, this sleepless foe to good morals will prove more than a match for the good citizenship of the State unless they awake from their lethargy and bestir themselves to the utmost of their capacity.

A Blessing or a Curse.

It is a great mistake to suppose that affliction necessarily results in good to the person afflicted. God sends it for a good purpose; but that purpose may not be accomplished. Man himself has an agency in the matter. God sends temporal prosperity as a blessing; yet, as a matter of fact, it often proves a curse. Just so with affliction. God sends it upon his children for their good, but they often make it result in evil. Those who have been made to pass under the rod should, therefore, inquire what use they have made of their afflictions. "Have I received God's afflictive dispensations with meekness, patience, humility and resignation?—or, have I indulged emotions the very opposite of these?" Questions like these honestly propounded and faithfully answered constitute a very helpful spiritual exercise for those whom God has chastened.

The Turkish Question

The demands of the powers and the promises of the Sultan have accomplished nothing so far towards the termination of the Armenian troubles. The poor, helpless Armenians are still being butchered in cold blood.

Another massacre, rivaling in horrid cruelty any one of the last twelve months, took place a few days since at Karpoot. About eight hundred persons were killed, many of them in a manner that would do justice to a Comanche Indian. A number of American Mission buildings were burned, though the missionaries themselves escaped. Similar massacres have occurred at a number of other places. Whether these horrid butcheries are ordered by the Sultan, or whether he is powerless to prevent them, is a question concerning which different opinions are entertained. However this may be, Turkish affairs are rapidly reaching a crisis. The great nations are concentrating their naval forces in Turkish waters. War is likely to break out at any moment; and should it occur, Turkey will be obliterated from the map of the world.

Millsaps College Notes.

Everything is moving on smoothly in the various departments of the college. Some new features are to be observed—notably the gymnasium. Nearly every student is a member of the Athletic Association. There are five classes, meeting each once a week, while the members have daily opportunity to supplement their class exercises by further use of the gymnasium. The equipment is excellent and the building commodious.

In the library improvements are to be seen. Newspaper racks have been put in, and a new set of book shelves, necessitated by the increase in the number of books.

The laboratory has recently been equipped in the most modern style and presents a very fine appearance. There are twenty-four experiment desks, each with its own gas, water and sink outlet. There is an experiment hood, also having gas, water and sink outlet, and so arranged as to carry all fumes up a flue out of the room. The lecture desk is built upon the most approved style. It contains a large tank for collecting gases, and all necessary drawers, also gas, water and air-pressure. Porcelain sinks, as well as earthen jars, are placed in convenient positions. A recent addition to the equipment is one of James' Automatic Stills. This is connected with a large tank, so that distilled water is always on hand. A further supply of apparatus is expected next week, when the equipment will be practically complete.

A fine collection of minerals has been ordered and will soon be placed in the museum.

In physics, the laboratory is also well supplied. The latest addition is a fine Toepler-Holtz electric machine, imported for us direct from Germany.

The Natural Science Department now occupies four rooms—a lecture-room, a laboratory, a physical apparatus room and a store-room.

My Debt to the Church Paper.

BY REV. R. G. HOBBS, PH.D.

Methodism believes in good literature. The saddle-bags of the early itinerants were always big with good books for the people. The Book Concern, fruitful source of thoughtful books and splendid papers, stands close to the heart of the church. The church proposes to counteract the influence of the literature of filth by creating a better to take its place. In these days when realism in literature, which is another name for lewdness in print, is threatening to drag gross sensualism in its wake into society, some bulwarks must be erected for the protection of public morality. A literature with Christ in it is the only thing that can cope with the badness of bad books and papers.

The religious journal has a distinct and lofty mission in the life of our times. Possessing incalculable power for spreading the truth, no other agency can be found of equal value in producing an intelligent church membership. The people can not know what the church is doing, save as they learn through the church press. Find a Methodist congregation where the Advocates do not circulate, and you have found one which is clear out of the battle line. The religious paper helps to produce intelligent Christians, suggests methods to the Christian worker, makes him a citizen of the religious world, opens his eyes to a thousand ways in which religion modifies and enlarges the duties of citizenship, pries him out of the ruts, wakes him up to the needs of the masses of Christless people in the world, quickens his missionary zeal.

I was in a house among the mountains of Arkansas last Summer which did not have a single window in it. How the people managed to get along without the sunshine in their home I could not imagine. Perhaps the man who pretends to have a Christian home, but has no religious papers in it, could tell. He is living in a house without windows. He may depend on a secular paper for his religious news. But that is very much as though the Arkansas mountaineer, whose cabin sheltered me during a rain storm, should take an auger and bore a hole through the wall of his queer abode to let in light for his family. He might be able to peep out, but would not see much, and the glorious sunshine of that splendid mountain region could never crowd in through such an opening. Get a good religious paper into the house and it will be a broad window through which the family can look out upon the whole religious world.

The religious journal, rightly chosen, will educate the young people. To read the proper things in the proper way is to get an education. Education is no longer for the few. It was so in the middle ages when a book cost a fortune. But to-day in America education is for the plow-boy as well as for the patrician. Books and papers are practically as accessible to the one as the other. The problem is not to get that boy to read or to get something for him to read, but to get him to read what will do him good. If a good, wholesome, juicy, breezy, sparkling, up-to-the-times religious paper is ready at hand in the home, and his attention is called to the parts of it in which he would be most likely to be interested, he will get many a high aspiration from its columns. I am not speaking from the standpoint of theory, but from personal experience. Many an hour in boyhood I spent with the Central Christian Advocate in my hand. How much I owe to it I can not tell. I learned the battle cries of Methodism and they fired my heart. I became familiar with the plans of our leaders, and formed an abiding purpose to help carry them out. I discovered that Christianity meant something more than the services in our meeting house; that it meant a mighty army marching to victory, and I was eager to go out and catch step with the advancing columns. I became convinced that it was a manly thing to be a clean, honest Christian, and it made me want to be one. The paper was an inspiration to my youth. Perhaps the way in which it was treated by my father and mother had something to do with its influence upon me. It was not cast aside unopened. The news of the Kingdom was ever more interesting to them than the latest political gossip. When the paper brought news of some fresh enterprise of the church, or some recent success of her servants, it was much more likely to get talked about than the themes discussed in the secular papers. Set the boys and girls the example of finding something good in the religious paper to be thought about, and talked about, and they will not leave the paper wholly neglected. If you do not already take your own church paper, ask your pastor to have it sent to you at once. Then you will know for yourself the new uplift and outlook which it brings to the home.—Western Advocate.

NOTES.

As a rule, we do not publish more than two communications on the same subject in the same issue. In this issue, however, we have departed from our rule, and allowed a number of the brethren to have their say.

A preacher in one of our patronizing Conferences—a wide-awake, progressive man—writes: "I am pleased with the ADVOCATE; its editorials, its selections for all departments, and its entire make-up." Very few mails reach us that do not bring something akin to this in tone.

Mrs. Newcomb McGee, of Washington City, daughter of Professor Newcomb, the famous astronomer, has the distinction of being the first woman elected a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. She is also a member of the Anthropological Society. She was graduated in medicine from the Columbia University in Washington, and is now at work in the Johns Hopkins Hospital, in Baltimore. Mrs. McGee has visited, with her father, all the great observatories of Europe.—Presbyterian.

Our enterprising friend, Dr. H. W. Featherstun, has published a directory for the use of the Mississippi Conference at its approaching session at Yazoo City. It contains (1) a list of the members of the committees of examination and the Conference Boards, (2) an alphabetical list of the members of the Conference and the names of the persons by whom they are to be entertained, (3) full information concerning railroad schedules. A copy of this pamphlet has been forwarded to each member of the Conference.

A few years ago, when the United States, through Mr. Seward, paid Russia seven millions of dollars for Alaska, American newspaperdom made merry over the transaction. Seven million dollars was pronounced an enormous sum to pay for a region, however extensive, whose only resources were rocks and ice and a few fur-bearing animals. It turns out, however, that the Alaskan mountains are rich in gold, and, notwithstanding the severity of the climate, it is thought that these mines will soon be worked at a good profit.

A Kentucky congressman, who had been selected to deliver the oration on Kentucky Day at the Atlanta Fair, has been exonsed. A majority of the Kentucky Board of lady managers are strong advocates of temperance, and the record of the aforesaid congressman was not exactly in keeping with their principles. Hence some one else will do the orating on Kentucky Day. This was hardly expected from Kentucky. Surely the world moves. Louisiana may reach the level of Kentucky some day; but if so, it will be after Romanism ceases to be the dominant religious force.

The Court of Appeals, of Kentucky, has given an interesting construction of the separate-coach law in the case of Fannie Quinn, a colored woman, who sued the Louisville and Nashville for damages because insulted by a drunken white passenger, whom the conductor had allowed to ride in the coach set apart for colored passengers. The Court of Appeals holds that the law was meant for protection against altercations between the races, and that the railroad company is responsible for the offensive conduct of a white passenger allowed to ride in the colored coach contrary to law.—Central Methodist.

One of the most expensive books ever published will be "The Life of Christ," soon to be issued at Tours, France. It will have nearly four hundred illustrations reproduced in color from the paintings by James Tissot, upon the production of which the artist has been engaged for the past ten years. The first twenty copies of the book will sell for $1 000 each, and the remaining copies, 990 in all, for $300 each. The publishers ask no less than $12 for a single specimen illustration. By a special concession from the artist and publishers to The Century, that magazine will be enabled to reproduce twelve of the choicest of these pictures in its Christmas number.

Incredible as it may seem, a soft, downy mineral wool is now being manufactured out of rock—sandstone and blast-furnace slag. The process is simple: The rock or slag is melted in a large cupola, "and as it trickles out at the taphole in a somewhat sluggish stream," a high-pressure steam jet, directed upon it, atomizes it, blowing it in fleecy clouds into the storage room provided for it, where it is collected, after settling, and serves for a variety of useful purposes when placed upon the market—a sound deadener in floors and walls, a means of fire-proofing, and a non-conducting covering both for steam pipes and cold-storage partitions. Mineral wool is as soft and delicate as the animal fibre.—Zion's Herald.

A New Book.

THE HISTORY OF OUR COUNTRY. A text-book for schools. By O. H. Cooper, LL.D., superintendent of schools, Galveston, Texas, and ex-superintendent of public instruction for the State of Texas; Harry F. Estill, Professor of Latin and Civil Government in the Sam Houston State Normal Institute, Huntsville, Texas; and Leonard Lemmon, superintendent of Sherman schools, Texas. 12mo. Cloth. 488 pages, including an appendix of 35 pages. Fully illustrated with choice pictures, maps, and charts. For introduction, price, $1. Ginn & Company, Publishers, Boston, New York, Chicago, Atlanta, Dallas.

The above-named work is a fine specimen of the book-maker's art. The paper, typography, binding, maps and illustrations are excellent. The style is admirable for its clearness and simplicity. The selection of materials has been made with care discrimination. Unlike many works of its class, it is not a mere collection of dry statistics, but an interesting narrative of the leading events in our country's history. Moreover, the materials are admirably arranged, the facts following each other in a natural order. It differs also from many school histories in the fact that it contains no material that is above the comprehension of the mind of childhood. So far as we have examined it, we find it thoroughly accurate in its statements. It is also entirely free from a sectional bias. It deals fairly with all sections. It is evidently the work of practical educators, who understand thoroughly the needs of the school-room as to the teaching of United States history.

Louisiana Conference.

HOW TO GET THERE.

All the railroads have fixed the rate to Conference at one and one-third fare for the round trip, certificate plan—that is, full fare is to be paid coming and a certificate obtained which will entitle the holder to one-third fare returning after being properly signed by the secretary of the Conference.

If you can secure a through ticket to McManus, do so; if not, be careful to procure a certificate as often as a ticket is purchased—else you will lose just so much of your reduced rate.

Persons on the Southern Pacific will pass through New Orleans and come to McManus on the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley railroad, taking 7:30 A. M or 4 P. M. train at Illinois Central depot.

Those on the Texas and Pacific line will come to Baton Rouge and get the train for McManus about 7 P. M. All who come by way of Vicksburg will leave on the early morning train, reaching McManus about 1 o'clock P M. This is the only south-bound train that will stop at McManus, and, with the morning train from New Orleans, makes connection with the train for Jackson.

For the convenience of persons in New Orleans, the 4 P M train, arriving at McManus about 8:30 P. M., will also make connection with Jackson railroad, but only for two nights—Monday and Tuesday—the ninth and tenth.

Several notable improvements have been introduced in the Popular Science Monthly, henceforth to be known as Appletons' Popular Science Monthly, with the beginning of the current volume. In response to numerous demands, the publication of the magazine simultaneously in this country and in England has been begun. The new volume opens with a list of writers, including David A. Wells, Fitzgerald Marriott, Daniel G. Brinton, E. P. Evans, James Sully, G. Frederick Wright and the Dean of Montreal, which should win it many new friends both at home and abroad.

Those Palmar Camp Ground Wheresses and Resolutions.

MR. EDITOR: Permit me to thank Dr. J. A. Parker for his admirable criticism of that remarkable document which appeared recently in the columns of the ADVOCATE—the somewhat notorious Palmer Camp Ground wheresses and resolutions. Zeal is a good thing, but zeal without knowledge, or zeal misdirected, is not to be desired or coveted, as the brethren whose names were appended to that peculiar effusion or diffusion will some day realize to their own regret. Thanks to Dr. Parker for punctuating their fond conceit. Yours faithfully,

T. L MELLEN.

Notice.

If the brethren of the North Mississippi Conference will bring their missionary money to Conference in either New York, New Orleans, or Memphis exchange, they will confer a very great favor on the Board of Missions. If you bring it this way, you are protected against loss and thieves. If you lose your exchange, of course it can't be collected by another. If you fall into the hands of bad men, they can't collect your exchange until you write your name across the back of it. So this is a safe way for you, and greatly accommodates the Board of Missions. Please do it when you can.

Corinth District Preachers' Meeting met at Baldwin, Miss., Oct. 30 and 31, 1895.

The attendance was rather small; but, with an enterprising presiding elder and an interesting programme, we had, notwithstanding the continued rain, a most pleasant, profitable and spiritual occasion. We were glad to have with us Rev. G. W. Bachman. The preaching was done by W. C. Harris, G. W. Gordon and myself.

The Baldwin people entertained us in good Methodist style.

Our Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.

"ARLINGTON B."

The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take up, convenient foot-rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned, and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearings polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a quick dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—THE "ARLINGTON B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

OUR OFFER.

To anyone, not now a subscriber to this paper, who will send us $20.50, we will send the machine and the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE one year. To old subscribers we make the following offer: Pay your subscription to January, '97, and send us $18.50 additional, and we will send you the machine.

We allow purchaser to test the machine for ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

TO AGENTS:

We will send this machine free to any preacher or other person who will send us twenty new subscribers with the cash—$40.

A CHAPTER ABOUT CHILDREN.

If I knew the box where the smiles are kept,
No matter how large the key
Or strong the bolt, I would try so hard,
'Twould open, I know, for me;
Then over the land and sea broadcast,
I'd scatter the smiles to play,
That the children's faces might hold them fast
For many and many a day.

If I knew a box that was large enough
To hold all the frowns I meet,
I would like to gather them everyone,
From nursery, school and street;
Then, folding and holding, I'd pack them in,
And, turning the monster key,
I'd hire a giant to drop the box
To the depth of the deepest sea.

Don'ts for Wives.

BY A HUSBAND.

Don't talk too much about what "lovely times" you used to have when you were "free and single," or your husband may wish that you were so at the present time; and it is a sad day in the life of any wife when her husband cherishes that opinion regarding her. It is a sadder day still for him.

Don't treasure up all of your daily trials for your husband's ears when he comes home at night.

Don't tell him how bad the children have been, or how hateful the kitchen girl has acted, or how the stove wouldn't draw, or how the clothes-line broke with the week's washing on it, or how the baby has cried all day, or how badly the ironing has been done, or how the milkman left milk that soured in an hour, or how little ice the iceman left for fifteen cents, or how the grocer has sent bad eggs for good ones. Don't add all these things to the trials your husband has borne all day. He has had his trials, you may be sure of that, and, unless he is an exception to the general rule, he has not said anything at all about them to you.

Don't "nag" at him all the time. That is the hatefulest little word I know of, and the "nagging" practice is one of the most vicious. Much should be forgiven a husband who has a "nagging" wife—one whose tongue is never still, and whose every word is fault-finding or complaint. Such a woman is a blot on the fair face of creation, and her husband has much to bear. Whatever else you may do, don't nag your husband.

Don't compare him to other men to his disadvantage. Don't tell him that you "do wish" he were like this woman's or that woman's husband. Nothing can flatter him so much as your openly expressed conviction that you have the best and kindest and handsomest husband in all the world. No doubt you told him so once, and even if you think differently now, nothing but harm can come of your telling him so.

Don't ask him to be both master and mistress of the house. Don't ask him what you shall have for dinner, or burden him with all of the family marketing. Don't expect him to oversee your servants or to do things that you, as mistress of your own home, ought to do. He probably has his hands and his mind full keeping up his end of the row.

Don't look for perfection in your husband. He has not found perfection in you, has he? Perfect men are so rare in this world that if one could be found he would be worth his weight in gold as a dime-museum curiosity, and perfect women are equally rare. If your husband is "as good as the average," be thankful that he is no worse, and bear in mind that it rests largely with you whether he grows better or worse.

Of course, nearly all of these "Don'ts" apply to husbands as well as to wives. Men are no better than women, nor as good—they have their failings by the score, but don't increase their short-comings by showing them the weak side of your own characters.—Good Housekeeping.

The Art of Forgetting.

A lady, whose life in a certain well-known educational institution has not been without its trials and vexations, was talking about her experience to her friends at home.

"Are all the people at the institute so perfectly lovely?" asked a listener.

With a bright smile she answered, "Somehow I remember the pleasant things and forget the others."

No doubt this was in part an acquired grace. Is it not one well worth cultivating, if only for our own peace of mind?

A child begged for the story of Daniel one night at bed-time.

"I am afraid," said the mother, "you will dream about lions."

"Oh, no," returned the little one, "I will dream about Daniel and leave out the lions."

How much more cheerful and serene our lives might be if we, too, could leave out the lions. It is true that in much of our life the sweet and the sad are so interwoven we can not separate them without destroying the entire fabric. We would not forget the grief which opened to us the heart of a friend, nor the parting which was not all pain, nor the dying glory which we saw through tears. Over such experiences we pray, "Lord, keep my memory green;" but the cutting remark, the cold neglect, the unkind act, Lord, help us to forget.

It is not worth while to cherish the memory of our mistakes and failures. Let them serve their purpose of prevention for the future, and be forgotten. They should be stepping-stones, by means of which we may attain a higher level, and not a wall to impede our progress.

"Oh, Emeline, let us forget the past and begin anew." This exhortation was found on a fragment of a letter written by some unknown person, and was often repeated to me half jocosely by the finder. It might be well for us to take the words as a motto. "Forget the past and begin anew;" not the kindness and friendship and joy of the past, but its bitterness, its vexations, its mistakes.—Selected.

What a Risk She Took.

We read recently of quite a young and highly respected young girl who eloped with a young man, whose habits were not such as the father of the girl approved. He indulged in drink. The girl was taken back home by her father, who gave as his principal reason, the drinking habit of the disappointed groom. He did right. No matter what other good qualities a young man may have, if he drinks, even only occasionally, fathers should see to it that they shall not become husbands to their daughters. The Alabama Advocate, in an article giving advice to girls on this subject, truthfully says:

"If a young man whom you know to be intemperate and addicted to bad habits, begins to play the devoted, kindly check him at once and save yourself trouble and ruin. The man on whom the demon of drink or gambling has laid his iron grip is not himself—will not do to trust, especially in the sacred relation of husband. Live single till you are as gray as a great-grandmother, rather than barter yourself for the terrors of a drunkard's wife."

The Value of Money.

The adventures of two girls in a shopping expedition as related by one of them may prove suggestive to other young people.

One of the girls was continually exclaiming, "How cheap this lace is," "What a bargain in ribbons." "This cloth is going for a song," and the close of her first day in the great stores found her pocketbook depleted and her arms loaded with remnants of so-called bargains, none of which exactly suited her. The other shopper spent no more money than her friend, but she purchased just the dress pattern that she desired, gloves of the exact shade that would be most serviceable, and a simple, becoming hat that spoke unmistakably of city style and elegance.

"Why is it," the younger girl exclaimed, almost in tears, "that you get so much more for fifty dollars than I ever can?"

"Because," the other replied, laconically, "I do not fritter."

One of the greatest benefits which redounds to the self-supporting girl is the proper appreciation of the value of money. The girl who has earned her money will be less likely to indulge in needless extravagances than the girl who has taken a check from her father's ready hand. She learns by experience that some things are superficial and some are essential, and she saves on the one to spend on the other. She learns to sink trifles and know solid values; to plan at home what she is to buy, deciding definitely upon color, material, quantity and price, and not allowing herself to fluctuate under the eloquence of the salesman. Above all, she learns never to buy a thing because it is cheap. The gambling table is not a surer grave for a boy's money than is the average bargain counter for a girl's rule.—Lucy Elliot Keeler.

The Nasty Word.

To think before you speak is so wise an axiom that one would hardly think it needful to emphasize it by repetition. And yet in how many cases the hasty temper flashes out in the hasty word, and the latter does its work with the precision and the pain of the swift stiletto! Singularly enough, the hasty word oftenest wounds those who love one another dearly, and the very closeness of their intimacy affords them opportunity for the sudden thrust. We know the weak points in the armor of our kinsman and our friend; we are aware of his caprices, and ordinarily are tender and compassionate even of his vanities and his small fancies and whims; but there dawns a day when it is written in the book of fate that we shall be as cruel as we are loving. We are cold, or tired, or hungry. We are anxious over unpaid bills, or our expected letters have not arrived, or one of the children is ailing, and we dread the outcome of the malady. So politeness fails us, fortitude is vanquished, philosophy is in abeyance, and we say that which we repent in sackcloth and ashes. But though the hasty word may be forgiven, it is not at once forgotten. It has flawed the crystal of our friendship; the place may be cemented, but there is a shadowy scar on the gleaming surface. Oh, if the word of haste had but been left unspoken; if the strong hand of patience had but held back the sword as it was about to strike!—Harper's Bazar.

A Sunny Face.

Wear it. It is your privilege. It has the quality of mercy; it is twice blessed. It blesses its possessor and all who come under its benign influence; it is a daily boon to him who wears it, and a constant, ever-flowing benediction to all his friends. Men and women, youth and children, seek the friendship of the sunny-faced. All doors are open to those who smile. All social circles welcome cheeriness. A sunny face is an open-sesame to heart and home. By it burdens are lightened, cares dispelled, sorrows banished, and hope made to reign triumphant, where fear, doubt and despondency held high carnival.

Get the glow and radiance from such nearness to the throne as God permits to his own. Bring from a holy and divine communion a face luminous with light, and let it glow and shine on all around. A little child on the street of a great city, wishing to cross at a point where the surging throng and the passing vehicles made the feat dangerous to the strong, and especially to the weak, paused, hesitated, and then asked a sunny-faced gentleman to carry her across. It was the sunny face that won the child's confidence. Childhood makes no mistakes.—Exchange.

HYGIENE.

Preventatives of Degeneration.

How to prevent individual and family degeneration is a most important question.

Romondino tells us that:

"To guard against degeneracy—be it physical, mental, or moral—one must be continually on the watch. Health is everything, and wealth gathered at the expense of health is of no earthly benefit when the latter is gone, as no expenditure of wealth can bring it back. Health is something that should never be risked or trifled with, any more than one's moral status or welfare. As a noted criminologist observes, there is no worse calamity that can befall a man than the successful issue of his first piece of villainy. So it is with the man who successfully gets through his first debauch, or who does not suffer at once from the evil effects of an unhealthy habitation, or while following some health-undermining occupation. The man who can not take a drink of liquor or smoke tobacco without suffering from headache may sadly lament his fate and envy the man who can navigate homeward under a quart load, or who can smoke from morning until bed-time, but he will outwind the latter in the long run. An inability to carouse or to drink like an Alexander the Great may be a sign of lacking nerve force and of lacking endurance, but it does not follow that this lacking vitality, or endurance, will hasten you on to any degenerative changes—such weak vessels are like some old, antiquated swallow-tailed nuptial coats, made to last for ever for want of wear. So, never envy the man who eats for his breakfast a dozen or two of fried oysters, a steak garnished with a pound of potatoes, a Spanish omelet, rolls and toast without end, and half-a-dozen pancakes with lots of jelly, and the whole washed down with several cups of coffee. A man can not by any possibility consume and assimilate so much food; and although he may possess kidneys that will work like a pair of Dutch windmills, and a pair of lungs as active and as forcible as a blast furnace, such a gastronomic gait can not long be kept up. Be temperate, keep cool, take the world as it comes, be satisfied, pay the doctor to look out for your health—in a hygienic sense only—keep your premises in a sanitary condition, and make good, sound moral and physical health the watchword for yourself and family. Don't worry about the future nor try to see where you come in in the Apocalypse. Build your house to live in, and not to be looked at from the outside. Dress for comfort, for the climate, and for the season, and not for fashion nor for looks; eat to live, and don't live to eat, and by so doing you will last longer, and run the greatest number of chances of going off like a horse or an ox—who happily is not weeks and months doing that which should be done in a few moments."—The Journal of Hygiene.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

TO MAKE WHITE LOAF CAKE.—Ingredients: 1 cupful of butter, 2 cupfuls of sugar, 3 cupfuls of flour, whites of 8 eggs, one and a half teaspoonful of lemon or vanilla, 2 teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-half cupful of sweet milk. Measure the butter, one cup level full, into the cake-bowl, and cream it. (To cream butter is to first pour cold water in and wash the salt out; then take a wooden spoon and beat the butter until it is light.) Next, take the same cup and measure one cup of granulated sugar even full; stir it slowly into the butter until both are thoroughly mixed, then stir in a second cupful of sugar, and after mixing well, let butter and sugar stand while you whip the whites of eggs to a froth. Measure the baking powder into the flour and sift together. It is the only way to mix thoroughly. Now, take one cupful of the flour and beat it well into the butter and sugar; then beat in a little egg, and so on, first one and then the other, until all the flour is in and all the whites of the eggs. The flavoring goes in next, and, last of all, the milk, a little at a time. Always place a shallow pan of water in upper grate when baking cake.—Ladies' Home Companion.

OBITUARIES.

DOYLE—Miss LETTIE E. DOYLE was the second daughter of the late Capt. D. B Doyle and sister A. E. Doyle. She was born at Doyline, Webster parish, La., March 28, 1858, and died July 28, 1895, leaving to mourn their irreparable loss a devoted mother, three sisters and two brothers.

She passed away in great peace. Her sister, Mrs. Magee, who waited on her through all her sickness writes: "Dear Sister Tillie never spoke directly of going. She knew it would be too much for us to bear, but gave me many sweet assurances that all was well with her. She died as she had lived—a patient, gentle Christian. Her sickness was long and tedious, but she never complained."

After the death of her father, who was the steward and Sunday-school superintendent of the church at Doyline, she took his place as far as possible. Though not a steward in the legal sense of the word, she faithfully filled the functions of that office and also acted as Sunday-school superintendent. Whether in church at home or abroad, she was ever the earnest worker and same gentle, sweet-spirited, considerate Christian woman, deporting herself as if "Thou, God, seest me." She was, in the language of her sister, "the strength, life and light of the home." She served the church in early life.

In her death the church and community sustain a heavy loss. The bereaved family is stricken with grief, but in it all they have God's grace, and sorrow not even as others who have no hope. LEWIS A. REED.

New Orleans, Oct. 30, 1895.

LEWIS—Mrs. SALLIE M. LEWIS, daughter of Rev. A. J. and Mrs. Leona J. Lee, and wife of Mr. J. F. Lewis was born Nov. 12, 1861, and entered into everlasting rest Sept. 13, 1895. She died at her home near Batesville, Miss., surrounded by her family and friends, to each of whom she talked calmly, assuring them of her perfect peace with God, and asking them to meet her in heaven. She called to her bedside her children, one by one, and her husband gave them her blessing, and left them in the hands of God, and went peacefully to sleep to awake no more till the morn of the resurrection. Her life was an exemplification of what the Christian religion will do for its votaries. Loving and self-sacrificing, considering her own pleasure as nothing where the wishes of others were considered, her life was a daily offering; and as the memory of the just is blessed, it will be long before the influence of such a character shall cease. If her life was beautiful, her death was transcendently so. It was in every respect a triumph over the King of terrors.

Her little daughter, Helen Phillips, aged four years, preceded her to the better land only a few hours, and the meeting between mother and child must have been such as the angels only knew.

The loss of mother and child is felt bitterly by the sorrowing family, and a large circle of devoted friends join with them in mourning for those who are not lost, but gone before.

A FRIEND.

THOMAS WILLIAM BAKER THOMAS was born Dec. 5, 1838, in Dinwiddie county, Va.; son of Edwyn A. E. Thomas; came to Mississippi in 1880; joined the M. E. Church, South, 1886; was married to Miss Pattie Connell, May 5, 1887, in Anstralia, Miss., by Rev. R. Standefer; died Oct. 25, 1895, at his home, Derby, Miss. He was beloved by all.

As a citizen, he always took an active part in every enterprise that looked to the better interest of his community. He was a loving, tender, and obedient son. He was a model husband, endeavoring to gratify every desire of his wife, denying himself for her happiness, always cheerful and bright, making sunshine in the home. As a father, he could not be surpassed. Two sweet little children preceded him to their heavenly home; one little girl left behind. He was true to the church. He gave liberally to every cause supported by the church. He loved the preacher, loved for them to come to his home. He was a constant sufferer for thirty-seven days; but he bore it with patience and Christian fortitude. The writer was with him a great deal through his sickness, and often prayed with him. He died in the faith of a Christian. While earth is made sad by his leaving, heaven is brighter by his coming. May God comfort the bereaved ones to say, "Thy will be done." We may meet him by and by.

ST JOHN—Bro. JAS. M. ST. JOHN was born in Alabama, Aug. 3, 1835. His parents moved to this State in 1870, and he came with them. He was married to Miss Mary Sue Mitchell in 1859, by whom he had five children. He joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1858, and has been an acceptable member since that time.

During the last few years his health has been very bad, but has failed very fast this year. For seven weeks before his death he was confined to his room, and most of the time to his bed. He suffered intensely from rheumatism and other ailments, but was patient in all suffering, and gave many expressions of readiness to depart and be with God. His mother tells me that he sang songs of praise to God. All along through the last days of his illness, and just before his death, he said, "I am near the crossing, and will soon be on the other side." He died Sept. 11, 1895.

He leaves the wife, with several children. May God comfort all of the bereaved!

ROBERT RANDLE, P. C.

Shiloh, La.

NABORS—Died, Oct. 28, at the old home near Mansfield, La., Mrs. SUSAN C. NABORS, daughter of J. V. and K. McHenry. She was born in Shelby county, Ala., Dec. 21, 1829; moved to Arkansas in February, 1849; moved to Louisiana in 1866. She joined the Methodist Church at the age of fourteen. She was married to J. H. Nabors, Dec. 2, 1847. He and four sons live to mourn her loss.

This is the brief record of a beautiful life. Fifty-two years a follower of Christ; forty-eight years a faithful wife; over forty years of glorious motherhood. Now she has entered an eternity of rest and happiness. The faithful heart is still, but its influence of love lives on. The patient mother-hands are folded, but "their works do follow them." The weary feet have completed their journey, but they have left a path for us to follow. The gentle voice is hushed, but the life-lesson it taught is finished. "Her children arise up and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her."

It is rarely the lot of woman to be so beloved. In all the walks of life—wife, mother, grandmother, sister, friend—she was the perfect type. She has left a desolate void in the home and hearts she blessed with her love. Through the long dark days of her suffering she was brave and cheerful, comforted by the care and devotion of her dear ones, and the Christian's solace, the Bible. In her greatest pain she repeated, "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want." We who knew her best are better because she lived. Her life was a benediction.

"Out of the shadow of sadness,
Into the sunshine of gladness,
Into the light of the blest.
Out of a land very dreary,
Out of a world very weary,
Into the rapture of rest."

ADAIR—Mrs. ROSA ADAIR, wife of Wm. Adair, and daughter of Mr. Carnes, of Union Church, was born in Jefferson county in 1850; was married to Wm. Adair, Sept. 4, 1879. She was converted early in life, and joined the M. E. Church in 1887, and died in Wasson, Miss., Feb. 26, 1895, leaving four children, her husband, with sisters and brothers and parents, to mourn her departure.

She was sick in bed for eight months, and while sick revealed the inner Christian life that had not been hidden for many years. She suffered as comparatively few suffered, but bore it with perfect submission to our Father's will. She preached Jesus to her own household and all that visited her, which were many. With such a sweet spirit we loved to visit her to be benefited as well as to try to comfort her. Her spirituality was perfected as long as she remained with us; not a word of complaint was ever heard from her lips. She was so interested in the welfare of others she lost sight largely of her own suffering. She lived for others.

The sentiment of the hymn, "Blessed Assurance," could well be added to this. She is not dead, only gone to "sleep in Jesus."

W. T. GRIFFIN.

HALL—Sister CURTIS HALL (nee Sloan) was born Sept. 7, 1839, and died Aug. 17, 1895, at her home in Memphis, Tenn. She professed religion and joined the M. E. Church, South, at Abbeville, Miss., in her fifteenth year, where she was an active worker until she was married about seven years ago. After her marriage she moved to Memphis, Tenn., where she united with the Presbyterian Church.

Hers was a life spent for others in many services of love. She lived to see the church built for which she labored so much, and in which society she was the most active worker. Thus ends a life which, to the sick and afflicted that had enjoyed its acts of love and mercy, was like ointment poured forth. She died in full assurance of Christian faith, and her soul is at rest. May Heaven's gentlest ministries touch the lives of her two children, and may the husband live and die unto Christ!

BEN P. JACO.

Abbeville, Miss.

BOUYER—Mrs. SARAH BOUYER, wife of Mr. Sam Bouyer, departed this life Aug. 2, 1895, in the triumphs of the Christian's faith. She was a consistent, active member of the M. E. Church, South, twenty-three years. She was the mother of nine children, whom she endeavored by precept and example to bring up in the "nurture and admonition of the Lord." No doubt six of them were watching and waiting for her on "the bright, eternal shore," having preceded her to the "home of the soul." She left the richest of legacies to those who mourn her departure: a consecrated Christian life. May they all emulate her example and meet in heaven!

EUGENE JOHNSON, Pastor.

Indianola, Miss.

GOLDEN—Mrs. W. H. GOLDEN died at her home in Leake county, Oct. 21, 1895, in the fifty-first year of her age. She suffered for one hundred days, but never complained. She was perfectly willing to go, and when God called her she fell on sleep like an infant, without a struggle.

Sister Golden joined the Baptist Church in early life, and lived a consistent member till her death. She leaves a true, good-hearted, and kind husband and a sweet little girl to mourn her loss.

Bro. Golden, you and little Mary, look to God for guidance, and he will some day lead you to the same peaceful home to which Sister Golden has gone. F.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn, New York, in the "New York Evangelist:" "Of all Bibles yet issued in our country, the most superb in execution and completeness of contents is the 'Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.' Sabbath-school teachers will find this elegant volume a little library of information in itself."

REV. ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., President of, and Professor in, the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.: "It pleases me very greatly. I regard the help which it affords to a correct pronunciation of Scripture proper names as doubling the value of the edition. I trust the book will be received as it deserves to be."

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Belfast, Me., has three women as pastors of its churches.

An electric car plunged into the river at Cleveland on Nov. 17. Fourteen people were drowned.

The women of Philadelphia are proposing to hold a bazar to procure hospital supplies for the Cuban revolutionists.

The chrysanthemum show, which was held in this city, for the benefit of the anti-toxin fund, closed on Monday. It was a great success.

Thomas A. Edison has won his case in the matter of incandescent lights, and will continue to get his royalties on every lamp.

The New Orleans Sugar Exchange forwarded a few days ago a beautifully arranged sugar exhibit to the Atlanta Exposition.

Isaac L. Bryan, a negro, is suing a Chicago restaurant for letting him sit half an hour at a table without asking for his order.

Librarian Spofford, of the Congressional Library, has been fully investigated, and the charges against him are triumphantly refuted.

A party of distinguished commercial and professional leaders of Chicago, who composed the directory of the late World's Fair, were in the city last week.

Last week something more than $3,000,000 in gold was exported to Europe from New York, and it is regarded as extremely probable that there will be further shipments this week.

The pastor of the Congregational Church at Flint, Mich., proposed to run an opposition to the saloons by opening his church as a sort of clubhouse on Saturdays, that the farmers and others may have a place to meet and warm themselves.

Mrs. Elizabeth Preston Davis, of Washington, whose achievements in astronomy have placed her among the foremost mathematicians in the world, is about to complete the calculations of the ephemeris, or almanac of the sun, a scientific publication of the United States Observatory. These calculations brings this work up to the twentieth century.

In the annual report of the Chief of the Engineer Corps of the Army to the Secretary of War it is stated that arrangements have been made to mount two modern heavy guns on disappearing carriages at Fort St. Philip, below this city, the site for a battery adjacent to the old fort and forming part of it has been located and will be prepared.

The most disastrous conflagration that Meridian, Miss., has ever known occurred on Nov. 17, in the burning of the sash and blind factory, with enormous quantities of lumber, and the Citizens' Compress and warehouse, with some 3,500 bales of cotton. A moderate estimate places the loss at $250 000, which is only half covered by insurance.

FOREIGN.

A daughter was born to the Czar and Czarina of Russia on Nov. 15.

The Czar gets an income of $30,000 a day; the Sultan, $20 000; the Kaiser, $10,000, and the President of these great United States, $137.

Campos' suggestion of concessions in the line of home rule to Cuba comes too late. The Cubans have started out to get real home rule, and they are bound to have it.

A steam launch, belonging to the British cruiser "Edgar," is reported to have been lost in Japanese waters, and forty-eight men who were on board of her are said to have been drowned.

The Venezuelan government has succeeded in frustrating the plans of the revolutionists. The principal leaders have been captured and perfect peace will be established in a very short time.

The Sultan of Turkey apparently has not tired of snubbing Great Britain. Recently he decorated Bahri Pasha, who had been removed from a governorship at the instance of the British ambassador, for ill-treating Armenians.

The first impulse of the move of civilization in Corea, resulting from the China-Japanese war, is noted in a dispatch to the State Department from United States Minister Sill, transmitting a royal decree establishing a system of schools in that country.

The Sultan called on the ministers to devise plans for mobilizing half a million troops. It being hinted that the treasury was empty, the Sultan flew into a passion and as a result several ministers tendered their resignations, which were not accepted.

The Emperor of China has issued an official bulletin on the war in Formosa for the information of his subjects, telling them that the Japanese army and navy has been totally annihilated, together with some seventy battleships and 80,000 men that foreign nations had sent to the assistance of Japan.

The recent advices from Cuba indicate that the insurgents have made still further progress, as they have invaded the province of Matanzas, and, instead of waiting for General Campos to carry out his threat of inaugurating a campaign in force, they have sought him for the purpose of offering battle.

A prominent Spaniard, who is in close touch with the Spanish government, says that before Spain will concede Cuban independence or permit the island to come under a United States protectorate or rule, she will throw Cuba into the hands of England, conceding to England ostensible possession for a number of years until England collects the sum of money which is due her from Spain for advances made to carry on the war with Cuba.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. ADKINS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

THE FIRST MISSIONARY JOURNEY.

(Acts xiii, 4; xiv, 27.)

1. Rightly some one has said, that the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the Christian church.

(1) Had Stephen not been stoned to death and the believers not been cruelly persecuted, they would not have scattered, preaching the Word.

(2) The blood of Huss, burned at the stake by Rome's votaries, gave Protestantism a firm foothold in continental Europe.

(3) Bishop Cranmer's cruel death led England to turn her back on wicked Rome.

(4) Much as we deprecate the recent massacre of missionaries in China, their death will give new impetus to missionary operations. It will lead to the conversion of the Flowery Kingdom.

2 Arriving at Antioch, returning from their first missionary tour, the disciples informed the converts that the Lord had opened the door of faith to the Gentiles.

(1) Opposition had been less active. Had enjoyed ample opportunity of preaching Christ.

(2) In our day all barriers seem to have been removed. Not a country now which heroic men and women can not enter for purpose of Christianization.

(3) The knowledge of medicine in the missionary is calculated to ensure great success. Educating gratis the indigent youth will have the same effect.

3. The disciples properly considered themselves mere tools in the hand of God. "They rehearsed all that God had done with them."

(1) Are mortified when we hear preachers declare that they will start a revival. They may protract the meeting and faithfully preach and pray, but the revival is of God.

(2) The poet understood this when he said of the true Christian:

"A broken and emptied vessel,
For the Master's use made meet."

(3) Tools. Should be first class. In proper condition. With antiquated and rusty tools the best mechanic can not produce satisfactory work.

Union Epworth League Meeting.

The Union Epworth League met in the Morean Methodist Church, Thursday, Nov. 14. A large number of Epworth Leaguers were present. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion; the altar was covered and hidden with immense banks of flowers. The local Epworth League showed much hospitality, and their efforts to entertain the Union were thoroughly appreciated.

The different reports of the Leagues throughout the city showed a marked improvement over last month and were, on the whole, very encouraging.

The event of the evening was a paper by Miss Alma M. Sawtelle, of the Carondelet Street League, on the subject, "Famous Women of Methodism." The essay was pervaded by remarkable good taste and sound judgment, and was very eloquently phrased. It was well received and elicited much favorable comment.

The singing was under the able management of Mr. T. O. Adams, and aided largely to the success of the meeting.

The next meeting will be held at Parker Chapel.

"Understandest Thou What Thou Readest?"

Lord Bacon rightly said, that "reading makes a full man."

Not all can be good speakers; but everybody is able to become a good reader.

Reading a pathetic narrative, some readers can elicit tears from the eyes of the auditors; other readers, presenting the same subject, superinduce sleepiness.

Some of the greatest theologians carefully read in private the lessons designed for public use. Novices deem such preparation superfluous.

Reading Scripture, a good commentary is indispensable. We like home-spun clothes; but home-spun interpretation of the Bible leads frequently to error. Find out what the learned have to say on the subject.

The division of Scripture into chapters and verses is the work of a monk. It is not always wise to adhere to his arrangement.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION promises to surpass itself during the coming year. There is hardly a famous man or woman in Great Britain or the United States who has not been among its contributors. Among the story-writers for the year 1896 who will contribute to its columns are Frank R. Stockton, Harriet Prescott Spofford, Clark Russell, C. A. Stephens, Mrs. Burton Harrison and Rudyard Kipling.

It aims, of course, primarily to be entertaining, but this does not debar it from publishing remarkable contributions by such world-renowned men as the Lord Chief Justice of England, Judge Oliver Wendell Holmes, ex-Speaker T. B. Reed, Camille Flammarion, Gen. Nelson A. Miles, Sir Benjamin Ward Richardson and the Dean of Salisbury. It is not unlikely that The Companion will also have another contribution from Mr. Gladstone, who has written on three occasions for it.

The Christian religion never divides men, never splits up a human family or belittles our human relations. The Christian religion would have us all brought into a common sympathy, united by a common spirit of loyalty to the same Savior, and would give each of us the same badge, the old, grim, black, accursed cross, which may be turned into the very symbol of the heart of God himself, the greatest sufferer, the one sufferer, the only heart that knows the meaning of infinite woe.—Rev. Joseph Parker.

We are enjoying the results of a gracious revival in our church here. The very efficient labors of Dr. I. W. Cooper, of Meridian, are a lasting benediction to our church and town. His preaching was attended with power and the demonstration of the Spirit. Sinners were convicted, penitents converted, backsliders reclaimed, and the church wonderfully blessed. I would as soon have Bro. Cooper with me in a meeting as any man I ever saw. Thank the Lord for his visit to Macon, Miss.

What is the Origin, Growth, Function and Prospects of the Presiding Eldership?

BY REV. F. N PARKER.

[The following essay was read before the New Orleans Preachers' Meeting a short time since, and furnished to the ADVOCATE for publication by request of the editor.]

This is a large topic. It embraces genesis, evolution, ecclesiastical anatomy, and prophecy; and all this about a man—indeed, more than a man; a man over men; one who has awakened in the midst of General Conference deliberations to a larger sphere of activity than has been supposed to pertain to him for years. So far as I am personally concerned, I think that he is simply a reversion to type. The presiding elder was a far more significant personage in his incipiency than he has been in the later conditions of our ecclesiastical development. There has been an inequality in the evolution of the Methodist economy—the pastor has evolved faster than the elder. This is where the trouble lies. The evangelist has now become detached from the pastorate, and threatens to outdo anything we have yet seen. In all of this there is small hope of discovering missing links. Back, then, to the facts; and if we have anything of the prophet in this distinguished presence or in the reader, something of the future of the presiding elder may be predicted.

In discussing this subject I shall be obliged to cite for your consideration certain facts which are familiar to all who are acquainted with the early history of the church. You will, therefore, pardon the seeming assumption of ignorance on your part. Nor do I pretend to any claim as to original investigation, but have availed myself of Dr. Tigert's recent and accurate investigations. (By the way, let me urge all who are interested in the constitutional history of Methodism to study Dr. Tigert's invaluable work on that subject.)

WHAT IS THE FIRST RECOGNIZED SOURCE OF THE PRESIDING ELDERSHIP?

In my opinion, the Christmas Conference. This Conference organized the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1784. It is possible to go back of this in seeking origins, but this goes back as far as we need to go. This Christmas Conference elected, and Bishops Coke and Asbury ordained, a number of elders. What did they do this for? Dr. Tigert, in his Constitutional History, says: "Thomas Ware has already told us how the ordination of sufficient elders at the Christmas Conference 'to visit the quarterly meetings and administer the ordinances' was the measure which gave rise to the office of presiding elder among us." Here are two functions assigned to the incipient presiding elder: "to visit the quarterly meetings and to administer the ordinances." It seems that the mother of invention was, humanly speaking, the mother of the presiding elder. Necessity called him forth. This reduces the matter to two simple propositions: The societies needed, on the one hand, superintendents. The Bishops could not do this for all the societies; hence the need of an assistant to visit the quarterly meetings. The people needed the sacraments and ordinances. There were no men qualified to do this; elders were necessary for this function.

The first elders elected and ordained by the first Conference of American Episcopal Methodism were assigned to the work, though not in name, of the presiding eldership. First and fundamentally, the elder was the assistant of the general superintendency, though the primary call for the eldership was the necessity for providing the people with the sacraments and ordinances. That this idea of superintendency was associated very early with the eldership is indicated by the fact that the appointments for 1785 succeeding the Christmas Conference contain the names of certain men having the title "elder" affixed, and are prefixed to groups of circuits including one or more preachers. This makes the office coeval with the origin of Episcopal Methodism. While it is true that the first Discipline of the church does not recognize the office of presiding elder specifically, yet in the first recorded proceedings of the church the beginnings of the office are clearly seen. Bishop Soule seems to be of the opinion that the functions of the presiding eldership are the continuation of the work of the general assistant, an official who preceded the organization of the church. But be this as it may, we find the origin of the presiding eldership in the very first movements of organized Methodism. Furthermore, the elder was appointed for the specific purpose of traveling among circuits, administering the sacraments and superintending the spiritual and temporal interests of the church.

THE GROWTH OF THE PRESIDING ELDERSHIP.

The first Discipline does not define the duties of a presiding elder. It simply says that the duties of an elder are "to administer the sacraments of baptism and the Lord's Supper, and to perform all the other rites prescribed by our liturgy;" but the Minutes and appointments imply more than this in connection with the first elders. This I have already indicated. Dr. Tigert tells us that "the second Discipline of the church adds to the duties of an elder as prescribed in the first: 'to exercise within his own district, during the absence of the superintendents, all the powers invested in them for the government of the church; provided that he never act contrary to an express order of the superintendents.'"

This ought to illuminate paragraph 120. In my opinion there can be no doubt but that the origin and early growth of the presiding eldership warrants the conclusion that the office is one of high power in the economy of Episcopal Methodism. It seems to me that all subsequent developments of the office are mere matters of detail, so far as the constitutional or statutory position of the office is concerned. Here you have a remarkable growth. In two years the elder has grown into the presiding elder in the absolute definition of his duties and powers. He got his name somewhat later; but what is in a name? An office with such powers needs no name; but, as matter of fact, it made its name, and was so clothed upon by general consent.

It would be interesting at this point, and cognate to this division of the subject given me, to discuss the growth of the cabinet; but I have not the data at hand, nor have I felt disposed to wade through the histories in search of details. The history can be easily supposed. The growth of the church required advice in the matter of appointments. The presiding elder, already essentially the assistant of the Bishop, was the man for this heroic business. He dropped into his place naturally, and has ever felt as those who are over some folks and under some other must necessarily feel. Candidly, I do not know much about the cabinet and its history. I shall leave further thought upon this subject to your memories of the past, and your hopes and anticipations for the future. If the vicissitudes of the itinerancy ever militate in placing you in the office, if you are like most men, you will have had preliminary training in the art of making slates for others to sponge.

But there is one thing to be noticed in this connection, and that is, that while the elder has not increased much—indeed, he could not—the pastor has developed. The growth of the pastoral office and the lengthening of the time limit have somewhat altered relations. Now, and for many years past the great majority of the traveling ministry have been fully qualified to perform the rites and sacramental services of the church. This feature of the presiding elder's work is evidently incidental, and was so in reality at the beginning. It necessarily decreased with the growth of the church. This leaves us with the office being just what its name indicates—a form of superintendency. With the growth of the church the pastoral office has grown. In the judgment of the people the pastor has grown so tall, so imposing, that in our large cities and towns the question is not infrequently heard, "What is the use of presiding elders?" This brings me to the third division of this subject.

WHAT IS THE FUNCTION OF THE PRESIDING ELDERSHIP?

By function I have concluded that the essential and permanent work of the office is meant. From what has been already said in this paper, you will see that from the writer's point of view this function is subordinate superintendency. Methodism has, by its suffrages, constituted an episcopate with enormous powers and vast responsibilities. It is responsible for the supervision of the work. Episcopal prerogative has authority in the merest details of church work and order. The Bishops are set apart to see that the work of the church is done in accordance with the provisions of the Discipline—a body of ecclesiastical law extraordinarily comprehensive in detail. The Bishops can not attend personally to all of this; it is reached through subordinate officials. The presiding elder is their essential coadjutor and vice-superintendent. His business is to see that the Discipline is properly administered in his district; to supervise and direct the temporal and spiritual affairs of the district to which he is assigned. The presiding elder has the right, and is bound by the obligations of his office, to see that every preacher in his district conducts the affairs of his charge in accordance with the provisions of the Discipline. He can not, however, interpose his authority upon the preacher in charge where said preacher in charge is acting in accordance with his assigned position as designated in the exact provisions of the Discipline. Should this be done, it seems to me that there is recourse to the charge of maladministration.

But what of the future of the presiding elder? Will the next General Conference place restrictions upon the office on account of recent developments anent paragraph 120? If they do, it will be the first attempt in the history of the church. I am prepared to assert that, so long as connectional Episcopal Methodism remains in its integrity as a system, the office of presiding elder will be permanent. Personal superintendency is the genius of our system, from the episcopate down to the class leader; and to this fact we owe largely our coherency and efficiency as a branch of the church of Christ. So long as our church proposes to inspect the work of each congregation and take direct supervision of the personnel of its workers, so long will the need for an inspector be needed. So long as the appointments are made by the power and choice of one man, so long will advice be needed. There is work for the office—large work, great work. The office is the nexus between the individual congregation and the seat of authority, whether that authority be in the form of an episcopal functionary or presbyterial body. I have no thought as to the abolition of the office, nor do I believe that its functions will be restricted. But I do believe that there is necessity for a change in some respects. I think that the districts will be enlarged. There is now almost no need of the ritual and sacramental functions of the office, as the regular ministry can attend to that. It will be an economy of men and money to enlarge the districts. It will involve more work, perhaps, but not more than pertains to any large pastorate. Never was there an opportunity for greater usefulness in the office than to-day, especially in the city and town districts. The expansion of the active forces of modern church life is a fruitful field for intelligent and consecrated leadership. Our church has amply provided this office of leadership. Can she give us men? After all, it is a question of men, and not mere ecclesiastical functionaries. If we can produce men to adorn and utilize the office, the office will make and hold its place. But if we have lost the power to produce great men, the episcopacy itself will collapse. Want of confidence will destroy all systems. Legislation, constitutional restriction and the destructive criticism of the sporadic reformer will not help here. Give us men. Those were great men who devised and executed the scheme of organization at the Christmas Conference. We need to-day men of breadth, of spiritual force and irresistible zeal. So long as the office of presiding elder is intrusted to mere offcasts of the cabinet, who can not fit anywhere else, then certainly away with the office from the face of the earth. Let us abolish that which is a mere receptacle, a mausoleum of clerical inefficiency and incompetence. But if we can find men who are truly great, not bound up with conceptions of ecclesiastical maneuvering or the like—men who love their brethren; noble enough, strong enough to see the worth and work of their brethren—let us stand by it and the men who fill it. Manhood, Christlike manhood, made useful by study and training, will dignify that office which has been a great factor in the development of Episcopal Methodism. It is one of the characteristic and enduring effects of Wesleyan ecclesiastical statesmanship.

My Critics Reviewed—No. 1.

MR. EDITOR: In the ADVOCATE, of the fourteenth instant, Bro. Emery and Dr. Walker both have "somewhat to say" anent a communication from my pen which appeared in the ADVOCATE of the seventh instant. Neither writer mentions my name, but both controvert my views in such a way as to divert attention from the main idea under discussion.

In order to avoid being switched off the "main line" on to a "side track," I desire to restate the question raised by the brethren of the Seashore district. Here it is:

Whereas, It is contrary to the law of the M. E. Church, South, to permit unlicensed persons to occupy the pulpits of our church, or to have control of the services held therein, or in any property owned by said church.

And, whereas, In violation of said law, and in open disregard of the expressed opinion in writing delivered in this case by Bishop J. C. Keener, and officially communicated by the presiding elder, Rev. C. A. Powell, at the Quarterly Conference to the preacher in charge of Palmer Camp Ground, etc.

This first preamble asserts: "It is contrary to the law," etc., "to permit unlicensed persons . . . to have control of the services held . . . in any property owned by said church."

The only expression used in either of the preambles, from which one might gather the idea that the exercise of ministerial functions was meant, is in the use of the words, "our pulpits." Even this would require a forced construction, because everyone knows that in all the past "persons," both male and female, have "occupied the pulpits of our church" without a license to preach or exhort. Prayer meetings, class meetings, love-feasts, experience and praise meetings are all "services held in our churches" and "other property belonging to said church." These preambles declare all such "services" unlawful when controlled by "any unlicensed persons."

In reviewing the arguments, neither of the brethren touch the issue. Bro. Emery says this Seashore law is "in the Discipline," but he does not quote it, nor so designate it as to enable one to find it. Like Dr. Walker, he seems to assume that the question of the voluntary exercise of ministerial functions is under discussion, and not the simple matter of "permitting unlicensed persons" to control services held "in any property owned by said church," as well as "in our pulpits."

Webster defines ministerial, "Pertaining to the office of a minister." Synonyms: Clerical, sacerdotal, priestly. Control means "power to check or restrain." Synonyms: Govern, direct.

If these brethren will look again, they may see that there is not the remotest hint in those Seashore preambles to any clerical, sacerdotal, or priestly functions. Contrariwise, it is declared "unlawful" for a layman to govern or direct "services held therein"—i. e., in the pulpits of our church, or in any property belonging to our church.

But reducing the first preamble to the last analysis, we have this:

1. We have "pulpits of our churches," and

2. We have "other property belonging to said church."

3. It is "unlawful to permit unlicensed persons to occupy pulpits of our church."

4. It is equally "unlawful" to "permit unlicensed persons to have control of services" held "in any property owned by said church."

If this be not what the brethren mean, why did they use "or" between "occupy the pulpits" and "control services?" So far as I know, this question grew out of an agreement between the pastor and Mrs. Snell in regard to her "having control" of the services held at Palmer Camp Ground—"other property," etc. (?). In this connection it may be asked whether or not a license is necessary, as our law now stands, in order that one may "have control of the services" held in our churches, or on our camp grounds, or in our college chapels. If not, then this new code is wrong. What does it matter whether "these estimable ladies" ever claimed or attempted to be preachers? They did—and that no one denies—"have control" of services held in "other property owned by said church." Moreover, they talked, sang, and prayed; beautifully, inspiringly, cheeringly.

If Mrs. Snell was to do more at Palmer Camp Ground, there is no evidence of it known to this writer—Dr. Walker's opinion to the contrary, notwithstanding the cases are certainly analogous. Mrs. Snell may have "claimed to be" a "preacher"—I know not. In a very important sense she is such, and such every Christian should be—"living epistles, known and read of all men;" "preaching by precept and by example."

Dr. Walker's illustration, drawn from the idea of electing a governor, knocks "the divine call to the ministry" on the head. If a preacher is anything, he is such "not of man, nor of the will of man, but of God." The church properly lays down certain qualifications for the ministry, and any "who feel divinely called," and possess these qualifications, has a right to license in our church. But not everyone who has gubernatorial qualifications has a right to be the governor of a State. There can be but one governor at the time, and these other qualified citizens must wait till that one retires. In Louisiana there are several hundred preachers and only one governor, because the laws governing the two positions are different. This assumption concerning the existence of law is the very thing in controversy at present.

In the case which gave rise to this controversy, one of these things is absolutely certain: either because the party who was invited "to have control" was an "unlicensed person," or a female, or a believer in the residue theory. If because of the absence of license, and there be a law requiring such, in order that one may "have control of services," it seems strange that such a law should have laid buried for more than a century to be dug up on the Mississippi "Seashore" in the year of grace 1895! If because she was a woman, it seems strange that instead of minding St. Paul, "Help those women who labored with me in the gospel," those Seashore brethren should turn out to hindering them! If because the invited controller believed in the residue theory, it seems strange that these brethren should proceed to do what their own Conference has failed to do, viz.: stop those whom they have ordained to preach that peculiar doctrine.

The perversion of law is a dangerous thing; neglect to enforce law is equally dangerous. Great stress is laid, in some quarters, on common law—the law of usage—and in recent administrations this common law has been violated under the guise of enforcing the law.

Dr. Walker has, no doubt, seen women—"unlicensed persons"—occupying "our pulpits," controlling "services held in our churches," and "in other property owned by said church."

Only recently two of the churches in New Orleans—maybe more than two—have been the scenes of this (if it be such) "unlawful" conduct by "permitting unlicensed persons to have control of services" held in them.

I would not afflict the reader with this communication had not the brethren mentioned mistaken the real issue, and attempted to switch me off on to a side issue about which there is no difference of opinion, viz.: that to be a preacher, one must have a license. To this all agree. J. A. PARKER.

The Unsaved Masses.

You will pardon this my first offense, as I am not addicted to the habit of appearing in print; but what I shall say is intended in love, and I believe will be so received. This is suggested by a number of communications in the ADVOCATE this week and similar matter appearing for months past. The people are hungering for spiritual bread, but out of such they get little else but stones. Will there be an end?

This nineteenth century, wonderful in events, is rapidly drawing to a close, and "the harvest truly is plenteous" even yet. Yet men and women by the multiplied thousands that never darken the church doors. There is something wrong. What we need, as Methodists, is not strife about non-essentials, but an host led of the Spirit of love undivided against sin in high as well as low places, and leaders who are not afraid of public opinion, who are in the plain path of duty—men and women baptized of the Holy Spirit. One great trouble just now is, that many of those who would lead are not agreed and "of one accord," lacking in harmony as to theory, doctrine and methods of reaching the people, while the hungry masses are looking on wondering who is right and which will lose identity.

There are many laymen who love the church and her institutions, who are praying, not for the practice of a little timely surgery (popery), but for more men and women, qualified and honored of God, with power to reach unsaved men and women and to enter any open door. To that end let us each and all lay upon the altar tobacco, pride, prejudice, personal preferment, all to the honor and glory of God, and help on the glorious work.

The "potato patch" scheme worked profitably in New York City last year. A total of 138 acres of vacant lots, temporarily loaned for the purpose and apportioned among eighty-four poor persons or families, yielded $13,000 worth of crops, the expenses being only $800. A superintendent and two assistants directed the labor of the planters and tillers. This is an encouraging result pecuniarily, without reckoning the industrial habit and the accompanying self-respect fostered. A larger acreage will probably be loaned for next season.—Zion's Herald.

Correspondence.

The Atlanta Exposition.

In this letter I will leave the instructive building of the government, and take in a few of the outside attractions. This will give variety. That which suits or pleases one person may not please another. There is material in this vast building for dozens of letters, and I will go back there after awhile.

As you pass out of the east end of the Government Building there will loom up before you a very unique structure, and the first question you will ask will be, "What is it, that pyramidal-shaped building?" That is the Plant Building. I will explain the name Plant to mean the owner and controller of a large system of railroads in Florida, and of a line of ships to Cuba and other southern islands. So I will call it Mr. Plant's building. Maybe I had better say Colonel, Captain, or General Plant. I will add honor by styling him plain Mister. The building is a pyramid, and is covered with broken stone. In it is exhibited a magnificent display from Florida. How often we misjudge a State, and even individuals! You will be amazed at the wonderful resources of that State. Everything, from fine woods to phosphate rock. The study of the phosphates is enough to interest one for an hour or two. We naturally associate oranges with the State, and would not think of the other fine fruits produced there. As fine sugar-cane as I ever saw is there. The fisherman will be struck with the forty-foot fishing poles. I think the whole exhibit one of the most varied and interesting on the grounds outside of the main buildings.

I see now that if I am to speak of all that I have in my mind, I will have to leave Mr. Plant. Out of this, on east, we enter the handsome building of Alabama. An exhibit and building made, not by the State, but by private subscription; and yet the State will get the credit and benefit of it. You will see everything in there from an ear of corn to a mammoth block of coal, and piles of iron, both in the native and manufactured state. How interesting it is to study the mineral industry! Some of the walks in the building (there is no floor) are made of rich iron ore. How proud we all are of Alabama! She sends coal to Newcastle and iron to Pittsburgh.

Reader, don't catch the idea that these exhibits are like those of State fairs. Not a bit of it. They are put here to catch the eyes of the capitalist and the developer. The Cotton States and International Exposition is not so much to please the fancy as to show resources; and yet the resources are arranged so as to please the fancy. When you come and see this great exposition, don't see as the butterfly that I have mentioned, but see as the bee does the flower—for what there is in it.

As we pass out of the Alabama building we enter a coal mine. There it is, with railroad in it, boring machine; everything just as a mine is worked. Walk around in it, and you will get a faint idea of the dismal life of a miner.

Not far from this mine, just across the street, is Confederate Hall. In here is displayed that which causes me to weep. You may stolidly stand the sight of things that set forth the suffering our sons, brothers and cousins endured during those desolate four years, but I can't. It brings too vividly to my memory all that pertains to the life of a hungry, ragged soldier; the most valiant troops in history. It is a sad spot; let's turn away. Behold the tattered jacket; see the shivering and starved boy! Behold the last token of love just before he left home, from his mother; see the gift of the sister; hear the cheering words of the father! Come, come; I can't stay here.

This next house is a duplicate of Longfellow's home. It is the Massachusetts building.

Just down that terrace is the Georgia barbecue, where, for fifty cents, you can enjoy to your capacity the juicy "jued" kid, or mutton, or beef, with et ceteras thrown in. The only objection to it is its untidiness.

Around at the farther end of the Manufacturers Building, to which we have now come, is the Japanese village. It is right on the lake, and is worth your while to visit. Twenty-five cents will admit you to the enclosure. Everything inside is Japanese. Go into the amusement hall and witness the most wonderful juggling imaginable. The show is over in a few minutes, and while waiting for another performance, go out and take a cup of tea, served by Jap girls in regular costume. I know you will say that you did not know what a cup of tea was before tasting it. Go back and see another show of juggiery. You can stay in the enclosure all day, if you like, and witness each show. Everything in and about this "village" is fit to be seen, from the immense lot of pretty china, some of which is so thin that a breath would break it almost. Buy you a Jap teapot for home use.

It looks like tumbling down to get from china and tea to a manure distributor. But here it is, back of Transportation Building, and will be pleasing to your rural readers, and should be to all, as it is doing fine work. And at last we all live through the farmers; so do not turn up your nose at a manure distributor. Your fine lace and dresses come that way. God bless the sturdy farmer, the most independent man on earth; asks nobody for a job, and if the March winds do not blow through the cracks of his corn-crib, snaps his fingers at the price of stocks and bonds; plenty to eat, plenty to wear, an easy conscience, with the preacher paid up, the Advocate paid for, and everything lovely.

Not far from here are some improved roads, and a ditching machine.

Now we will pass on by the Transportation Building. Here is a little building filled with marble, woods, slate, fruit, grain, etc. It belongs to the Southern Railway System. Oh, and we come to the car shed, under which are locomotives, all new and trim but one—that is "The General." This engine has a war record that reads like a novel. I have sent a copy to the editor, and asked him to publish it for the interest of both old and young. When you have read the story, and see the locomotive, you will view it with wonder, admiration, and surprise.

Just around a coach from "The General" is the Columbian bell. Just to look at this large bell without knowing something of its history and composition would not interest you. It weighs 13,000 pounds; is 5 feet high, 7 feet in diameter. The clapper is made of swords that served in the Revolution and the late war. But let me give a line or two about the history of this bell. Mind you, I am not talking about Liberty Bell. On the 399th anniversary of the discovery of America, a meeting was held in Independence Hall, Philadelphia, for the purpose of organizing a League of Human Freedom. Representatives from many patriotic societies were present. The idea occurred to a Mr. McDowell, of New Jersey, to make a bell of contributions from nations, men, women and children. So it was started. The relics poured in. Two hundred and fifty thousand pennies were sent by children from all parts of the world; 2 quarts of wedding rings were sent in; 5 quarts of thimbles that were used in sewing for soldiers during the Revolution; coins with Cæsar's stamp on them; 23,000 metal relics of battlefields were sent in. I can't name all the gifts, but they range from George Washington to Queen Victoria. The rope that rings the bell is made of pieces of fabric from many different nations.

Under this shed is the finest train of cars that were ever built—a Pullman train of palace coaches. Go through them and see the dining-car, the smoking car, the kitchen, the bath-rooms, the barber-shop, and the gem of a bridal chamber, all lined with satin and trimmed with needle work. It will almost make you feel like marrying over again, just to ride in this luxurious car. I know the sweet old maids have the fluttering of the heart, and the old bachelors sigh, when they see it. Just let them do what they should have done long ago—lock hearts and hands, and go sailing over the country while the days of youth come back.

Here is our entrance to Midway. We climb a long flight of steps and land in a buzz and whir, with a "spieler" squalling out at every step about his show being the best. Some of them have talked their voices away, like preachers do some time, and have long, large trumpets, into which they speak. Not all of the places in Midway are decent. There are some that will interest you. We must learn, as we go through life, to eschew the evil. Right here is Hagenbeck's trained animals. It is worth seeing. Deep-sea diving is in front of it. You will enjoy that. Close by is the Phœnix Wheel. Diagonally across is the Ice Palace, where you can see skating on ice, and feel a temperature way below freezing. On down the "Way" you will find the Moorish Palace, where you can spend an hour pleasantly. Then comes the Mystic Maze. You will laugh yourself hoarse in here. Now comes the most exciting place in the "Way;" it is the chute. This is something new. You are carried up in a car to a height of forty feet; then you get into a boat, which is turned loose, and down you go on a track till the boat hits water, when it jumps up in the air, down on the water again, up into the air again, down and around till you get out. The danger is small, and the fun is great. From this you go back into the grounds, and strike the stock show, where there is now exhibited a fine lot of cows, hogs and sheep from all over the country. I can't describe them. Come and see; though if you do not hurry, you will not see them. The people are here by the ten thousand. Let me advise you again to visit the Exposition.

A Reply.

I wish to answer a question or two that seems to puzzle my highly esteemed friend, Bro. Walker, and perhaps others. Bro. Walker says: "Some of your correspondents take the position that it is not necessary to have license from the church to authorize one to preach. This naturally suggests to my mind the question: Why, then, license anyone? Why does one person need to have license more than another?"

Answer: The Methodist Church, like other organized bodies, civil and religious, has its officers to administer its laws. Suitable persons are chosen and ordained. No one doubts the necessity or their authority, either church or civil.

The Doctor wishes to know if any citizen of his own will assumes the office and attempts to govern, would not every sensible man say he was without authority to act?

Most assuredly he would, and the person so acting would be responsible, except under the plea of lunacy. But that is not the question at issue; it is this: Shall every man and woman of good Christian character, who feels it to be their duty to read and expound the Scriptures—to teach and preach—be forced to assume all the duties of an ordained minister, or have the doors of the Methodist Church closed against them? If so, the church will deprive itself of its greatest strength, and deprive laymen of a God-given right.

I feel a delicacy in referring to my own case, but I will do so, as it is a case in point. Several years ago, at the Seashore Camp Ground, feeling that I ought to do something for the cause of the good Lord, I sought an interview with three of our great and good men, and requested their advice and prayers—Dr. J. B. Walker, Bishop Keener, and Dr. McFerrin. After I had made my statement to these good brethren, Bishop Keener asked me if I wished license to preach. I said: 'No; if I can do my duty, I would rather not assume all the duties of a licensed preacher." Dr. McFerrin said: "Preach and exhort; do all you can," and for my encouragement he referred to Samson doing more in his death than during his life. This being acquiesced in by these good brethren, I have, according to the views of the delegation of preachers, including Bro. Powell, P. E., been a violator of the laws of the Methodist Church frequently during the past twelve or fifteen years, and expect to continue to violate it when duty prompts me. It is true my feeble talks may not be considered preaching, but I do the best I can.

Bishop Hendrix and Dr. Tigert.

With much pleasure and interest and profit did I read the very readable and instructive articles from the pens of Bishops Granbery and Hendrix—the first appearing in the Nashville Advocate, and copied into other church papers, and the other appearing in the September-October number of the Methodist Review. The spirit manifested by each of the Bishops was kindly and admirable, and will do much towards harmonizing our brethren. They would have done more, however, had their conclusions been conclusive; but while they demolished Swedenborgism and Calvinism and Campbellism, they stopped short of showing how the blessing—the great gift—of entire sanctification is to be obtained. And it is just at this point where is the greatest divergence of opinion in our Zion. It is to be hoped that Bishop Key will use his pen and tell the church how fully he and others agree with Bishops Granbery and Hendrix, and by the Scriptures (and his own experience corroborative of the Scriptures) show that just as we are justified by faith, so are we entirely sanctified by faith. He can do this in the spirit of Christ, and not to provoke controversy, but to conserve the interests of our Zion and advance the cause of Christ.

These thoughts were provoked, Mr. Editor, by the publication in your paper to-day of Dr. Tigert's article, "Sanctification: Shall We Have Peace?" T. L. Mellen.

Regeneration.

Mr. Editor: Will you give space in the Advocate for a few thoughts on this important central and essential doctrine of Christianity? To me it is exceedingly unfortunate for the cause of truth and righteousness that there should be any among us who would mystify and minify the doctrine of regeneration, or the new birth, so as to entirely separate it from the moral and spiritual nature of man, as some are doing.

Regeneration, as we understand it, is to create again, make over again—a moral and spiritual renovation or reproduction wrought in the heart by the Holy Ghost. It is called by Christ and the apostles, "born of God," "born of the Spirit," "created anew," "a new creation," "passing from death unto life." Hence it is said: "If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature, old things have passed away; behold all things have become new." (II. Cor. v, 17.) "For in Christ Jesus neither circumcision nor uncircumcision availeth anything but a new creature." (Gal. vi, 15.)

The term "regeneration," we think, is preferable because it comprehends all the processes of spiritual life. The new birth is only a part of the process. In spiritual generation, as in natural generation, there must be an existance or life in some form before there can be birth.

If the new birth is in comparison with the birth of the body—and the Savior makes it so in John iii, 5 and 6—it will not do to make it a partial or incomplete work. This is contrary to all law, both natural and spiritual, and contradicts the plainest teachings of God's Word. In the generating process of both natural and spiritual life there are three distinct states—a begetting, a quickening and a birth. In the spiritual process (1) the soul is begotten or fertilized by the Divine Spirit through Christ. "And everyone that loveth him that begat, loveth him also that is begotten of him." (I. John v, 1.) (2) It is quickened or made alive by the same spirit. "You hath he quickened who were dead in trespasses and in sins." (Eph. ii, 1-5.) After life has been generated or developed into real being, spiritual being, the new birth takes place. "Ye must be born again." (John iii, 3.) This new-born soul is perfect—back in the image of God. "And have put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him." (Col. iii, 10.) It only needs the sincere milk of the Word that it may grow to a perfect man.

To say that there is in this new-born soul the "old nature," "the carnal mind," seeds of depravity is unreasonable and unscriptural. In all the wide domain of creation in the natural and spiritual world like begets like. And that which gives life gives nature. The giving of life is inseparable from nature; one can not exist without the other. "That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the spirit is spirit;" so that which is born of God partakes of the nature of God. "That by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust." (II. Pet. i, 4.) (See Eph. iv, 24.) So the new-born soul comes into the kingdom of Christ not only with the God-life, but with the nature of God. To say that birth only gives life, and that at some subsequent time in some way nature is given, is a contradiction of all natural and spiritual law. The viper does not have to pass through some process after birth to give it a viperous nature. So the soul born of God does not have to pass through any subsequent change to get a nature God-like. "And that ye put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness." (Eph. iv, 24.)

But it is asked, Does the new birth separate us from the old man or body of sin? It certainly does this if we are born of God. The need of this separation is just what made Paul in his natural state cry out in bitterness of soul: "O wretched man that I am! Who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" (Rom. vii, 24.) "I am carnal, sold under sin" (verse 14). Certainly this can not be the state of a new-born soul. Paul says, "To be carnally minded is death." "Because the carnal mind is enmity against God, for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be." (Rom. viii, 6, 7.) If the carnal mind remains after the new birth in the soul, then we have a son of God, "carnal, sold under sin," "at enmity against his Father," "not subject to his law, neither indeed can be."

But the "old man is crucified, and the body of sin destroyed," says Paul. "Knowing this, that our old man is crucified that the body of sin might be destroyed"—not left for a subsequent work—"that henceforth we might not serve sin." (Rom. vi, 17.) "But now being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life" (verse 22). If the new birth is only pardon from past or actual sins, and I am still held by depravity or carnal nature, I am not free. If I am in prison—a condemned criminal—and pardon comes to me, yet my prison doors remain closed, what does my pardon avail? I need and want the pardon that unlocks my prison doors and sets me free. This regeneration, or the new birth, does for us, as Paul understood it.

Listen at him. "For the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." (Rom. viii, 2.) Here the spirit that gives life also makes "free from sin and death." Again: "If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature, old things have passed away; behold all things have become new." (I. Cor. v, 17.) Here evidently the apostle makes "a new creature, passing away of old things, and all things becoming new," the necessary condition of being in Christ. But again: "Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us." When and how? "By the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Ghost." From what? We are told—"Foolishness, disobedience, serving divers lusts, and pleasure." This same character is said to have "put off the old man which is corrupt, according to the deceitful lusts, and "to put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness." (Eph. iv, 23, 24.) Our Lord said this "washed," "regenerated," "new-born," new creature was clean. "He that is washed needeth not save to wash his feet, but is clean every whit, and ye are clean, but not all."

The new birth is not only a state of purity, but a sinless state. "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin, for his seed remaineth in him, and he can not sin, because he is born of God." (John v, 9.) We know that whosoever is "born of God sinneth not." God gives us a new spiritual nature, and through this we are to crucify and mortify the flesh. God gives us a pure heart, and we are to make our lives pure.

Dancing for the Lord.

The Methodist Church is of providential origin. It sprang from a dying Christianity. Corruption, dire and awful, had crept into the church; vital godliness was on the decline; a dead and empty ritualism held imperial sway over the benighted minds of a degenerate people. Worldliness of the worst type had displaced experimental religion. Wesley's heart was moved like the heart of his Lord when he saw the wretchedness and misery of the multitudes. He was raised up under God to be a revivalist of the churches, a greater than whom modern times have not seen. The influence of this revival has swept round the world and touched every shore. But in the very heart of the country where this revival has had the least opposition, and where its greatest glory has been wrought out, worldliness is still found in the church to which our founder belonged. Methodism stands as an expression against worldliness, and is arrayed against all devices fostered by the devil for the overthrow of the church of God.

Recently, in a little village where there are but two churches, our sister church, in order to raise some money, gave the young people of the village a dance. The young people of the "hopping" tribe gathered at the appointed place and danced for the Lord. The good sisters were there to serve coffee and sandwiches between sets. This was for the Lord, too. The aforesaid church has recently been renovated, and, to keep up with the procession, they must have some kneeling benches made. To pay for these benches they devised the scheme of having a dance, and charging each one so much, and thus the debt could be easily liquidated. Suppose one of the dancers had stopped amid the gay festivities and moralized thus: "This dance is for the church; the church needs money. Kneeling benches are quite comfortable; they preserve one's clothes, and are a boon to a tired knee. The ladies of the church are at the back of the entertainment; so it must be all right. Therefore, here goes; skip, hop, and jump; doodle, doodle." Dancing for the Lord to pay for kneeling benches! Will the Lord hear a prayer from one of these benches?—or does he care about such little things as how they were paid for, etc.? Dancing for the Lord! The church has recently been repaired, the seats are still out, and it would have been so nice, as a dedicatory service, to have had the dance in the church. Why not? It was held to pay the debt on the benches, where they will kneel in the years to come, and send up their petitions to God.

Shame on such conduct! It would have been far better never to have had a bench to kneel upon than to have one purchased at such a price as may have been paid for these. How can these mothers kneel and pray, "Lead us not into temptation," when they go of their own accord with their daughters to the dance, knowing, as they must assuredly do, the history of such things? Dancing for the Lord! It is a shame and a scandal, an insult to the name of religion. Let our people stand aloof from such things.

Mrs. H. W. Foote, of North Miss. Conference.
Miss Pauline Stafford, of Mississippi Conference.
Mrs. F. E. Russ, of Louisiana Conference.

During the past year our Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society work in the Mississippi Conference has not grown as we would have it grow. While there have been visible signs of success, we feel that in this age of enterprise, when societies and clubs are numerous, that we might find more women who would engage in our work. As our president said in her annual address, at the first annual meeting, which was held at Ellisville, Miss., our society has been looked upon as one born out of due season.

It was looked upon at first by some as a society which was not needed; but time has favored it, and now we find that public sentiment is more liberal. The endorsement which was given us by several of the Bishops has greatly aided us. There has been a general flow of approval, and now our plan is, that this approval may be permitted to develop into sympathy, and sympathy always offers assistance and renders aid.

We want women who will tell us that they think our society an excellent organization, and then offer their services to further its success; women who will give us favor, and then yield their wills and efforts as instruments for our work.

The Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society needs women, and women need the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society.

Like all good works, it offers a reflex influence which alone would repay for time and labor spent. We do not ask you to neglect your societies for ours, but we suggest that, like Mrs. Susanna Wesley, we find time for all. When we have fulfilled our duties to this extent, we shall feel that this we have done, and not left the other undone.

If all could know how industriously and untiringly efforts are made generally, and especially at this time, for the circulation of unwholesome—including vile—literature for reading and singing, surely unceasing prayer and greater diligence would be used for pure and elevating periodicals and other good literature. The long evenings will be spent in some way. Let us labor faithfully for the New Orleans Advocate that so kindly helps us, the Woman's Missionary Advocate, Little Worker, Evangel, etc., whilst provision is made for other entertainment that is harmless, avoiding more carefully than ever before "the singing those songs, or reading those books, which do not tend to the knowledge or love of God." Days and weeks have been spent in preaching and work to arouse the church and convert sinners. Can any of us afford to be at ease in Zion? Surely greater efforts are needed now. Satan's hosts are working night and day. We lovingly entreat our women to read more, and use the needle less. In the adornment of the home let the first consideration be the purification of the heart, the culture of the mind, and the outer adornings last. If we will permit, the Holy Spirit will guide and help us in the confliction of duties.

We have greater knowledge—which increases responsibility—of the awful condition of the heathen, who are pleading so piteously, to stir and nerve us to labor "through Christ which strengtheneth" for their freedom from sin, aiming, as our corresponding secretary says, to have "an auxiliary at every charge."

Mrs. Chatfield, corresponding secretary: The district secretaries report that they can not get auxiliaries to report. . . . In order to magnify the office of district secretary, I desire that they shall have charge of all auxiliaries in their respective districts, as a presiding elder has of his work. It is the duty of each auxiliary to send quarterly reports to them by the first of June, September, December, and March, giving number of adult, juvenile and honorary members; also amount of dues, Conference fund and special donations. Apply to your district secretary for any literature you may desire. It is her duty and pleasure to aid you in advancing the work. Let every member of the W. F. M. S. remember in prayer, at the "twilight hour," our work. Let us ask great things of God, remembering the prayer of faith brings the blessing (St. John xiv, 12, 13, 14, 15). The command to go forward has been given. In the strength of God let us press to the mark: an auxiliary at every charge. If "with one accord" we work, nothing doubting, the victory will be given that the Father may be glorified.

Mrs. J. D. Crymes, secretary Vicksburg district, reports: Since coming to this work, the first of the year, have organized one adult society, and a juvenile (the Anguilla Stars) here. Have also organized an adult at Rolling Fork, and connected the juvenile (the Pansy Society) there with our woman's work. Since my election to this district have written numerous letters and postals, and distributed a vast deal of missionary literature. Will have two new auxiliaries, the Bethel and the Martin, to report next quarter. God has wonderfully blessed my efforts. To him be all the glory! Our presiding elder and his wife (Dr. and Mrs. Weems) have assisted me little in our woman's work by lectures, etc. We had heard of Sister Weems having traveled at her own expense over the district, and working in the interest of societies, and we know personally of Dr. Weems' valuable help. No doubt the women of the district feel like sending a petition for their return. Dr. Weems wisely advises that auxiliaries, especially those in the country, hold their meetings at the homes of the members, with the understanding that a plain dinner be served, or, better, that each member take a lunch with her, and thus give the hostess time to spend in social enjoyment and work of the meeting.

Mrs. E. D. Jones.

GOD DOES COMMAND

That all we do in the affairs of life must be done with an eye single to His glory. To please Him we must impart to others anything we have that may save them from intense and continued suffering. A sincere conviction of my duty to my fellow-men impels me to advertise my Oil Cure for Cancers, Tumors and Malignant Diseases. To do this and avoid all appearances of exaggeration I know of no better way than to publish every week reports which I receive from my patients. Thousands are being cured, but some die. We give reports from both classes.

Dr. D. M. Bye, Indianapolis, Ind.:

Excuse me for not writing sooner. Enclosed you will find $7 50 due you for the last month. Aunt is well, and the sore is nearly healed. She is so glad the cancer is gone. She had awful pain in it before she used your Oils. It was through the Religious Telescope that we found out about your Oils. We are very grateful to you for what your Oils have done.

Yours truly,

EUENA VISTA, ARK., July 20, 1895.

My Dear Doctor Bye:

I was wanting to see if the tumor on my husband's face would again make its appearance. I am happy to tell you the tumor has disappeared, and not even a scar is left on his face. I never was so happy in my life. I do wish you could have seen him before I commenced your Oil treatment. And to see him now—his face is as clean as anyone could wish, and he is looking better than he did ten years ago, so say all his friends; and we all feel thankful for the restoration of my husband, and I pray with all my heart that God will continue to bless your good work. MRS. A. C. ROSE.

TOO LATE.

MIDWAY, KY., Sept. 18, 1895

Dr. D. M. Bye, Indianapolis, Ind.:

DEAR SIR—It gives me much pain to write and inform you of the death of our dear mother, which occurred on last Sunday evening about seven o'clock. No one who did not see her does know how much she suffered. The cancer seemed to have gone to her stomach and lungs.

We can not speak in too high terms of your Oils. They gave her more ease than anything she ever used. As for curing her, we think her case was beyond any treatment. Please accept our thanks for your kindness and sympathy in our behalf.

Very respectfully,
G. W. MITCHELL.

The Pastor and the "Plan."

Our law clearly defines the duties of the preacher in charge. In general, our pastors adhere to these duties with conscientious fidelity. But, in particular, many of us are remiss; e. g., in the matter of preparing for our successors a "plan" of the work. Our Conference will convene in two weeks. We beg the brethren to heed a word of exhortation from one of the younger preachers.

Prominent among the duties of the pastor, we find (Discipline, p. 64, ¶131), "To leave his successor a particular account of his charge, including an account of the subscribers for our periodicals." We feel safe in declaring, after somewhat careful observation, that a large number of our preachers are careless respecting the "plan." We have known it to be completely ignored or, at least, wholly neglected. In numbers of other cases, the "plan" consisted of a few hasty, disconnected scribblings on a half-sheet of note paper. The requirement is for "a particular account of the charge." Hastily-scribbled memoranda of generalities and indefinite miscellanies are insufficient. These confuse, rather than guide. Even in one year's time the pastor may become measurably familiar with all the conditions of church life in the charge. Let him not presume that his successor knows what he has had no means of knowing, and what has taken himself months, maybe years, to acquire. The failure to carefully and particularly advise his successor as to the field may result in much waste of time and resources.

In a ministry of seven years, we have never once had a "plan" which "included an account of the subscribers for our periodicals," nor have we ever seen but one anywhere. Moreover, we have several times gone to a new charge without knowing the names or addresses of a single official member. We are Methodist folks. Let us "change our name or mend our manners." We need a little more method in our methods, and a little more planning in the arrangement of the "plan." This is not a trifling matter. Get your "plan" ready and let it mean something.

Palmer Camp Meeting Resolutions.

Of course, Mr. Editor, when those resolutions were signed at Palmer Camp Meeting it was expected the scissors crowd would plunge into printer's ink like a batch of mustang ponies into a hay field. Therefore, I have held myself in readiness to "earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints." "For there are certain men" who seem to fear not discord, but esteem the ink pot of greater riches than all the treasures of Israel's peace.

It was my purpose to —. But what is the use? What they have said is strikingly like the inspired description of the earth when it was first made: without form and void. If this is the best they can do, the result will be like that produced by a good brother's sermon on immersion. When he had finished one of his best members came forward, and, giving his hand, said: "I thank you. Oh! I thank you so much for that sermon. Your failure to prove anything thoroughly convinces me your position is false."

Yes, I signed those resolutions. And I am neither sorry nor ashamed that I did so. And I wish to say further that, so far as known to me, I fully endorse and commend every act and utterance of Rev. C. A. Powell as presiding elder of Seashore district, Mississippi Conference, in the year 1895.

JAMES G. SIBLEY.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. H. B. Vandenburg: "We have held four protracted meetings, and think that much good was accomplished. At some of the churches there was a revival. Bros. W. M. Williams, Witt Sullivan, of the traveling ministry, and J. R. Hays, local, assisted me. Our fourth quarterly meeting was held on Oct. 5 and 6. Rev. C. McDonald, P. E., was with us and preached to the edification of the people. He is in favor with the people of this charge. Last, but not least, we had Bishop Galloway with us the second Sunday in October. Our people were much pleased with the dedicatory sermon and also the lecture delivered by the Bishop. The new church-house dedicated by the Bishop is a credit and honor to the people of this place, and they are justly proud of it. It is the best constructed and prettiest church-building in the county; well lighted and neatly painted. If we could just get this people to see their duty in reference to giving to the Lord of their substance, supporting the institutions of the church! Oh, for a spirit of liberality to reach the hearts of this people!"

C. A. P., Bethany Church, Nov. 22: "Please allow me space in your paper to tell you how much grieved our people are in having to give up our valuable minister, Rev. A. W. Langley, and family. He came among us four years ago. Shortly after some of us were forced to pass through some severe trials. His prayers and sympathetic words drew him and family very close to our hearts. As he preached his farewell sermon at Bethany Church, Nov. 10, we heard the expression on every hand, 'Can we ever get another that will fill his place?' and the response would be, 'No; he has preached Christ and him crucified;' and as Bro. Langley and family go forth from us, they carry our prayers, love and good wishes, and we recommend them highly to the people wherever the Bishop sees fit to send them. Bro. Walter Mitchell did us one week's valuable preaching, and accomplished good. We also love our presiding elder, Bro. John Mitchell. Both of these are admirable men and true servants of God. Bro. W. W. Mitchell, on the Lexington circuit, we are happy to note, is convalescent from a very severe attack of pneumonia. May God bless you, Mr. Editor, and the dear old ADVOCATE!"

Rev. W. M. Sullivan, P. C., Carthage, Miss.: "I am now closing my first year in this charge. I have held six protracted meetings with fine results. In many respects this is a pleasant work. The town of Carthage is said to be the largest inland town in the State. I think we have as many good people here as can be found in any place with the same number of inhabitants; besides there are many good Christians in the country portion of the work. It has been said that there has never gone to Conference from this circuit a clear report on finances. We expect to do all in our power to break this record this Conference. The church in Carthage will pay up everything in full, and one good brother has deposited his quarterage for next year already. (Please don't say anything about this. Some preacher will want this place.) I have preached seven times a month, traveled a great deal; 52 accessions; as many, or more, conversions. The Lord has blessed us wonderfully. We give him all the glory; and say if the Bishop moves us, it will be sad to part with these people; and to the man appointed to Carthage, he will be cordially received. Sorry to say that there are fewer subscribers for our church paper on this work than any work I ever served."

Rev. G. R. Ellis, Escatawpa circuit, Seashore district, Mississippi Conference: "The fourth Quarterly Conference for this charge was held the second and third of November. Rev. C. A. Powell, P. E., was present and presided with his usual ease and dignity. Bro. Powell is a first-class presiding elder. He is conversant with the laws of our church, and believes in their being rigidly enforced, and carries out his convictions irrespective of what any may think or say. At the same time, has a heart as loving and tender as a woman's. The Conference, I am sorry to say, was not well attended by the official brethren. Congregations on Sunday were good, especially the night service. The presiding elder preached us three very instructive, practical gospel sermons, which were appreciated by myself and people. I have held three revival meetings the past Conference year, one camp meeting and two protracted meetings, with good results. My first meeting was held in May at Zion. Revs. R. B. Downer, T. W. Adams and Geo. W. Huff did the preaching, and did it well. Thirteen accessions and a number of professions were some of the results of this meeting. My second meeting we held at Orange Grove, in July, with Bros. Wesley G. Evans (an old veteran in the ranks) and G. W. Huff. God honored the faithful ministrations of these servants of his by a general spiritual uplift of the church. At this meeting seven children were baptized and thirteen joined the church. Wilson's Springs Camp Meeting embraced the fifth Sunday in September, and continued six days. Here the pure Word was preached 'with power and in demonstration of the Spirit.' Revs. P. Howard, C. L. Chilton, Wesley G. Evans, J. H. Holland, W. T. Beall, J. H. Havers and Ingersoll did the preaching, each one showing himself to be a 'workman that needeth not to be ashamed.' Bros. Adams and Huff were present to gladden our hearts by their sweet prayers; but, on account of physical inability, did not preach. While the year has not been without its trials and adversities, prosperity has attended 'Zion' along many lines, and we ought to feel grateful. Finances are behind; but I think the work will pay as much, if not more, than it did last year. My people are financially unable to do much, but they are kind to their preacher, and many of them do the very best that they can for him, and I will bid them adieu this, my third time, with pain. May God bless the ADVOCATE, its editor and official staff, and all of its readers!"

THE REVIVAL AT ANGUILLA, MISS.

The revival at this place was a great triumph, and revealed the superior power of the gospel over opposing forces. My esteemed friend, E. B. Baker, of Natchez, lead the music and assisted otherwise, and Rev. C. H. Ellis, evangelist, who was formerly a member of one of the Texas Conferences, and served as presiding elder seven or eight years, conducted the series of meetings. It is not my purpose to describe the evangelist (the fruit will tell the kind of tree), but to give a brief account of the work done.

The farmers were busy in gathering their crops, the merchant in selling goods, and the general opinion was that the season for revivals had passed, and that the time of holding the meeting were very inopportune. But, on the other hand, a number of zealous Christians, in surrounding communities and a few in the church at Anguilla, had covenanted together, several weeks before, to pray at sunset each day for the success of the meeting.

The leading features of the revival were (1) a spirit of prayer which seemed to come upon the community; (2) deep conviction for sin, even in those who did not at all attend the services. There were eighteen converted and four who professed entire sanctification, and four or five came into the church.

The outlook for this Delta country—long noted for wickedness—is very encouraging. The zeal of the laity is remarkable, family altars are becoming universal, and great enthusiasm in effort to save souls.

A nicely planned parsonage, under the management of Bro. Chris. Lorenzen, is going up at Rolling Fork, and the pastor is relieved of all the burden.

Bros. Ellis and Bliss Baker are now in Rolling Fork, and I learn that the meeting there is beginning well.

Bro. Ellis, through the power of the Holy Spirit that abides with him, by faith and much patience in face of great obstacles, has accomplished a work I believe no one else could have done at this time.

Were the scrofula sores on my poor little boy. They were especially severe on his legs, back of his ears and on his head. His hair was so matted that combing was sometimes impossible. His legs were so bad that sometimes he could not sit down, and when he tried to walk his legs would crack open and the blood start. Physicians did not cure. I decided to give him Hood's Sarsaparilla. In two weeks the sores began to heal up; the scales came off and all over his body new and healthy flesh and skin formed. When he had taken two bottles of

PUBLISHER'S NOTICES.

Read This.

We invite special attention to our new sewing machine offer. This machine is a most excellent one in every respect. We have never made a better premium offer. Let no one confound this machine with any one previously offered. It is a different machine altogether. Take notice that we prepay freight and guarantee entire satisfaction.

The Holman Bible for $1 65.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.65 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to Dec., '96. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two full years in advance, i. e., up to Dec., '97, can get this Bible at $1 35.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2 45 instead of $1 65. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2 45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We are now prepared to fill orders for Bibles (both kinds) promptly.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

Western Christian Advocate: "It is simply wonderful. No one can read the book without having his faith in prayer greatly strengthened."

Union Signal: "Its high religious tone, its fascinating spirit, and the high rank of its contributors, make it a strong faith tonic and an inspiration to prevailing prayer."

B. Fay Mills: "A wonderful book, an excellent book."

Cumberland Presbyterian: "It is indeed full of touching incidents calculated to quicken the faith of all who read it."

Pres. Franklin College, New Athens, O.: "This is one of the best and most interesting books we have ever seen."

Central Congregationalist: "Many of the incidents are exceedingly pathetic, and can scarcely fail to stir any tender heart to tears. It is a rich mine of illustrations for a preacher and deserves to be in every minister's library while no Christian heart can fail to be deeply interested and profoundly stimulated by it toward faith in God."

Methodist Recorder: "It is a well-bound book, full of incidents and illustrations to public speakers, and will encourage every reader to greater faith and more earnest prayer."

Christian Herald, edited by T. DeWitt Talmage: "Mr. S. B. Shaw has done a wise thing in making a compilation of Notable Answer to Prayer. Such incidents encourage the desponding Christian and are useful to Christian workers in leading their hearers to pray for themselves."

Christian Arbitrator: "Some of the incidents are very touching; we could only read them with tear-dimmed eyes."

The book contains 320 pages, and when open measures 8¼ by 12¼ inches, and is beautifully bound in full cloth.

It is equally adapted to the learned and unlettered.

Young and old, saved and unsaved, all read it with delight. Leaders of the various Christian denominations commend it highly.

How Long?

Notwithstanding the Sultan's promises, the Armenian butcheries go on without abatement. The dispatches state that twenty villages have recently been laid waste and their inhabitants massacred. The Christian world is eagerly inquiring how long the Christian nations will tolerate this state of things.

Who Is He?

In two of the Conferences in Texas the assessment for the orphanage was overpaid. This shows what our people will do in this direction if we give them a chance. When Mississippi Methodism gets her orphanage—which she will do in the near future—it will be sustained. Nobody need have any doubt on that point. What is needed just now is for some one whom the Lord hath prospered in business to give an impetus to this movement in the shape of a check for a good round sum. Who is he?

Rev. W. E. Ballard.

Rev. W. E. Ballard died at his residence in Natchez, Miss., on Saturday, the twenty-third, and was buried from Jefferson Street Church on Sunday afternoon. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. W. B Lewis, assisted by Rev. L. S Jones and Rev. M. M. Black. He had been an invalid for about five years, and during all that time he has borne his afflictions with true Christian resignation. He was in his fifty-eighth year, and had been in the ministry about thirty-three years. He was a man of strong intellect and an able preacher. He was remarkably amiable and was much beloved wherever he was known. A suitable memoir will appear in due time.

A Nation Outwitted.

It begins to appear that an egregious blunder was committed when Utah was admitted into the Union. When the anti-polygamy law had passed, the Mormons submitted apparently with good grace, and have ever since pretended that polygamy is not an essential part of their system. This being the case, it was asked, Why not admit Utah to Statehood? — and into Statehood she came. It now appears that the crafty disciples of Joe Smith expect to take charge of the State and run it to suit themselves, and let Uncle Sam help himself if he can. Recent developments seem to show that the fine Italian hand of the Mormon hierarchy was back of the movement for the admission of Utah.

A Psychological Mystery

The bitterest animosities of the human heart are not horn of injury. The wrath of Herod and Herodias, which naught but the blood of John the Baptist could appease, was not the result of a wrong perpetrated upon them. He had done them no injury. His sole offense was that he stated a fact which they knew as well as he. "It is not lawful," was no news to them. Their own consciences had uttered the same message ten thousand times before John crossed their pathway. Because he dared to vocalize the utterances of their own consciences he must die. Happy would it be for humanity if Herod and Herodias enjoyed this distinction alone! But such is not the case This event in the lives of these magnates of the olden time is merely the outcropping of a stratum of depravity that is coextensive with humanity.

In all ages the bitterest foes of God's prophets have been conscience-stricken evil-doers. The fiercest antagonisms of the ministry of the present day come from the same source. Nothing engenders such implacable hatred in the breasts of the "sons of Belial" as for a fellow-mortal to give utterance to a message which they have already heard ten thousand times in the secret chambers where conscience does her divinely appointed work. A certain measure of unpopularity with those who are given over to iniquity is, therefore, the inevitable concomitant of a faithful ministry. So it has been, and doubtless so it will be to the end of time.

Murder Statistics.

The following figures, taken from the official reports of the chief of police of this city, furnish material reflection on the part of all good citizens: Number of homicides in New Orleans in 1892, 22; in 1893, 26; in 1894, 39; in 1895, up to Nov. 20, 42. If the same rate should continue until the close of the year, the aggregate will be 47—an average of about one for every eight days in the year. Commenting on this state of things, the Daily States speaks as follows:

"Judging from the treatment of other murderers, the trial" (reference is here made to a recent case) "will come off after the witnesses are dead or have been dispersed, and there is not the scintilla of evidence against the accused. The Parish Prison is full of red handed assassins who have not yet been tried, and whose despicable and bloody crimes are almost forgotten. The gloomy walls of the Parish Prison have been to them a home of refuge, and they and their victims are passing out of the memory of the present generation.

"To such a degree has criminal justice in this city become a failure and a ridiculous farce that murderers have become a privileged class, a sort of aristocracy, whose patents of nobility are written and signed with the blood of men, women and children. In the name of Heaven, what are we coming to? Has justice fled the earth? Has human blood and human life become so cheap in this community that the lives of honest men—nay, of women and innocent babes — may be ruthlessly taken, and the assassins be housed and petted in the Parish Prison until the lips of the witnesses of their deeds are sealed in eternal death, or they are spirited away until the assassins are accorded the freedom of the smiling earth and heavens, and the portals of honorable life are opened to them?

"We have been called upon so often to record and denounce these bloody deeds that indignation has become fatigued, and we feel that it is idle to write words in denunciation of them."

An Object Lesson.

At a time when the value of missions is questioned and the work of missionaries depreciated, an object lesson of singular interest has been given in the city of London on the whole subject. Three princes from South Africa, one of them called a king, appeared at the Centennial "Convention" of the London Missionary Society, which was gathered to celebrate "Founders' Week," and there publicly gave thanks to the society and its promoters for what had been done for them and their tribe by the self-denying workers sent out by the society. Two of the chiefs had built churches for their people and worshiped with them as disciples of Christ, and leagued with them to advance the kingdom of Christ. The results of missions were thus set forth visibly to a great company of the people who by gifts and self-denials had made them possible, and whose faith was thus rewarded by vision.—Presbyterian.

Progress.

It seems almost certain that Georgia will soon become a prohibition State. The Bush bill, now before the Legislature, it is said, has a majority of the members of both Houses pledged to its support. The saloon gang in the cities are dreadfully alarmed, and are making the welkin ring with the usual rot about "personal liberty," "sumptuary laws," etc.; but, unless somebody yields to the influence of money, all their shrieks and cries will prove unavailing. We believe that the temperance forces will win in the fight. It will now be in order for the Mississippi Legislature to follow Georgia's example. The traffic in Mississippi is confined to about seven or eight counties now. Why not destroy it, root and branch? It can be done with a little effort, and we see no necessity for further postponement.

Turkey.

The transfer of authority in Turkey to the great powers would mean much for Christianity. Christian communities and individual Christians all over the empire would dare to lift their heads. Secret believers could speak out with security. Missionaries would enjoy reasonable liberty to preach to the Moslem population. Christianity has never had a fair chance in Turkey and never will have one under a Moslem government. Islam triumphed by force and makes so fair a show because bolstered up by political authority. Place the New Testament over against the Koran in a fair field with no favor, and the future of the gospel in Turkey is sure. This result will come only when the power on the throne in Constantinople ceases to be Moslem, only when the representative of the Caliph becomes a spiritual, no longer a temporal power.

It would mean much to science if Turkey should cease to be—unspeakably much to archæological and biblical science. The government of Turkey controls the majority of the biblical sites and districts where material lies hidden of value to the student of the Bible and of ancient history. Exploration and excavation are now made as difficult and as costly as possible to the scholar. The Turk will do nothing himself nor let any one else do anything for which he is not himself well paid. Great tracts of the east under Turkish rule are in utter disorder, when occidental authority would produce order in a fortnight and open opportunities to the biblical archæologist which are simply overwhelming. What light on the Bible lies hidden under the Turkish bushel!—Exchange.

Guiseppe Vital.

The mission forces of the M. E. Church in this city have recently been increased by the arrival of an Italian of the name of Guiseppe Vital. Mr. Vital was for several years a Romish priest. Some years ago he experienced regenerating grace, and united with the M. E Church in Italy. He was soon afterward licensed to preach. He has been in this city about three weeks, and has begun work among his countrymen. He will hold services twice on Sunday and twice during the week at the corner of Melpomene and South Rampart. Another night in the week will be given to the Lower Bethel. These services will be conducted in Italian. He speaks English, however, with remarkable correctness and fluency.

Church Extension—What Is It?

The church-extension work in our church was started in 1882. It has for its object the extension of Christ's kingdom by building churches and parsonages in places where they could not or would not be built without its aid.

It appeals to the rich to help the poor; to the strong to help the weak; to the established to help the feeble beginners; to the church at home to help the church abroad.

It furnishes an agency through which the generous giver may be sure that his gifts shall reach worthy and needy objects; one which, having an oversight of the whole field, can best determine where a dollar can be invested to the best advantage; and which takes the pains in every case to provide security for the return of the money should the enterprise prove a failure.

Every year the church contributes to this cause about $60,000. "What is done with it?" Look at our maps and annual reports.

Besides this, good friends of the work have given over one hundred thousand dollars to constitute a permanent loan fund, to be loaned to churches on long time, at six per cent. interest, and upon its return to be loaned, and loaned, and loaned again, to churches that need only temporary aid. This has earned $25,000 interest.

SELECT NOTES. A Commentary on the Sunday-school Lessons for 1896. By F. N. and M. A. Peloubet. Illustrated. Cloth, $1.25. W. A. Wilde & Co., Boston.

This commentary has for twenty-one consecutive years presented the doctrinal illustrations, instructing and illuminating anecdotes, comments, and explanations of the text that every pupil and teacher needed, to easily grasp the interior thoughts of the inspired writers. The twenty-second volume for 1896 presents in its beautifully printed and judiciously illustrated pages an immense amount of culled matter, carefully edited and understandingly applied to the year's lessons.

The lessons for the first six months are in Luke, and the notes are particularly well chosen, and clearly indicate the author's accurate knowledge of the Scriptures, as well as a wide reading of the thousands of volumes based on the life of our Master. The last six months are devoted to the Old Testament, in which field Dr. Peloubet years ago earned an enviable reputation as an earnest student and an apt teacher, and his work in this volume is the outcome of his ripe scholarship and personal acquaintance and conception of the best method of applying Old Testament history and teachings to modern needs.

The publishers have embellished the book with eight splendid full-page illustrations, which will prove both interesting and instructive.

Peloubet's "Select Notes" are well worthy of increased use by both the teachers and scholars of every Sunday school using the International Lessons.

NOTES.

Rev. C. L. Chilton is conducting a revival meeting at Amite City.

We are pleased to learn that the attendance at East Mississippi Female College is still increasing.

Rev. J. W. Browne, the oldest Methodist preacher in Texas, died at his home in Luling on the twenty-fifth.

Rev. George Stuart is carrying on a meeting in Monroe, La. Large crowds are in attendance, and much interest is manifested.

Rev. W. F. Hamner, of the Baltimore Conference, has been transferred to the Memphis Conference, and stationed at Central Church.

A meeting is in progress at Tchoupitoulas Mission. Everybody cordially invited to attend. Christian workers are in especial demand.

Miss Belle Kearney has been ill for some weeks with typhoid fever, but is now convalescent, and will soon be able to resume her work.

A full-blooded Cherokee Indian, named Wahoochee, is holding Christian revival services at Thomasville, Ga., and drawing immense crowds.

The following transfers were made from the Memphis Conference: W. J. Carlton, to the Texas Conference; R. W. Byen, to the Columbia Conference.

The Southern Methodist Publishing House will bring out in a short time "The Life, Times and Speeches of L. Q. C. Lamar," by Hon. E. Mayes, of Jackson, Miss.

Dr. S. F. Smith, author of the national hymn, "America," died suddenly in Boston on Saturday, in his eighty-seventh year. He was noted as a poet, preacher and lecturer.

Rev. J. H. Stevenson, professor of Hebrew and Old Testament exegesis in Vanderbilt University, was received into the Memphis Conference from the Methodist Church of Canada.

Mrs. Grover Cleveland is one of the most earnest workers in the Needlework Guild of Washington, an organization of ladies formed for the purpose of supplying articles of clothing to the poor.

In the island of Formosa, whose possession has recently been transferred to the Japanese, there are nearly 2,000 Christians, and over fifty chapels, the harvest of Doctor Mackay's wonderful work begun in 1872.—Exchange.

Mr. Leonard Fash died at his residence in this city a few days since, in his eighty-fourth year. He was one of the oldest members of Felicity Street Church, and had been for several years the sole survivor of the original Board of Trustees of Elijah Steele Chapel.

The largest amount ever raised in one year for the work of foreign missions is contributed by the Church of England Missionary Society whose current year ended in March, 1895, with a report of two hundred and seventy-nine thousand pounds—$1,395,000.

Of the 731 Methodist Episcopal Churches in the State of Kansas, all but 52 have been aided, at some period in their history, by loans or donations from the Board of Church Extension. Perhaps the most of them could not have been started without such assistance.

"Father Chiniquy," the celebrated ex Romish priest, who is now in his eighty-seventh year, preached in the city of Quebec, Canada, a few Sabbaths ago, giving a French sermon in the morning, a Bible reading in the afternoon, and an English sermon at night.

The senior class of the Law Department of the University of Missouri has decided to invite R. G. Ingersoll to deliver the annual address at their commencement next June, whereupon the Central Advocate suggests that it would be appropriate to invite Herr Most also. Why not?

The local option election, held in Richland parish on the nineteenth, resulted in a prohibition victory by a majority of 221. A novel feature of the contest was that a number of the colored people voted and worked for prohibition. It hardly needs to be said that they belong to the better class.

The following note from Bro. Isbell, dated Nov. 21, will be read with sorrow by his numerous friends. Our brother will have the sympathy and the prayers of his brethren.

My precious wife died Tuesday morning, at 1:15. We laid her to rest in the Columbia Cemetery beside our loved ones yesterday noon. My loss is her eternal gain. Her life was beautiful, her death triumphant. An obituary, by a friend, will appear later. I ask an interest in the prayers of my brethren in this hour of affliction.

At the recent session of the North Texas Conference the following transfers were announced: H. M. Whaling, to Baltimore Conference; T. R. Glenddenin, to Tennessee Conference; H. C. Jooly, to Arkansas Conference; J. S. Chapman, to Los Angeles Conference; J. R. Atchley, to North Texas Conference.

The fight for one rest day in every seven is not only the churchman's fight, but the wage-earner's fight as well. It was Prof. Goldwin Smith, one of the world's leading agnostics, who said: "It is the freedom of religion and the educating power of Sundays which explain the average prosperity of America."

From Rev. Henry T. Miller, of Quincy, Ill., we have a "Certificate of Church Membership," made up of several pages, with tasteful cover, held together by a cord. Following the blank certificate are several pages of quotations from the Scriptures, and from the writings of eminent men on the responsibility and obligations of church membership. It is unique in design, and would make an appropriate reminder and souvenir of that important event. Single copy, twenty cents; by the dozen, $2.

We clip the following from the Jackson, Tenn., Daily Sun, of Nov. 19, 1895:

Dr. Bigham, General Secretary of the Board of Education of the M. E. Church, South, said on the floor of the Memphis Conference, at Union City, "that the M. C. F. Institute, of Jackson, Tenn., is the most flourishing female college in Southern Methodism, and has the finest prospect of any female college in the South."

The enrollment during the current year is 491, which places it at the head of the list, so far as Southern Methodism is concerned.

At the recent session of the Oregon Conference the vote in favor of the admission of women to the General Conference was large and enthusiastic. After the result was announced an exuberant brother started as a hymn of rejoicing the familiar lines:

"The morning light is breaking,
The darkness disappears;
The sons of earth are waking
To penitential tears."

In the midst of these last two lines the incongruous application of the sentiment to the circumstances of the hour flashed on the Conference, and in a burst of laughter the singers broke down. That praise service was a failure.—Central Advocate.

Zion's Herald is getting humorous in its old age, as the following paragraph from its last issue will show:

Like the good woman who purchased her mourning some time in advance of her husband's death, because she did not wish to be hurried about it when the time came, so we in these parts have commenced to think of our mourning next May. We are told that we are to lose at least three of our great men from the Advocate and Mission Rooms. These, with three or four others that the New York Conference proposes to send, will take all of the chief offices of the General Conference, and leave us desolate. The Chinese have a way of presenting a man with a coffin some time before his death. We opine that the office of a Bishop would be a kind of coffin to two of these men.

Texas Methodism is making gratifying progress in her educational interests. The Southwestern University was never so prosperous, matriculating this year 176 girls and 275 boys, 60 of whom are studying for the ministry. Dr. W. M. Hays, the agent, has secured this year in cash, notes and lands, $32,555, and a splendid new building is in prospect. The Polytechnic College, at Forth Worth, has in land and buildings about $50 000 and has 210 students enrolled. The North Texas Female College, with a property worth $60 000, under the presidency of Mrs. Bishop Key, is in unprecedented prosperity, having an enrollment of over 300, 236 of whom are boarding in the school. A modern dining-room has been built at an expense of $7,000.—St. Louis Advocate.

It is wonderful how contracted some minds are in regard to foreign missions. We are told that they are too costly; that we are spending too much money abroad in this sort of work. Yet all that is given to this purpose is a mere pittance compared to what is lavished upon even one item of worldly gratification. All the Protestant Churches of the United States give annually to foreign missions $11,250,000. But note how paltry this sum appears alongside of what is "paid every year by the American people for their theatrical entertainment!" Dion Bountcault says that it amounts to $300,000,000. Think of it and make the application! Eighteen dollars annually are given to maintain the theater, whose influence is demoralizing, and which the country could dispense with to its moral advantage, for each dollar yearly contributed to extend the gospel to the nations of the earth, or to multiply an agency which carries Christian enlightenment and redeems humanity.—Presbyterian.

Notice to Undergraduates. Class of First Year.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The class of the first year will meet at the Methodist Church in Jackson, Tuesday morning, Dec. 10, at 9 o'clock. It is important that all the class be there at that time, as the examination will consume the whole day, and the committee will not be able to meet again for examination during the Conference session.

Each candidate will be expected to provide himself with a tablet of legal-cap or foolscap paper, pens and ink. The examination sermons must be handed in the first thing Tuesday morning.

The papers and sermons will be accurately graded, and the pass grade will be sixty-five per cent. on each book in the course, and on the sermons. In grading the sermons account will be taken of correctness of style, neatness of manuscript and accuracy.

FITZGERALD SALE PARKER, Chairman of Committee.

For Dyspepsia Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

Dr. B. B. PETTITT, Sherman, Texas, says: "I have used it in dyspepsia, with great success. I think it is a fine remedy."

Notice to Class of Second Year, Louisiana Conference.

The class of the second year is requested to meet at the Methodist Church in Jackson, on Tuesday morning, at 9 o'clock sharp.

The Tangled Hank on Seashore District.

Prof. Emory thrusts in a hand that helps to untangle the hank. Then comes Bro. Miller in your last issue and beams the warp just as I think we are apt to weave it; he makes several good points. Then Sister Montgomery states exactly how the religious services are managed on Seashore Camp Ground.

I was present when Mrs. Caspin was at the Seashore Camp Meeting. A temperance service was held. I opened the exercises, and, thinking I was in charge, called on several to speak, men and women. Mrs. C. was among those called upon. She made the first speech. I called on Bro. G. F. Thompson to close with prayer.

Whether Bro. Powell is dictatorial and arbitrary or not, I have nothing to say. Whether he acted judicious in removing Breland or not, I have nothing to say. But whether he was within the limits or not, in his action there is no question to my mind. The presiding elder has the legal right to change a preacher in his district, in the absence of the Bishop, as the Discipline directs. The manual says, The presiding elder may, if necessary, remove a preacher from one charge to another in his district. If the Bishop is virtually present at all times when he can be reached by letter or telegram, we may consider him always present. If the preacher in charge and presiding elder should differ about inviting Sam Jones to a camp meeting in their charge, the preacher thinking it very important for him present to assist—and that means a good deal of authority, management and much abuse with many evangelists—and the presiding elder should think it not best for Bro. Jones to come, and they could not agree; therefore, to prevent further friction, perhaps trouble and confusion, the presiding elder removes the preacher and places a preacher in charge that he could harmonize with on this point, would he violate any law? Should the party differed about be a woman unlicensed and unauthorized to preach by our law, it might strengthen the presiding elder in his position. But to me it appears that it would be an incident apart from the main issue, as to whether his actions were lawful.

Great Opportunity to Make Money.

I have had such splendid success that I can't help writing to you about it. I have not made less than $5, and some days $15 to $25. I am really elated, and can't see why others do not go into the Dish Washer business at once. I have not canvassed any; sell all my washers at home. They give such good satisfaction that every one sold helps to sell many others. I believe in a year I can make a profit of Three Thousand Dollars and attend to my regular business besides. When a Climax Dish Washer can be bought so cheaply, every family wants one, and it is very easy selling what everybody wants to buy. For particulars address the Climax Mfg. Co., Columbus, Ohio. I think any lady or gentleman, anywhere, can make from $5 to $10 a day. I would like to have your readers try this business, and let us know through your columns how they succeed. The best thing about it is the Climax Mfg. Co. do not ask for any pay until you have the Dish Washers sold.

How to Make Money.

MR. EDITOR:—I read how Mr. Walton made $17 a month. I am only seventeen, but can beat that. I received a fine outfit from Gray & Co., Columbus, O., for plating gold, silver, nickel and white metal. It was complete, all materials, formulas, trade secrets and instructions, they teach their agents. I silver plated a brass ring in five minutes to test it. Made $19 first week plating tableware and jewelry, $65 second, $143 first month. Brother makes $10 a day selling outfits; get all I can do. Anyone can do as well by having good outfit. To listen well is a rare accomplishment, and oftentimes benomes no small element of a person's sunness in life. It is the most delicate and satisfactory compliment to a speaker, even as inattention is the greatest rudeness. Not in church merely, where it is in some measure a religious duty, but in more private company, where it is one of the first marks of social politeness, the habit of careful, eager, interested listening is invaluable. On Sunday the preaching would, without doubt, be much better were there better listening.

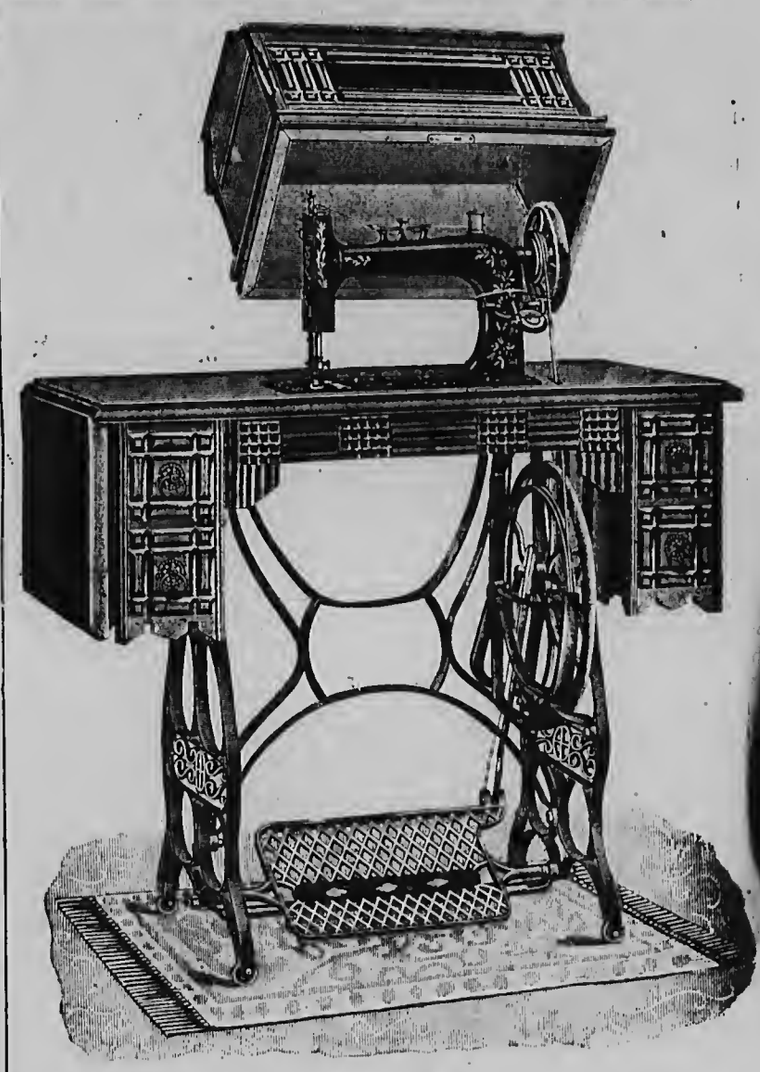
Our Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



"ARLINGTON B."

The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take up, convenient foot rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments tree, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned, and protected by a hard finish, has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clear.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearings polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—THE "ARLINGTON B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell with but spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

OUR OFFER.

To anyone, not now a subscriber to this paper, who will send us $20.50, we will send the machine and the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE one year. To old subscribers we make the following offer: Pay your subscription to January, '97, and send us $18.50 additional, and we will send you the machine.

HOME CIRCLE.

WAITING FOR THE ANGELS.

Waiting through days of fever,
Waiting through nights of pain,
For the waft of wings at the portal,
For the sound of songs immortal,
And the breaking of life's long chain.

There is little to do for our dear one—
Only to watch and pray—
As the tide is outward drifting,
As the gates of heaven are lifting,
And its gleam is on her way.

The tasks that so often taxed her,
The children she held so dear,
The strain of the coming and going,
The stress of the mending and sewing,
The burden of many a year,

Trouble her now no longer;
She is past the fret and care;
On her brow is the angel's token,
The look of a peace unbroken,
She was never before so fair.

You see, she is waiting the angels,
And we—we are standing apart;
For us there are loss and sorrow;
For her is the endless morrow,
And the reaping time of the heart.

—Harper's Bazar.

For Nothing.

Self-sacrifice comes natural to women. Much of it is born in them, and what is not is ground into them from their childhood by education. For the sake of her home duties a girl gives up amusements and privileges which her brother would never be expected to forego for the like reason. As she grows older this spirit grows, encouraged by all tradition and outside influence. Often its power masters her altogether, and her life becomes one long devotion to endless labor and acceptance of unpleasant things, that the pleasant part of living may be kept sacred for the rest of the family.

The purely useless side of this entire self-abnegation must sometimes strike the beholder. Such effacing of individuality is not uncommon. And it gives as little real benefit to the family as it does to the individual.

Putting aside the moral effect on the younger members of the family brought up to regard their mother as a machine run for the family service, does the woman who so gives herself for the well-being of her family really accomplish all she desires? If she work without pause or slackening day in and day out, does she always feel satisfied, with admiring onlookers, that it is the noblest way so to spend her health and energies? If she renounces all recreation and higher life for herself, and gives up all communion of mind and spirit with her husband and children, is the reward adequate that is paid to them in a better-kept house, a more bountifully supplied larder, or handsome clothes?

If over-fatigue causes her to become petulant or complaining, is not the atmosphere of home more greatly injured than the added cleaning and cooking can repair? If she is too worn out to give sympathy and help to the children's joys and sorrows, what do the finer clothes and furniture obtained avail? And if, as sometimes happens, outraged nature gives way, and others must step into the breach, do their own work and the played-out woman's as well, and take care of her into the bargain, what has she gained by her extreme efforts that she has not lost by the breakdown?

A life laid down in a worthy cause is not lost, but gained; but is this cause worthy?—Harper's Bazar.

Cultivate the Memory.

A habit of forgetfulness is one of the greatest hindrances in all business and social relations, but our modern style of life and education is certainly injurious to the memory. The old methods of learning by rote have fallen into disfavor, and there was much to say against them as a hindrance to originality; but there is a time in every child's life when learning by rote is a useful thing, and it is at a very early age, for the minds of young children not being occupied with so many things as those of their elders, they are in a receptive condition, and their memory is more retentive than later on. Every mother has been struck by her child of two or three years remembering, perhaps, for some months where a certain thing was placed, or some little event, and it is a matter of common experience that we remember the events of our early youth more forcibly than those of even a few months back.

It is possible to begin to cultivate the memory as soon as a child can talk, when it should be made to describe everything it has seen during its morning walk, or to repeat some little story that has been told to it, or a short lesson which has been learned. Every teacher before beginning a new lesson should make sure that the lesson of the day before has been retained and understood, for the more we overcrowd the little brain in the attempt to force knowledge upon it the less we impress upon it for future use. It is the experience of all those who have crammed for examinations that as soon as the examination is over the undigested knowledge passes away, and similarly through life. Unless an item of knowledge is assimilated it becomes as useless to the mental system as an undigested article of food to the bodily system, and in both cases they act as an irritant, interfering with the proper digestion of other matters.

In a well-ordered mind the facts remain and points are, as it were, pigeon-holed in such a way that they can be brought out immediately when required. There are untidy brains, in which the objects of knowledge are confused and not ready to hand, so that they may turn up at unexpected moments, but not just when wanted, in the same manner as there are untidy drawers, wardrobes and rooms, and to cultivate a habit of mental order as well as one of physical order should be the earnest desire of every mother and teacher.—Mid-Continent.

The Devil's Philosophy.

1. To become strong in resisting sin you must put yourself where you will be strongly tempted to commit sin.

2. To understand the horrors of drunkenness you must go to the saloon and get drunk.

3 To be fully aware of and capable of resisting the wiles of horse-racing and other forms of gambling you must witness the races and know how to play cards.

4. To fortify your boy against the saloon and its associations you should have him spend several evenings loitering around the bar.

5. Before you teach your boy the way to heaven you should let him travel fourteen to sixteen years in the direction of hell; then he will be capable of choosing the right way for himself.

6. Let your son witness a prize fight, that he may the better know how horrid and brutal it is.

The above are a few tenets in the devil's philosophy. How do they strike you? Are they sound? If they are, then saloons, horse-races, gambling-dens, brothels, prize-fighting, etc., should be sustained and encouraged as educators in morals. Strange indeed that some professed Christians think the devil's philosophy is sound.—Religious Telescope.

A Converted Purse.

"Certainly. I am grateful to you for asking me. Put me down for $25."

A look of pleased surprise passed over the solicitor's face, succeeded by another of perplexity; for it happened that he knew that his friend had precisely the same salary as he, and that $25 was a generous fraction of his month's income.

"Oh! that's more than we expect, Frank—and then you can't afford to, I fear," he added, with the freedom of a comrade.

"O, no! Let me tell you how it is, Jack. You know I turned right-about face when I became a Christian last Winter, and I resolved at the start not to enter into the junior partnership with the world and a senior partnership with the church.

"You know my habits. I am not an inordinate smoker. Three cigars a day, with a treat to the fellows now and then, cut off, reduced my expenses $100 a year. Then I had a careless fashion, ruinous to my digestion, of adding a bottle of claret, or some fancy indigestible pudding or cream, at least twice a week to a wholesome lunch. Looked squarely in the face and given its right name, it was an indulgence of unlawful appetite, so I made $75 a year by stopping that. Sunday headaches, too, went at the same time.

"One day I was looking over my necktics to find some particular color, and I found I had thirty-seven, with at least ten scarfpins. That made me run through my accounts next day—they weren't very well kept, but I guessed as nearly as I could—to see what was in my wardrobe that would leave me better dressed from a Christian and artistic point of view, too, for that matter, if I never wore it again; and I am ashamed to say I found I had $150 worth of dry goods on hand, that was the price, not of good taste, but of mere caprice.

"Now, I don't propose to submit to a taxation in behalf of my weaknesses and vices, and be niggardly with the church that I've promised before God and man to support and increase.

"There, you have it all! I spent over three hundred a year, you see, in the service of appetite and fashion, for things that made me less a man. I've transferred that mortgage; yes, I can afford easily that $25, especially when it is to rescue some other fellow deeper in than I was. Come to think of it, make it thirty! The other five is a thank-offering!"—The Sunday-school Times.

A Whole Family in Heaven.

Who can picture or describe the everlasting joy? No one absent. Nor father, nor mother, nor son, nor daughter away. In the world they were united in faith, and love, and peace, and joy. In the morning of the resurrection they ascended together. Before the throne they bow together in united adoration. On the bank of the river of life they walk hand in hand, and as a family they have commenced a career of glory which shall be everlasting. There hereafter is to be no separation in that family. No one is to lie down on a bed of pain; no one to sink into the arms of death. Never, in heaven, is that family to move along in the slow procession, clad in the habiliments of woe, to consign one of its members to the tomb. God grant in his infinite mercy that every family may thus be united.—Albert Barnes.

Be Your Best at Home.

It is an old admonition, but it can not be too frequently repeated. Be your best at home, in dress, manners and spirit. Life is too short to waste its holy hours in criticism, fault finding and unkind words and acts. Only a few brief years do family circles remain unbroken by the invasion of marriage, removals or deaths, and if our retrospect of the time spent together is to be a precious memory, let its hours be filled with all that is loving and generous and noble.

"We have careful thought for the stranger,
And smile for the sometime guest,
But oft for 'our own' the bitter tone,
Though we love our own the best."

That it's best to do the work given us to do, no matter how distasteful it may be, just as well as it can be done, not mechanically, but with the whole heart. If it is a round of household duties day after day, make it pleasant by scattering gleams of sunshine all along the way. Making a bright spot here, and a cosy corner there.

When one has enough light to perceive that one is mistaken, and too much vanity to own it, and instead of turning back one goes still deeper into one's errors, it is the progress and the consolation of pride.—Chateaubriand.

Coffee Poisoning.

According to a medical report from Paris, chronic caffeism is a disease to which little attention is given. "It is almost always," says this doctor, "confounded with alcoholic troubles, especially with those affecting the digestive and nervous systems." Caffeic dyspepsia very closely resembles alcoholic gastritis. Sometimes the distaste for food is such that patients refuse everything but bread and coffee. Nausea, vomiting and the generation of irritating gas follows, and some patients become extremely emaciated. Tremulousness of the limbs, cramps, insomnia or short periods of sleep interspersed with horrible nightmares are among the symptoms. Palpitation of the heart is less likely to be present than one might suppose, but a diminution of the pulse is especially apparent.—New York Ledger.

Porous Clothing.

It is absolutely essential to health that the emanations from the skin pass easily through the clothing. This—which is called "transpiration"—may be interfered with by an excess of clothing, or by clothing of a very close texture. All who wear India rubber coats know how uncomfortable they are after they have been on a short time. Ordinarily, proper clothing will not prevent transpiration, but an excess will interfere with it; and where too much clothing is worn it soon becomes foul, because the outside air can not freely mingle with the gases from the body and dilute them. Some wear the thickest and heaviest undervests which they can buy, and such people are very generally the victims of frequent colds. Following the rule of light clothing, they would be much safer from the dangers of exposure were they to wear two light undervests instead of one very thick and heavy.—Sanitarian.

Apple and Grape Cure.

Apples are useful in nervous dyspepsia; they are nutritious, medicinal and vitalizing. They aid digestion, clear the voice, correct the acidity of the stomach, are valuable in rheumatism, insomnia and liver troubles. An apple contains as much nutriment as a potato, in a pleasanter and more wholesome form. Grapes dilute thick blood, send the circulation to the surface, remove obstructions from the liver and lungs, dissolve and dislodge gravel and calculi, and bring the stomach and bowels to a healthy condition.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

CHICKEN FRICASSEE.—Cut up the chicken, put on the fire in a kettle with sufficient cold water to cover it, add a lump of butter, or sliced salt pork if preferred; mince a head of celery and add; season with salt and pepper. Boil till tender. Have ready hot crisp biscuits broken open and laid on a hot dish, on this place the chicken, thicken the gravy with flour rubbed smooth in milk and pour over the chicken.—Exchange.

A DELICIOUS PUDDING.—A cooking school teacher says in her experience this has proved a delicious pudding and very easily and quickly made: Two cups of water and one cup of sugar were boiled together, then three tablespoonfuls of corn starch were added, with the juice of one lemon and a speck of salt, and the whole boiled ten minutes. Then the whites of three eggs were beaten to a stiff froth, the starch added by spoonfuls, and the whole beaten together. It was then put into a mold, and when cold, was turned on a small platter and served with boiled custard poured around it.—Selected.

PINEAPPLE TAPIOCA.—Soak one cup of pineapple over night in one and a half cups of water. Add two and a half cups of water and cook in a double boiler until transparent; then add one cup of sugar and one juicy pineapple minced fine with a sharp knife. Mold and serve cold with or without cream.

If you wish to know whether you are a Christian, inquire of yourself whether, in and for the love of God, you seek to make happy those about you by smiles and pleasant sayings. Are you a comfortable person to live with? Are you pleasant to have about?—Gail Hamilton.

OBITUARIES.

ERWIN—Mrs. SOPHIA T. ERWIN (nee Crow) was born April 15, 1832, and died at her home in Lafayette, La., June 23, 1895. She was a native of Lafayette parish, La. She was married Nov. 11, 1856, to Dr. W. B. Erwin, a skillful physician of Lafayette parish, who died at the post of duty during the yellow fever epidemic that swept over this section in the year 1878, leaving her a widow with five daughters, who have been faithfully cared for and trained for the Master.

Sister Evans joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, about the year 1859, of which she lived a consistent member until her death. She was a most exemplary Christian. One has written of her: "Whether as daughter, wife or mother, she was devoted, loving and true. As friend and neighbor, she was kind and charitable; indeed, she typified the most excellent attributes of a God-like life." My acquaintance with Sister Erwin runs back over eleven years. I knew her well, being her pastor for over three years. I visited and prayed with her often, for she was always glad to ask me to read the Bible and pray with her. I am confident that in a pastorate of twenty-three years I have never known one who manifested greater faith in Christ than she. I often conversed with her on the subject of religion—experimental religion—and always found her in loving communion with the dear Lord.

Her experience for the last nine years was a happy one, though she was afflicted most of the time. She was a happy Christian. Her afflictions for the last few years of her life were such as to prevent her attending the house of God's house, which was a great privation; but she feasted upon the Word of God. It was her constant companion, and a strong faith in its precious promises gave her great comfort. It was her solace in all her sorrows and afflictions. All through her life are to be found her pencil marks, marking the promises of our Father to his children.

She always expressed herself as being ready and willing to depart this life to be with Christ, yet was willing to remain and suffer for him. She was patient and submissive in her sufferings. She endured to the end as a good soldier of Christ, and passed quietly and calmly from the walks of men to dwell with Christ above.

Kind and loving hands ministered to her during her illness. Her weeping daughters, kindred and friends stood about her to the last, anxious for every expression of love and word of hope. She had made preparations to go to Texas to her daughters, who live there, but death came and she was called from her old home, where she had spent the best part of her life, to the home above. This was what she had hoped and wished for—to live and die here. How we all miss her! May God bless the bereaved family who are left to mourn her departure, and comfort them by his sanctifying grace, and may they all meet again in the sweet by-and-by!

T. S. R.

...ERS—SALLIE JONES BYERS, the daughter of Rev. K. A. and Mrs. L. M. Jones, was born in Simpson county, Miss., April 21, 1861. She was baptized in infancy by her grandfather, Rev. R. J. Jones; joined the M. E. Church, South, when about ten years of age, and was graduated in the Methodist District School at Black Hawk, Miss., with the highest honors.

She was a musician of rare talents, and was employed in teaching music, and was organist of the Methodist choir for some years. She married Mr. E. S. Byers, of Water Valley, Miss., on June 3, 1884. Mr. Byers has been for years an earnest Christian and one of the most ardent supporters of the Methodist Church. He was the father of five children by a former marriage at the time of his union with her. Though without a mother, they never lacked a mother's care and love and training. She found the sweetest reward for unselfish work in the loyal devotion of those to whom she was indeed a mother. She was the mother of three children of her own, of tender years. The entire family is bereft of a gentle, sweet and tender wife. The husband's heart, wrung by this great sorrow, can be brightened only by the perfect of the indissoluble union of hearts and spirits on the other shore.

Her life was a blessing to all who came within the sphere of her influence. She lived close to the great heart of the Redeemer, and walked with the Jesus that passeth understanding.

A FRIEND.

HALLADAY—Our Father has called another little lamb to the heavenly fold. Another link broken which bound us to earth; another star in the diadem of our Savior, who said: "Suffer little children to come unto me, for such is the kingdom of heaven."

...IE CLEO HESSIE, infant daughter of the late S. and Laura Holladay, was born Feb. 8, 1895, and died Oct. 15, 1895, in Pellena, La. She bereaved parents, brothers and sisters would say:

She is not lost, but gone before,
To that "bright celestial shore."
She is sleeping; let her rest
On the Savior's gentle breast.

No more sorrow, no more sin,
No more tears her eyes to dim.
In His arms she sweetly rests;
She is happy, she is blest.

MRS. S. E. JACKSON.

Jessup, La.

SHIELDS—JOHN RALEIGH SHIELDS was born at Brandon, Miss., Feb. 2, 1817; married Miss Ada Moore, of Fannie, Miss., Feb. 16, 1881; joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1886, and died Sept. 30, 1895.

He was one of the successful planters of the Delta. Integrity was a most manifest trait in his character. His neighbors respected, loved and trusted him implicitly. As a business men, he was industrious, thoughtful, watchful and considerate. He was an excellent citizen; gave attention to the best interests and real prosperity of the country. As a husband and father, he was everything to his interesting family, which at all times had his warm, true affection.

Fifteen or eighteen months ago he realized the importance of being more active, faithful and consistent in the cause of Christianity and the propriety of educating his boys in the name of Christ, and of walking before them himself ever an example of Christliness. During our meeting last Winter he was completely revived, and "built an altar" at which God was worshiped, character developed, hearts rejoiced and home beautifully adorned.

The resignation with which he bore his last long illness was something beautiful to contemplate. It was his earnest desire, if God so willed, to be spared a few years longer to aid his excellent wife in the education of their four boys and do more efficient work in the cause of the Master. His death is a calamity to the community.

J. M. WYATT.

RITCHEY—JOHN M. RITCHEY was born Jan. 28, 1809, and died Oct. 26, 1895.

He was one of the oldest and most highly respected citizens of Franklin county. He was twice married. The last wife and one daughter survive to mourn his loss. He was a loving husband and devoted father. The last years of his life were spent at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Martha Guice. He joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1853, and was faithful to his vows to the time of his death. He leaves many friends and no enemies, and his best friends were those who knew him best.

His last illness was short. He was sick only about one week. He talked freely of his spiritual condition, and said that he was ready to go; all the friends of his youth had passed over the river, and its turbid waters had no terrors for him.

May the God of mercies deal kindly with the wife and daughter he leaves behind, leading them in paths of peace and true holiness; and when it shall be said to them, "It is enough," may they pass over the river and find the husband and father who has gone before awaiting them, and ready to welcome them to the peaceful home of the Father, where there will be no more parting and no more tears.

G. A. G.

IVY—Sister SUSAN W. IVY (nee Terry) was born Nov. 9, 1814, and died in Abbeville, Miss., Nov. 3, 1895. In her early life she moved to Tennessee. In 1837 she was happily married to Col. W. T. Ivy, since when her home has been in North Mississippi. Her husband crossed over the river a few years in advance of her, leaving her in age and loneliness. Yet she was never gloomy, but with a vigorous faith she held a bright hope of heaven; so in her very quiet and gentle way she carried a soft, sweet ray of spiritual brightness wherever she went. She was a Methodist for over fifty years. With many battles fought and victories won during a life of more than fourscore years she met the last enemy, and in the strength of Christian faith triumphed gloriously. She told the writer that she felt that all she needed was wings to fly away from this, the tenement of clay, and be at home. She wanted to say much for Christ, but was too feeble to talk. What a gift of Heaven are these mothers in Israel! May God bless her six surviving children with comforting grace, and bring them all to God and mother!

BEN P. JACO, P. C.

Abbeville, Miss.

CLANTON—Mrs. SARAH J. CLANTON (nee Purviance) was born in Camden, Miss., April 11, 1839. She joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1851, and was married to Dr. Wm. Clanton, Jan. 13, 1858. She died in Camden, Miss., Sept. 20, 1895.

Such is the epitome of a useful life. For many years a sufferer, she learned in the school of affliction those lessons of patience and humility which fitted her so well to be a counselor to her husband and children, and a friend to distressed humanity. Cheerful in disposition, warm in her affections, tender in her friendships, she was surrounded in life and in death by a host of friends. Always an earnest student of God's Word, and a firm believer in its truth toward the end of her life, she more than ever showed forth the fruits of the Spirit in her daily walk and conversation.

To her son and daughter, as well as to her stricken husband, she leaves the priceless heritage of a pure life. To them in their affliction we offer the "balm of Gilead," and commend them to the care of the Great Physician.

JOHN W. CHAMBERS.

DACUS—Rev. A. T. DACUS died near Mosley Bluff, July 29, 1895, aged seventy-four years ten months and twenty-nine days.

Dear father was born in Perry county, Ala., Aug. 31, 1820, and professed a hope for Christ at a camp meeting in Bibb county, Ala., in his nineteenth year, and joined the M. E. Church, South, and began to preach the glorious gospel of Christ a few years later. He leaves mother and six children to mourn his loss. He was confined to his bed four weeks, and suffered so much; but he bore it with patience. He told mother that all was well with him. I do not think we ought to grieve, but it is human nature.

He moved to Union parish in the year 1860, and remained here until the day of his death. He has gone where sickness and sorrow, pain and death, are felt and feared no more.

Catarrh Can Not Be Cured

with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they can not reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years, and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing Catarrh. Send for testimonials, free.

the doctors

approve of Scott's Emulsion. For whom?

For men and women who are weak, when they should be strong; for babies and children who are thin, when they should be fat; for all who do not get from their food the nourishment they should. Poor blood is starved blood. You eat and are nourished. Consumption and scrofula never come when the blood gets its proper food. And nothing is better for starved blood than COD-LIVER OIL.

Scott's Emulsion

is COD-LIVER OIL with the taste taken out. It is for all who feel weak, have lost appetite or are losing flesh.

No one else breaks up cod-liver oil as it is broken up in Scott's Emulsion. If you need it, get it. No substitute will do.

TWELVE FULL-PAGE MAPS IN COLORS.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn, New York, in the "New York Evangelist:" "Of all Bibles yet issued in our country, the most superb in execution and completeness of contents is the 'Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.' Sabbath-school teachers will find this elegant volume a little library of information in itself."

REV. ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., President of, and Professor in, the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.: "It pleases me very greatly. I regard the help which it affords to a correct pronunciation of Scripture proper names as doubling the value of the edition. I trust the book will be received as it deserves to be."

We will send this Bible for $1.65 to all subscribers who will pay their subscription for one year in advance, provided they have not had the benefit of other premium offers. In that case they must write us for special terms. When we say a year in advance we mean one year from this date, i. e., December, '96. A little later it will be January, '97.

☞N. B.—Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two years in advance can get this Bible for $1.35; and this, too, regardless of whether they have had the benefit of other premium offers.

DOMESTIC.

At a large fire in Chicago, on Nov. 23, five firemen lost their lives and many people were injured.

Martin Van Boren Stevens is a student at the University of Kansas. He is 70 years old, and expects to graduate next Spring, and take up the practice of law.

The Peace Association of Friends has issued a circular asking all ministers to preach on the blessings of peace on Dec. 15. It declares that the country is suffering with a war orgy.

The details of the ceremony on the elevation of Mgr. Satolli to the cardinalate is practically completed. The ceremony will occur on Dec. 15, at 10:30 A. M., at the cathedral at Baltimore.

Gov Matthews, of Indiana, delivered an address in Philadelphia at a meeting of Cuban sympathizers. He said Cuba's wrongs appealed strongly to Americans, and the insurgents should receive their support.

The blue and gray clasped hands on Nov. 22, at Vicksburg, Miss., in the movement to dedicate a National Park there, to include the fields around Vicksburg, where the men of North and South met in combat.

Saturday the British steamer "Rihston" was cleared from this port for Copenhagen, Denmark, with the largest cargo of corn ever shipped in a single vessel from this city. The cargo consisted of 175,000 bushels, carried mainly in bulk.

When Congress assembles, in another week, one of the first matters which will engage its attention, after the organization of the committees, will undoubtedly be the Nicaragua Canal. The demand for the prompt completion of this great interoceanic waterway on the part of the people has steadily increased in earnestness.

FOREIGN.

In the recent cholera epidemic in Japan the death rate was phenomenally high, about 75 per cent.

Germany took 45,000 000 pounds of American pork last year, nearly twice as much as the year before.

The recent storms played havoc with shipping along the English Channel and the coast of the Atlantic.

Victor Immanuel's monument at the Pantheon has cost $2,000 000, and will need $3 000,000 more to complete it.

A recent traveler in Germany says that 80 per cent of the laborers in the fields are women. The men are in the army.

The kernel to the present situation in the East is found in the fact that the Turkish government is without money. The Sultan is anxious to stop disorders, but lacks funds with which to pay his troops.

The Sultan has consented to allow the passage in through the Dardanelles of a second gunboat for each power, in accordance with the requests of the Austrian, Italian, Russian and British representatives.

China is negotiating with a German-English syndicate for a new loan for the purpose of securing funds with which to pay a portion of the indemnity promised to Japan at the conclusion of the recent war. Attempts to negotiate the loan in Paris failed.

Unwin Bros.' printing works, located at Chilworth, Surrey, burned on Nov. 23. One hundred thousand valuable manuscripts and works in course of preparation or ready for publication were destroyed. The publishing house of Unwin Bros. is also known as the Gresham Press.

The Universal, of the City of Mexico, states that the various customshouses throughout the republic netted the national exchequer during the months of October the handsome sum of $2,000 000. The tri-monthly installments towards meeting the interest on Mexico's indebtedness having already been paid, there remains a surplus of $1 600 000 in the coffers of the national treasury, something never before recorded in the history of this country.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

THE COUNCIL AT JERUSALEM.

(Acts xv, 1-20.)

"Certain men," the lesson says, created dissension. To tear down, to destroy, to ruin, is the loved employ of many. To array brother against brother is of the devil.

1. We may self-complacently prove that the existence of the different ecclesiastical denominations is of actual benefit, comparing them to the different departments of military service, such as infantry, cavalry, etc. But, after all, the lack of unity, or at least, harmony, is a great evil.

(1) We deceive ourselves and our hearers if we say that said denominations differ only in non-essentials. The High Church teaches baptismal regeneration; Baptists hold that without immersion you can have no fellowship with the saints, etc.

(2) In the mission field the existing division causes confusion, not mentioning the item of unnecessary expense. Many heathen deride our efforts to convert them, seeing that Christians are opposed to each other in many important matters.

(3) Efforts to effect union have been repeatedly made. But the so-called Congresses of Religions miserably failed. Each denomination wishes that all others shall come to its own peculiar way of thinking.

(4) It is erroneous to imagine that the Roman Catholics are united. Among them, the Jesuits battle against the Redemptorists. Both unite in fighting the Augustinians, Benedictines, etc.

2. A council like the one at Jerusalem would be of great benefit. Would that it could be effected, and that the results would be equally satisfactory!

(1) Peter opened the meeting as first speaker. While his eyes beamed with celestial light he assured that all Christians are saved through the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ. Hence no room for dissension and division.

(2) Paul and Barnabas, in turn, chaining the floor, eloquently spoke of the miracles which the Lord had wrought by them among the Gentiles.

(3) James being recognized as the next speaker, emphasized that the prophets had foretold the ingathering of the Gentiles.

(4) The last speaker wound up his remarks by presenting a compromise measure. While circumcision was in nowise to be insisted on, he simply recommended that un-Christian, immoral and unsanitary practices be discontinued by converts among the Gentiles.

(5) This compromise measure was adopted. The apostles, elders, and the whole church were pleased with it.

(6) If among the Christians of our day harmony and unity shall ever be acquired, concessions must be mutual. Compromise only can carry the measure.

Sons of Amiability.

In Belgium a society has been formed bearing above name. We give some of the statutes:

1. We will never indulge in peevishness. We abominate spleeny and waspish disposition.

2. Every morning to map out a plan how, during that day, we can make somebody happy.

3. We will assist and relieve to the best of our ability.

4. Cheerfully carry out the commands of our superiors.

5. To be polite to everybody. Utterances like "good morning," "please," "thank you," etc., should abound among us.

6. When we give an order to a servant, always to add a word of encouragement, etc.

Members of the Epworth League should adopt these statutes as their own.

League Gels.

The Wesleyan Church in England has ordered the organization of young people's societies. The name adopted is "Wesley Guild."

In New York the various Methodist Churches agitate the organization of what in New Orleans we have had several years—an Epworth League Union.

Undue fraternization with the "King's Daughters" is not advisable to our leaguers. Said society receives as members, besides Christians, Jews and Gentiles.

The official name of the Presbyterian young people's societies is Westminster League.

Some leaguers are already saving money for the trip to the bi-annual conference in Toronto, in 1897.

The members of the Epworth League must faithfully assist the pastor during the protracted meeting.

Supposing our leaguers assist the stewards in providing the salary of their pastor!

A strike is going on at the La Ferme cigarette factory, in St. Petersburgh, the trouble growing out of the introduction of new machinery. A serious riot was one of the results of the strike, the strikers smashing the new machines. The dissatisfied workmen then threw the broken machines and the tobacco out of the windows. A thousand strikers were placed under arrest.

"THY WILL BE DONE!"

BY JOHN G. WHITTIER.

We see not, know not; all our way
Is night—with Thee alone is day.
From out the torrent's troubled drift,
Above the storm our prayers we lift.
Thy will be done!

The flesh may fail, the heart may faint,
But who are we to make complaint,
Or dare to plead, in times like these,
The weakness of our impotence?
Thy will be done!

We take with solemn thankfulness
Our burdens up, nor ask it less,
And count it joy that even we
May suffer, serve, or wait for Thee,
Whose will be done!

Though dim as yet in tint and line,
We trace Thy picture's wise design,
And thank Thee that our age supplies
Its dark relief of sacrifice,
Thy will be done!

If, for the age to come, this hour
Of trial hath vicarious power,
And blest by Thee, our present pain
Be liberty's eternal gain,
Thy will be done!

Strike, Thou the Master, we Thy keys,
The anthem of the destinies!
The minor of our feeble strain,
Our hearts shall breathe the old refrain,
Thy will be done!

My Critics Reviewed—No 2.

(Bros. Miller and Davies.)

Sister Montgomery, Bro. Miller and Bro. Davies are entitled to my respects for their courteous criticisms of my paper on the "New Code." To deal with those critics in the order named, I must say that the first one has "erred" in her manner of correcting an error. Mrs. Montgomery says the "three presiding elders" had charge of the services held at Seashore Camp Ground by Mrs. Chaplo—not Chopin, as the printer had it—and Mrs. Snell. This is correct on general principles, but not as to the particular services alluded to—i. e., the addresses, collection, etc. Mrs. Montgomery "was present when the hours were chosen and the speakers selected." If the presiding elders chose "the hours," and selected "the speakers," and dictated the character of the services, or engineered the services in any sense, then—and it seems to me not otherwise—they "had control" of those services. To control, in its first sense, means to direct. At each service held under the great tabernacle the officiating clergyman "controls the exercises," while the three presiding elders "have charge." In the same sense that Dr. Mangham, Dr. Morrison, or this scribe, controlled their part of the "services" held at the time and place named, Mrs. Hays and Mrs. Chapin had "control" of those services held by them. And this applies to Bro. Miller's criticisms on the same phase of the subject.

Bros. Miller and Davies persist in running off the mean question, as if I had undertaken to defend women evangelists. This is an incident, not the issue. Those Seashore resolutions denied the right of a pastor to put his piety, loyalty, and common sense into his charge, and entrust the control of any particular service to whom he would.

A pastor was removed for proposing to put an "unlicensed person" in his pulpit—to give such person "control of services held," or to be held, at Palmer Camp Ground.* The resolutions said such thing was "unlawful." This I denied, because where there is no law nothing can be unlawful. If so, it is unlawful for a man to kiss his wife, or a son his mother. There is no law authorizing such an act, neither human nor divine. But, according to the logic of these brethren, they will say that there is a law requiring a man to love his wife, and kissing her is the manifestation of his love; and it is, therefore, lawful for a man to kiss his wife. This is poor logic—ab absurdum—for we are commanded to "love one another." Well, where would the kissing stop under the operation of such logic? But there is what may be termed a common law—the unbroken usage of society—which authorizes the kissing of the wife, but prohibits such thing beyond certain degrees of affinity or consanguinity. So there is usage back of the action of the pastor at Palmer Camp Ground. "Father Reeves," Carvosso, Moody and others have "had control of services held in our churches," and no one objected to it.

Bro. Miller is opposed to arresting the character of any of the brethren who, in the past, have taken unlicensed persons into their pulpits; "but," he says, "I do think the character of any brother who was advised by his presiding elder not to do it and yet did it, or any brother that persists in it, ought to have his character arrested."

Here is the "milk in the cocoanut." Look at those words which I have taken the liberty to italicize! "Advised by his presiding elder not to do it!" Here is the fatal blunder, the ground of offense in the Seashore resolutions. Those resolutions were based on "the written opinion of Bishop Keener," delivered to the pastor at the quarterly meeting by the presiding elder. Bishop Keener's opinions are very weighty and very wise, and so are the counsels of the presiding elder, whoever he may be (?); but neither is law, nor is it unlawful to disregard all such "opinions" other than of a "godly" sort. A prudent man will reverence and weigh them well; but he can not be tried, convicted and expelled under "opinions."

If, as Bro. Miller seems to think, the law providing for licensing proper persons to preach forbids any unlicensed person preaching, why punish a third party, and not deal with the principal in the offense? If either is guilty of "unlawful conduct," it is Mrs. Snell, Mr. Moody, Carvosso, "Philip's" daughters, etc.; and Paul and Breland were particeps criminis.

Expressing surprise at my inability to see the difference between the conduct of the pastor in the Seashore case and the pastor in the Palmer Camp Ground case, he (Bro. Miller) proceeds to sweep away every doubt—to clear the mist—in order that my obtuse sense may grasp the distinction. He says: "The first was strictly according to law; the second contrary to law." This is a fine specimen of elucidation! It enables me to see a part of it. I do think "the first was according to law," but I have denied the conclusion as to the "second." That, too, seems to be "according to law" in the sense above intended—i. e., according to custom. However, if Bro. Miller means by "law" the "advice" of the presiding elder and the "opinion" of the Bishop, I see it all just as he sees it, for certainly at Seashore the presiding elders advised one way, and at Palmer Camp Ground another way.

Bro. Miller endorses the opinion that "the pulpit is the key to the situation." Here is more light. A crisis is on. Local preachers are playing the part of evangelists; they go preaching the second blessing—"a strange doctrine." There is a woman loose on the church calling herself a preacher, and called by others an evangelist. "The pulpit is the key to the situation;" control that, and you control them; and if the pastor will not control the pulpit our way, we will control him. Is this the meaning? At Palmer Camp Ground the pastor would not control his pulpit to suit the "opinions" and "advice" of others, so others took it in hand to control him.

Bro. Miller is too fond of analogies. He follows them too far—e. g.: After building up an argument in favor of unlicensed persons occupying our pulpits, he turns to demolish it by a succession of analogies, and concludes that if he must take Mrs. Snell "because the Lord blesses her labors," so, for a like reason, we must take "the man who had two wives." Here is haste. No one fact ought to be a passport to our pulpits. Truth always enriches and elevates, no matter what the source. But an evil example destroys the effect of all perception for God; hence hypocrites are sometimes useful where they are not known. A good woman, "unlicensed," is better for any pulpit than a bigamist who is licensed. "Whatsoever things are of good report," etc.

Bro. Davies admits that in substance the authorities said to Mrs. Chapin and Mrs. Snell: "Lead the meeting; this is your day." I have never claimed more. It was their day, given up to them, to speak as long as they choose, and say what they thought proper to say.

Bro. Davies insists on a distinction between courtesy and right. Just so. No one—certainly not I—said "unlicensed persons" have a right to our pulpits. But is not courtesy at Seashore courtesy at Palmer? All that I have said, and that I insist upon, is that the pastor at the latter place violated no law, nor did he intend to do so. Is the same true of the presiding elders who claim omnipresence?

Bro. Davies went a long way out of the road to spank the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, an organization which has done more for the gospel of temperance in one decade than all Christendom did in a century before its organization. There are some cranks amongst them, but perhaps not more than may be found in the Methodist Church or any other religious organization.

Bro. Davies says these W. C. T. U. women "want the earth, the smaller stars and nebulæ, and even invade the sacred, conservative precincts of the English nobility," etc. Like most of his poetry in the paper under review, it goes beyond the legitimate range of poetic license. They do "want the earth" for Christ, but have never grasped for "the smaller stars and nebulæ." But the W. C. T. U. is able to take care of itself, and I need not waste my time with that side issue, nor with Dinah Morris nor Adam Bede.

Speaking of law, Bro. Davies says: "It recognizes the rights, but not the whims and opinions of all."

Here is another concession of all my claims. "Not the whims and opinions of all," nor of any. Bro. Miller clearly puts the casus belli at Palmer Camp Ground on the failure of the pastor to govern himself by the advice of the presiding elder and the opinion of a Bishop; and in the future will be in favor of arresting the character of any preacher who does not control his pulpit according to such advice and such opinions!

What is this if it be not making law of the "whims and opinions of all" presiding elders and Bishops? These brethren persist in saying that it is "unlawful to permit unlicensed persons" to occupy our pulpits, or "to control services held in our churches, or any other property owned by said church." When asked for the law thus outraged, they answer back, "It is contrary to law." So says Bro. Miller, but refers to no law, until, in the course of his argument, he decides to base penal proceedings—arrest of character—upon a preacher's failure to accept the advice of his presiding elder. Because we have a law requiring a man to perform certain public duties, and no law requiring him to perform certain private duties, is it, therefore, unlawful to perform these private duties? Because we have a law for licensing proper persons to preach, is it, therefore, unlawful "to control services" without a license? There is not a lawyer of any learning in all the land who would not laugh at such reasoning. There is no law requiring me to plant corn instead of potatoes; but that does not make it unlawful for me to plant corn.

Both Bro. Miller and Bro. Davies proceed on an affirmative supposition, viz: that a thing is unlawful which is not provided for by law. Just as well may these brethren argue that it is unlawful for a preacher to sing. There is not a word of law in our Discipline requiring it; nor is it unlawful for him to refuse to sing. There is simply no law on that subject; neither is there any law forbidding an "unlicensed" person taking control of services held in our churches.

(Bros. Sibley and West.)

Since writing the above, I have received the ADVOCATE of Nov. 28, in which I find articles from Bro. Sibley and Dr. West. The only thing I see in Bro. Sibley's paper is a reminder of the boy who "whistles" to keep up his courage.

Those who know the modus operandi at Seashore know how it happened that Dr. West had "charge" on the day that Mrs. Chapin and other "unlicensed persons" had "control of the services held" at that place. There are three presiding elders who alternate "in charge of the services." That was Dr. West's day to take charge. He says he "called upon several to speak. Mrs. Chapin was among those called upon."

As against this, Mrs. Montgomery says she "was present when the speakers were chosen and the hours agreed upon."

It was known hours before the services began that Mrs. Chapin would speak, and Dr. West called her out just as he would any preacher who had been appointed to "control services" at that hour.

Bro. Ware knocks all the balance of the arguments out of the way, seeing he has been advised by parties now objecting to "unlicensed persons" having "control of services held in our churches," to do the very thing they now condemn. J. A. P.

*The Nashville Advocate reports Judge Estes, of Memphis, as "holding services" at different times and places, filling up the interim of his judicial duties in the exercise of these ministerial functions. Why does not somebody say to him: "Stop, sir, you have no license, and it is contrary to the law of the M. E. Church, South, for 'unlicensed persons to have control of services held in our pulpits, or other property belonging to said church!'"

Give the Law.

In a strong and timely article in the ADVOCATE, of Nov. 7, Dr. J. A. Parker asked that the law be indicated which forbids "unlicensed persons to occupy our pulpits, or lead the services held in our church." I thought his demand reasonable, and that those who hold that such a course is "contrary to law" would specifically indicate the law violated. I have patiently waited for two weeks to have the law pointed out; but, as yet, it has not been done. The law has not been given, for the good reason that there is no such law in our Discipline.

Dr. Parker did not ask for implications; he asked for law. Bro. Emery said: "It (the law) is in our Discipline." Why did he not quote it, or tell where it may be found in the Discipline? That would have given him a grand victory, and have hushed the controversy. I think his and Dr. Walker's implication theory is wide of the mark, and would, if correct, convert Methodism into a pretentious ecclesiasticism. It would put it in line with the Protestant Episcopal Church. The Episcopal Church, however, would have the advantage, in that it has plain legislation on this point. Unordained persons are plainly forbidden to use the pulpits of that church. If the M. E. Church, South, means by licensing some men to preach that all unlicensed men shall be denied the privilege of leading services in the church, why not make it plain and unmistakable, like the Episcopal Church, by enacting a plain statute to that effect? Let the church forbid "unlicensed persons to occupy our pulpits," and then it will be "contrary to law" to put them in the pulpits.

In my judgment, Dr. Walker's illustration is inapt. There is a manifest lack of analogy. The principles involved in licensing a man to preach are widely different from those involved in the election and induction into office of a governor or judge. The Doctor could certainly have found something more analogous. Why did he not use the teacher? Some men are licensed by the Examining Boards to teach school. Does that fact mean that none but those who are licensed shall teach? By no means. Many teach who have no license whatever.

In the town of Moss Point there is a public school taught by a woman who has been licensed to teach, having been found, on examination, to possess the required qualifications. Besides this public school, there are four teachers employed in private schools. Are these private teachers acting contrary to law? No. There is no law forbidding them to teach. The license of the woman teaching the public school simply establishes mutual obligations and claims between herself and the county. It in no way operates as a legal barrier to any other person's teaching. If anyone can teach school who chooses to do so, "why, then, license anyone?" Let Dr. Walker answer, and in answering this question he will shed much light on the matter of licensing persons to preach.

Methodism has never held a narrow and exclusive idea of preaching. With it this work, as instituted by Christ, is comprehensive and manifold. It "warns, proclaims, invites, teaches."

The Methodist Church, in all of its branches and throughout all of its history, has, in imitation of Christ and the apostolic church, employed its lay members in preaching the Word. The "seventy" sent out by Christ were not apostles; they were laymen. In the eighth chapter of Acts, St. Luke says that on account of a "great persecution against the church which was at Jerusalem, they were all scattered abroad throughout the regions of Judea and Samaria, except the apostles." The regular preachers remained in Jerusalem. There was no preaching then, was there? Let the fourth verse of the above-mentioned chapter answer: "They that were scattered abroad went everywhere preaching the Word." All the members of the church preached then. The Methodist Church has the very best authority for the use of "lay preaching."

St. Paul, immediately after his conversion, and long before his ordination, preached Christ with great power (Acts ix, 20). If Dr. Walker, Bro. Emery, and others, who have so rigidly construed the preaching license law, had been present in the synagogues of Damascus when Paul preached Christ, they would have raised objections to such irregular and illegal proceedings.

Mr. Wesley at first had exclusive views on the matter of preaching—views very similar to those held by these brethren. He was worried because Thomas Maxfield preached without definite authority. He was a layman; but when he heard Maxfield, his prejudice bowed before the force of truth, and he said: "It is the Lord; let him do what seemeth him good." From that time until now lay preaching has been one of the great means used for the spread of Methodism. I can not understand how any Methodist can afford to raise his voice or wield his pen in opposing a branch of service that is inseparably connected with the glorious history of his church.

The M. E. Church, South, has some notable lay preachers. I do not mean local preachers, but laymen who preach. Judge Estes, a prominent layman of Tennessee, spent his last Summer vacation in preaching and working to win souls for Christ. This has been mentioned with commendation by the editors of the Nashville and NEW ORLEANS Advocates.

Dr. J. H. Carlisle, a layman of South Carolina, and president of Wofford College, preaches frequently and with power. His ministerial brethren are glad to have him preach for them.

Dr. L. C. Garland, of precious memory, while chancellor of the Vanderbilt University, although a layman, was appointed by Bishop McTyeire to preach at the university on more occasions than one. His grand sermons were published in the Nashville Advocate without any kind of disguise. Is all this "contrary to law?" These laymen have had no thought of violating the law of the church in preaching without license. It seems that Bishop McTyeire was ignorant of the fact that he was doing "contrary to the law of the church" when he had Dr. Garland to preach at Vanderbilt University.

This rigid construction of the law is opposed to the spirit, genius and history of the Methodist Church. If these rigid and exclusive constructionists have the proper interpretation of the attitude of the Methodist Church to this question, it appears to me that we are against the practice of Christ and that of the apostolic church. I can not believe that that view is correct.

I have never been in sympathy with the "second-blessing" theory of sanctification, having believed it to be without scriptural support; but I do think it unwise and uncharitable to fight it under forced interpretations of the law. T. W. ADAMS.

In the Living Present.

Great Britain has been treated to a genuine sensation. It was published that not the Prince of Wales, but his sister, the widow of the late Emperor Frederick III., is the true heir-apparent to the throne of Albion. The English Constitution declares that the oldest child of the reigning potentate shall succeed to the throne. Said widow is that child.

In speaking of this country of ours, ex-President Harrison says that lynching is a dethronement of our constitutional king—the law. 'Tis the quintessence of tyranny. Mobocracy. There should be a medal awarded to each sheriff who not only abhors the crime of the vile wretch in his custody, but who will also risk his life in the defense of his prisoner.

Punctuality—well "namin' no names, no offense can be took"—punctuality is a rarity. If a preacher begins his meeting ten minutes after the appointed time, he robs the congregation of a hundred auditors of more than eighteen hours of precious time. If Napoleon Bonaparte had begun the battle of Waterloo half an hour sooner, he would have conquered. Blucher would have arrived too late. And you are habitually too late. Well, they speak of the departed people as "the late Mr. So and So."

Hezekiah Butterworth, a friend of the poet, assures that Longfellow's "Psalm of Life" was not designed for publication. The poet wrote it for his own inspiration and actuation. Months later he was requested by a popular magazine to furnish a poem for publication. The muses being unwilling to serve his purpose at the time, he hurriedly copied the Psalm and sent it to the publisher. The publication charmed the multitude. It has been translated in many languages.

Dr. Parkhurst says of the passion of money-getting, that it is a disease which feeds upon its own work of disintegration. Like the flame of the candle, which wins support from the wax it consumes. It is a mania, moral and mental. Conscience crushed, honesty locked out. Only beneficence could prevent the malady.

The bicycle craze continues. During the first ten months of the present year a half million of "wheels" have been sold. Manufacturers believe that during the coming year the demand will largely increase. In a few years, however, the craze would cease. Bicycles would sell as old iron. In the meantime vast capital had been destroyed.

Agnosticism is rampant. On the eve of unveiling a monument at Altdorf, Switzerland, to William Tell, appears a publication in which the author, apparently from history, denies the actual existence of said hero. It was poetry, and nothing more. Though the legend flattered Swiss patriotism, the pages of history are silent as to the fact. Well, it is not long ago when it was declared that Homer and Shakespeare were mythical persons. That the supposed product of their pen was simply a compilation by parties unknown.

ICH DIEN.

Who Is Authorized to Preach Among Us

This is the question I asked in my first article. I could find but one answer, to wit—those who have been licensed according to our Discipline and if such only, then none others are authorized. My esteemed friend, Bro. Parker, says he holds "that to be a preacher one must have a license," that is all I ask him, as a Methodist to hold.

Dr. West makes it clear that Mrs. Chapin, Hays and Lyons did not have charge of the meeting at Seashore; none of these ladies claimed to be preachers.

I don't "knock the divine call to the ministry on the head," because I am with the Discipline that candidates for license must be "elected"—elected three times, first by the society of which they are members, by the Quarterly Conference, and lastly by the District Conference. No matter how strongly they claim to have a divine call, all these voting bodies decide whether they believe the candidate is called, and he can't preach unless they decide favorably.

Bro. Parker says there is no evidence that Mrs. Snell proposed to do more at Palmer's Camp Ground "than talk, sing and pray." There is this much "evidence:" Mrs. Snell published over her own name, she would "be at the meeting, and LEAD it," though she knew the presiding elder said he would do it. In chivalrous courtesy to woman, I would yield the palm to none; but this is not a matter of courtesy, but of law. J. B. WALKER.

Correspondence.

Indian Mission.

I am now winding up my fourth year's work among the Indians. The following are some of the visible results of these four years' labor: One church built, worth about $200; forty-two adults and fourteen infants baptized; two Sunday schools and three public schools organized, and about $150 worth of literature distributed. In addition to this, we have bargained for 160 acres of land adjoining the church at $2 per acre. We have paid $157 of this debt. I hope and trust that some plan will be made for the cancelling of this debt, and the land secured to the church. In conclusion, my earnest prayer is that some man more suitable than myself can be found who will carry on this great work among the Choctaws.

W. W. CAMMACK.

READING THE APPOINTMENTS.

BY REV. ALFRED J. HOUGH.

[A considerable number of papers have, in the last two years, published an abridged edition of the following poem; but it is so good that we give the whole of it to our readers.—EDITOR.]

I was sitting in the wing-slip, close beside the altar rail,
When the Bishop came in softly, with a face serene, but pale;
And a silence indescribably pathetic in its power,
Such as might have reigned in heaven through that "space of half an hour," Rested on the whole assembly as the Bishop rose and said,
"All the business being finished, the appointments will be read."

Not as one who handles lightly merchandise of little worth,
But as dealing with the richest, most important things of earth,
In the fellowship of Jesus, with the failings of a man,
The good Bishop asked forbearance—he had done his best to plan
For the glory of his Master, trusting Him to guide his pen
Without prejudice or favor; and the preachers cried, "Amen!"

"Beulah Mountains—Henry Singer"—happy people, happy priest,
On the daintiest of the gospel through the changing year to feast;
Not a church trial ever vexed them, all their preachers stay three years,
And depart amid a tempest of the purest kind of tears.

"Troubled Waters—Nathan Peaceful"—how that saloted face grew red!
How the tears streamed through his fingers as he hald his swimming head!
But his wife stooped down and whispered—what sweet message did she bear?
For he turned with face transfigured as upon some mount of prayer.
Swift as thought in highest action, sorrow passed and gladness came
At some wondrous strain of music breaking forth from Jesus' name.

"Holy Rapture," said the Bishop, "I have left to be supplied."
And I thought—You couldn't fill it, Mr. Bishop, if you tried,
For an angel duly transferred to this Conference below
Wouldn't know one-half the wonders that those blessed people know;
They would note some strain of discord, though he sang as heaven sings,
And discover some shortcomings in the feathers of his wings.

"Grand Endeavor—Jonas Laggard." Blessed be the Lord I thought I;
They have put that Bro. Laggard where he has to work or die,
For the church at Grand Endeavor, with its energy and prayer,
Will transform him to a hero or just drive him to despair.
If his trumpet lacks the vigor of the gospel's charming sound,
They will start a big revival, and forget that he's around.

"Union Furnace—Solon Trimmer"—what a Bishop he must be!
They have got the kind of preacher that will suit them to a T:
Metho-Congo Baptist — Uni — in one nature, blithe and bland,
Fire or water, hell or heaven, always ready on demand.

"Consecration—Jacob Faithful"—hand in hand the two will go Through the years before them, bringing heavenly life to earth below.
"Grassland Corners—Peter Wholesoul"—but he lost his self-control,
Bottoned up his coat as if he felt a cold wind strike his soul,
Saw the dreary path before him, drew a deep breath, knit his brows,
Then concluded to be faithful to his ordination vows.

In the front pews sat the fathers, hair as white as driven snow—
As the Bishop read the appointments they had filled long years ago,
Tender memories rushed upon them, life revived in heart and brain,
Till it seemed that they could travel their old circuits o'er again.

"Happy Haven—Joseph Restful"—how the joy shone in his face
At the thought of being pastor for three years in such a place!
"Hard-as-Granite—Ephraim Smasher"—there the stewards sat in a row,
And they didn't want that Smasher, and he didn't want to go.

"Drowsy Hollow—Israel Wakim"—he is sent to sow and reap
Where the congregations gather in the interests of sleep.
As they sit on Sabbath morning in their softly cushioned pews,
They begin to make arrangements for their regular weekly snooze.
Through the prayer a dimness gathers over every mortal eye;
Through the reading of the Scriptures they begin to droop and sigh;
In the hymn before the sermon, with its music grand and sweet,
They sink down in deepest slumber and are nodding all around.
But I guess that Bro. Wakim, on the first bright Sabbath day,
When he preaches to that people, and is heard a mile away,
Will defy both saint and sinner on a breast to lay a chin,
Till he strikes the strain of "lastly," and I'd warrant him to win,
For by all who ever heard him it is confidently said,
If 'twere possible to mortal, he would wake the very dead.

Then a mist came o'er my vision as the Bishop still read on,
And the veil that hides the future, for a moment was withdrawn,
For I saw the world's Redeemer far above the Bishop stand,
On his head a crown of glory, and a long roll in his hand.

Round his throne a countless number of the ransomed, listening, press'd—
He was stationing his preachers in the city of the blest.
Some whose names were most familiar, known and reverenced by all,
Went down to the smaller mansions back against the city wall.

One who took the poorest churches, miles away from crowds and cars,
Went up to a throne of glory with a crown ablaze with stars.
How the angels sang to greet him! how the Master cried, "Well done!"
While the preacher hushed and wondered where he had such glory won.
Some whose speech on earth was simple, with no arguments but tears,
Nothing novel in their sermons for fastidious, itching ears,
Coldly welcomed by the churches, counted burdensome by all,
Went up to the royal mansion and were neighbors to St. Paul.

Soon the Master called a woman, only known here in the strife
By her quiet, gentle nature, though a famous preacher's wife,
Praised and blessed her for the harvests she had garnered in the sky;
But she meekly turned and answered, "'Twas my husband, Lord, not I."
"Yes," the Master said, "his talents were as stars that glow and shine;
But thy faith gave them their virtue, and the glory, child, is thine!"

Then a lame girl—I had known her—heard her name called with surprise;
There was trembling in her bosom, there was wonder in her eyes.
"I was nothing but a cripple; gleaned in no wide field, my King;
Only sat, a silent sufferer, neath the shadow of thy wing!"
"Thou hast been a mighty preacher, and the hearts of many stirred
To devotion by thy patience without uttering a word,"
Said the Master, and the maiden to his side with wonder press'd.
Christ was stationing his preachers in the city of the blest,
And the harp strings of the angels linked their names to sweetest praise
Whom the world had passed unnoticed in the blindness of its ways.

I was still intently gazing on the scene beyond the stars
When I saw the Conference leaving, and I started for the cars.

Facts on the Vital Question.

One would suppose from the present "teapot tempest" that a swarm of unlicensed laymen were crowding Methodist pulpits. The fact is, one unlicensed woman evangelist and two or three consecrated laymen are occasionally permitted to publicly teach the Scriptures to the people, heeding the command, "Let him that heareth say, Come." Is that sufficient cause for all this newspaper furore and manifestation of ecclesiastical displeasure? One uninformed would think that lay preaching is positively new in Methodism. Equally is it true that no one has taught that it is not necessary to license proper persons to the work of the ministry, to execute the laws of the church. But we do hold that a difference, clear and marked, exists between preaching the Word, expounding the law, instructing the people, and executing the government of the church. (See said distinction, paragraph 174, Discipline, 1894.)

Our distinguished brother and sweet-spirited friend, Dr. J. B. Walker, missed this distinction in his late contribution on this subject. In the ADVOCATE, of Nov. 14, he says: "Apply this reasoning of your correspondents to civil government, and see how awkwardly it would work. If no one can be governor of Louisiana without being elected, nor inducted into office until he is solemnly sworn to maintain the Constitution and faithfully execute laws, then, if any citizen of his own mind and will assumes the office and attempts to govern, would not every sensible man say he was without authority to act? And so of a judge. Can any man who chooses to do so assume the office of a judge and preside in our courts?"

Now, I am sure Dr. Walker has never attempted to perform the peculiar functions of a Louisiana executive, either governor or judge; but I am equally certain, and can testify from personal knowledge, that he has expounded—and very often, too—the civil code of Louisiana. He succeeded, too, with a wisdom, eloquence and grace that no governor or judge has ever done. I am willing to say further that no Louisiana judge, in his charge to the jury, was ever more explicit on the law of murder than was Dr. Walker in a sermon on said crime, preached in New Orleans and published in the ADVOCATE. To expound or teach the law is one thing; to execute it another. Dr. Walker, as an instructor of civil law, is unmolested; but let him attempt to act as governor, or judge, and he would find the officials buzzing about his ears.

Now, apply this to church government. Mrs. Snell, or any layman, as an instructor of the people, preacher of the Word—talker, if you please—is in her God-ordained position. Let her attempt to execute the law of the church without a license, and the case would be different. Shall our church, founded by John Wesley, refuse blood-bought privileges to its members, rights granted the subjects of civil governments? The Lord forbid! All precedent in Methodist history points to the granting of this right. It is no new thing for unlicensed laymen to conduct services in Methodist pulpits. Indeed, it is the general custom of Methodism, and has been from the beginning. Why this modern innovation?—viz., the effort to stop it. Early Methodist history is radiant with the pious labors of godly laymen and redolent with the prayers, songs and sermons of pure-hearted, holy women. Is not the history of the growth and development of our Methodism one of the wonders of the nineteenth century? Why discard the means which have aided to our present development? In our own day talented, consecrated laymen have efficiently served the people in our pulpits. Dr. Landon C. Garland, long-time chancellor of Vanderbilt University, a distinguished layman who was not even licensed to exhort, yet preached from the pulpits of Nashville annually a sermon to the Vanderbilt students, and that, too, by official appointment. The evangelistic services of Judge Estes, of Memphis, have been recorded and highly commended by Dr. E. E. Hoss, in Nashville Advocate. Commendations many have been heaped upon Dr. J. H. Carlyle, Miss Tucker, of Tennessee, and many others, because of their lay services.

And now, sir, I am no seer, nor the son of a seer, but I am willing to predict that the Methodist Church will never, by legal enactment, crush this time-honored custom so prolific of good to the church. The present official bearing toward the question is extremely mixed and puzzling quite. One official declared in my hearing that any pastor who allowed a woman to control a service in his church gave sufficient ground for complaint to be urged against him. The presiding elder of the Sassbore district says in the ADVOCATE, of Nov. 21, that the ground of his objection to Mrs. Snell is, not that she is a woman, but that she is unlicensed, and, therefore, unauthorized. Let me quote from that document: "It is unquestionably an offense against the entire constitution of the M. E. Church, South, for any preacher in charge, or presiding elder, to place unauthorized and irresponsible persons before the public to expound her doctrines, or to have control of her services."

Shades of Bishop McTyeire and Landon C. Garland! Such a course would inevitably dry up the source of our ministerial supply. It is not our custom to license any person until we are assured he has gifts, grace, and usefulness. How is this to be known unless the one applying be placed before the public to exercise his gifts? According to Bro. Powell, any pastor, who thus attempts to satisfy himself concerning the gifts of an unlicensed layman, has violated the entire constitution of Methodism. But hear Bro. Powell's view of the present state of the church: "It is a transparency that Methodism, by her patronizing preachers and people, has well-nigh reached the chaotic period in church government."

Methodism on the border-land of chaos because one pious woman and a few laymen are leading souls to Christ! Exceeds any alarmist our good Bro. Featherston has caricatured. This from a presiding elder, a leader of Mississippi Methodism! Vale.

Dr. Adam Clarke on Women Preachers.

It may be interesting and profitable for many just now to know the opinion of that holy man and profound scholar, Dr. Adam Clarke, on the question of the propriety of women preaching. The following extract taken from his Life (pp. 119 and 120) illustrates his position. In the light of some recent acts and utterances, the spirit and temper it breathes are particularly refreshing. Says the Life (written by himself): "In this circuit Mr. C. heard of some celebrated female preachers, and he entered it with considerable prejudice against this kind of ministry. In one part of the circuit, Thurlton, one of the most famous of these dwelt, Miss Mary Sewel. On his first coming to the house he questioned her concerning her call, etc. And she modestly answered by referring him to the places where she had preached in the circuit, and wished him to enquire among the people whether any good had been done. He did so on his next visit to these parts, and heard of members who had been awakened under her ministry, and with several of these he conversed, and found their experience in divine things scriptural and solid. He thought then, This is God's work, and if He choose to convert men by employing such means, who am I that I should criticise the ways of God! On the twenty-eighth of April, 1784, he had the opportunity of hearing Miss Sewel preach. Her text was Eph. ii, 8: 'By grace are ye saved through faith.' On which I find the following entry in his journal:

"'I have this morning heard Miss Sewel preach. She has a good talent for exhortation, and her words spring from a heart that evidently feels deep concern for the souls of the people, and, consequently, her hearers are interested and effected. I have formerly been no friend to female preaching; but my sentiments are a little altered. If God give to a holy woman a gift for exhortation and reproof, I see no reason why it should not be used. This woman's preaching has done much good; and fruits of it may be found copiously in different places in the circuit. I can, therefore, adopt the saying of a shrewd man, who, having heard her preach, and being asked his opinion of it, answered: "An ass reproved Balaam, and a cock reproved Peter, and why may not a woman reprove sin!"

"'Such women should be patterns of all piety, of unblamable conversation, correct and useful in their families, and furnished to every good work. This certainly is the character of Miss Sewel; may she ever maintain it.'"

"And she did maintain it: but she died soon after, as she had lived, in the faith and consolations of the gospel.

"Shortly after this he had the opportunity of hearing another of these female preachers, Mrs. Proudfoot. She spoke from Exodus iii, 3: 'And the bush was not burnt.' Of her he remarks: 'She spoke several pertinent things, which tended both to conviction and consolation, and seems to possess genuine piety. If the Lord choose to work in this way, shall my eye be evil because He is good? God forbid! Rather let me extol that God, who, by contemptible instruments, and the foolishness of preaching, saves those who believe in Jesus. Thou, Lord, chooseest to confound the wisdom of the world by foolishness, and its strength by weakness, that no soul may glory in thy presence, and that the excellency of the power may be seen to belong to thee alone. Had not this been the case, surely I had never been raised up to call sinners to repentance.'"

Ignorance Spiritual

It was this ignorance that drew out from the Spirit of God that thundering condemnation: "Men love darkness rather than light." It was this spiritual ignorance that caused the Savior to say, "that the blind must necessarily fall into the ditch." The inference from this teaching indicates that to be ignorant of the highest possible attainments in religious knowledge and experience in divine things is sad indeed. But it is sadder still, and bordering on the danger line, to decry these attainments, or the religious manner of obtaining them. But strange things have sprung into existence in the closing out of the nineteenth century that seem almost incredible. I am told that knowledge, a superior knowledge, with a richer and broader experience into divine things that lift men and women into a higher attitude of religious thought and a wider range of real wisdom, makes them who possess it and profess it sometimes the target of envy, and even ridicule. But this chimes in exactly with human nature, for it has so happened in all the past that when a man who sees and hears another more knowing than himself, and possessing a deeper insight into the constitution and truth of things, he comes to look upon that man as casting discredit upon his own knowledge and experience, and he lets fly the shaft. Parthian arrows darken the sky.

Just let a man venture out of the old beaten road, with its deep ruts, and seek to enlarge the boundaries of philosophy or religious experience, and what a beating of "tom-toms," and what a display of tragical learning and the outcry of stilted wisdom is hurled at his head. Dreadful charges are mustered into line, with specific instructions and specifications, and are thundered against them from pen and pulpit. These things ought not so to be. And there seems to be no other way of quieting the uproar but to plead the bankrupt law of ignorance, or innocence, and then fall back upon that unquestioned, eternal truth and doctrine: "It is life eternal to know God, and whom he has sent, his Son Christ Jesus." And then make no inquiry about the manner of obtaining this knowledge, or the degrees of this knowledge, to which we might attain in getting this life eternal. But one great comfort we have: We are assured that God, the Author of all true knowledge and wisdom, promises to give freely to all who ask him, "above all that we can ask or think," for we are only in the a, b, c's of God's revealed truths. J. W. HARMON.

"Pile On."

MR. EDITOR: I am persuaded that no one gets more genuine pleasure out of his school-boy reminiscences than I. The above caption will suggest to many of your readers, no doubt, a sport familiar to all American children. Even yet my mind recalls with great vividness the hurly-burly rough and tumble of the "pile on" game in the old country school-yard. Usually the victim at our school was a large, overgrown boy, familiarly known as "Bill." His object in coming to school was evidently to enjoy the recess hours, for he never knew anything about his lessons. A sound thrashing was always preferred to a "stay-in at recess," and Bill usually got the former. When the game of town ball shinny, marbles or tops grew a little dull, the monotony was broken by a pounce upon Bill. Neither did he object to this, for his great boast was in his strength, and nothing gave him more pleasure than to show us little fellows how easily he could toss us off. I have seen him deliberately tie down and cry, "Pile on," and on we piled, two, three, six, ten deep, and, Samson-like, Bill would shake himself and toss us off as so many chips.

Now, Mr. Editor, all of my memories of the game have been quickened and sharpened lately as I have read article after article in your paper; articles from all sources, from D. D.'s, up or down, criticising the actions of the presiding elder of the Seashore vs. Mrs. Snell.

In his brief article, which appears in your issue of this week, Elder Powell has shaken himself, and so far as to vindicating his actions, has proven himself the "big Bill" in the tussle.

Restfulness.

Restfulness is an attribute of the best sort of religion. In a certain sanitarium, not long since, we noticed, on an invalid's door in the early afternoon, a printed card which said, "Resting. Please do not knock." At once the thought came, there are some faces which bear upon them, very plainly stamped by long years of quiet trust, the words, "Resting so securely that you may knock as loud as you please without disturbing." Angry words, like stones, may dash against this door, but the inward peace abides unbroken. The furious rain of affliction may beat upon the panel, but still the repose is not destroyed. The rest remaineth in spite of all that man or devils can do. From out the tumult of the storm, where the whirl of clashing wills and the contention of divergent thoughts fill the air with discord, the steadfast testimony stands: "None of these things move me." Souls like these, which are "ever bright as noon," and "calm as summer evenings be," diffuse about them an atmosphere of heaven, and bear loud witness, even when no syllable is spoken, to the overwhelming reality of divine grace.

"The day glides sweetly o'er their heads,
Made up of innocence and love;
And soft and silent as the shades
Their nightly minutes gently move."

Nor is there any lack of efficiency and vigor in such spirits, as is sometimes calumniously charged. At least there need not be. When the serenity is of grace rather than nature, or of principle rather than mere passive acquiescence, the efficiency is doubled instead of diminished. With no rattle and clatter of machinery, and without the waste or frustration of friction, swiftly, noiselessly, the work is done, with so little apparent effort that it seems to do itself. This is the perfection of activity combined with the perfection of peace. The church needs more Christians of this ideal sort.—Zion's Herald.

But on the Sabbath I watch the earliest sunshine, and fancy a holier brightness marks the day when there shall be no buzz of voices on the exchange, nor traffic in the shops, nor crowd nor business anywhere but at church. Many have fancied so. For my own part, whether I see it scattered down among tangled woods, or beaming broad across the fields, or hemmed in between brick buildings, or tracing out the figure of the casement on my chamber floor, still I recognize the Sabbath sunshine. And ever let me recognize it. Some illusions—and this among them — are the shadows of great truths. Doubts may flit around me, or seem to close their evil wings and settle down, but so long as I imagine that the earth is hallowed and the light of heaven retains its sanctity on the Sabbath — while that blessed sunshine lives within me—never can my soul have lost the instinct of its faith. If it has gone astray, it will return again.—Nathaniel Hawthorne.

In carrying on the work of saving the city, consecrated hearts, willing hands and open purses are the prime prerequisites of success. When the baptism of the Spirit rests upon the church, then she will go forth as an army with banners, strong in the Lord and in the power of his might.

There must be an absolute dependence upon the Holy Spirit for guidance and power. Wisdom and strength and love come with his indwelling. It is wonderful what transformations his presence effects. He gives power to the faint, and to them that have no might he increaseth strength. He gives mellowness to the tone, pith and point to the message, and thus access to the hearts of men.—Buffalo Christian Advocate.

Satan will never disturb his vassals; but when we have broke his prison in conversion, then he pursues us with violent temptations. Indeed, in conversion grace is so weak and temptations are so strong that one would wonder how the young convert escapes with his life. Satan hath a spite at the new creature.—T. Watson.

Help Yourself.

Fight your own battles. Hoe your own row. Ask no favors of anyone, and you'll succeed five thousand times better than one who is always beseeching some one's patronage. No one will ever help you as you help yourself, because no one will be so heartily interested in your affairs. The first step will not be such a long one perhaps; but, carrying your own way up the mountain, you make each one lead to another, and stand firm in that while you chop another out. Men who have made fortunes are not those who had $5,000 given them to start with, but started fair with a well-earned dollar or two. Men who have by their own exertions acquired fame have not been thrust into popularity by puff, begged or paid for, or given on friendly spirit. They have outstretched their hands and touched the public heart. Men who win love to do their own wooing, and I never knew a man to fail as signally as one who had induced his affectionate grandmama to speak a good word for him. Whether you work for fame, for love, for money, or for anything else, work with your hands, heart, and brain. Say, "I will," and some day you will conquer. Never let any man have it to say, "I have dragged you up." Too many friends hurt a man more than none at all.—Grace Greenwood.

We envy neither the man nor the woman who can not speak to a fellow-creature out of their own circle or to anybody without the formality of an introduction. There is no computing the amount of profit as well as pleasure such persons lose by hedging themselves in with this stupid fence of fastidiousness. We have always found more of this feeling among persons who were more touchy on their social position than among those self-respecting persons who thought nothing about it. A great deal of intelligence is floating round the world without being labeled, and those men or women who have the good sense to recognize this fact and act upon it not only are educating themselves, but conferring that pleasure which we are bound by the common ties of humanity to exchange with one another. It seems to us that it is only the snob and pretender who take a different view of this question.—New York Ledger.

If you would increase your happiness and prolong your life, forget your neighbor's faults. Forget all the slander you have ever heard. Forget the temptations. Forget the fault-finding, and give a little thought to the cause which provoked it. Forget the peculiarities of your friends, and only remember the good points which make you fond of them. Forget all personal quarrels or histories you may have heard by accident, and which, if repeated, would seem a thousand times worse than they are. Blot out, as far as possible, all the disagreeables of life; they will come, but they will only grow larger when you remember them, and the constant thought of the acts of meanness, or, worse still, malice, would only tend to make you more familiar with them. Obliterate everything disagreeable from yesterday, start out with a clean sheet for to-day, and write upon it for sweet memory's sake only those things which are lovely and lovable.—Selected.

The baptism with the Holy Ghost not only annihilates all uncleanness from the soul, but simultaneously implants holiness within it. It takes away the heart of stone and gives a heart of flesh:

"A heart in every thought renewed,
And full of love divine;
Perfect and right and pure and good,
A copy, Lord, of thine."

The renewing of the Holy Ghost brings the new man of the heart, begotten of the Spirit, unto a perfect man, even the stature of the fullness of Christ. It so transforms the temper, tone, and feelings of the soul that it becomes possessed of a "new spirit"—spirit of sweetness, gentleness, Christliness, hitherto unknown.—S. A. Keen, in Divine Life.

Reflect that it is only the fervent and diligent soul that is prepared for all duty and all events; that it is greater toil to resist evil habits and violent passion than to sweat at the hardest bodily labor; that he who is not careful to resist and subdue small sins will insensibly fall into greater, and that thou shalt always have joy in the evening, if thou has spent the day well. — Thomas a Kempis.

There is no single channel through which such depths of misery flow over the human race as the liquor traffic. No ravages of disease, no devastation of nations, no kinds of vice or crime work so much woe as this.—Julius H. Seelye, D. D.

Improve what you have, however little, and more shall be given. That thin thread of love, if you will not neglect it, shall lift even you up to God and glory. "Who hath despised the day of small things?"—Newman Hall.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. Jno. F. Foster, Dalhi, La., Dec. 21: "On last Tuesday we had a prohibition election in our parish (Richland) and carried it dry by a majority of 222—1,250 votes being in all—this being next to the highest ever cast in parish. When I began the fight I received at first but little encouragement, but by work people were aroused and we won. If it had not have been for the primaries on last Tuesday week and its effect we could have won by an overwhelming majority. Reams, of our Conference, was a good worker. Much is due the ladies and the young men for this success. Every ward went dry except one, and that wet by only a small majority, i. e., 19."

Rev. Jno. D. Crymes, Rolling Fork, Miss., Nov. 22: "When I consider what God has wrought in the Rolling Fork and Cary charge during the year, I feel like getting down in the very dust of humility. There have been great victories at Bethal, Murphey's Bayou, Anguilla. And now at Rolling Fork we are in the midst of the third great triumph over the evil one. Rev. C. H. Ellis and Bro. E. B. Baker, of Natchez, have now been laboring with us eleven days. Nearly all the young ladies and girls are becoming converted, and a number of the prominent citizens converted and sanctified, among them a leading physician and his wife. The Christian people are consumed with zeal for the cause of Christ; the religious fervor and faith is at such a pitch that it is no surprise when anybody is converted. When I think about what could be done in a few months if all our brethren of the Mississippi Conference were baptized with the Holy Ghost, my spirit is stirred within me."

At the Start!

Ministers, as a rule, are very much creatures of circumstance. They are made or marred, their career is blocked or furthered, by things which appear to be simple. Much depends upon the beginning, upon the atmosphere thrown around a man as he alights from the railway train, as he crosses the threshold of the house which is to be his home, as he enters the vestry before service on the first Sunday morning. If he is made to feel that, whether invited to the circuit or not, he is heartily welcome and may count upon staunch support and thoughtful friendship and genial treatment, he will spring to his work with avidity, will preach ten times better than he would have done otherwise, and at the very beginning will set an example; and so the work of God for many a day to come will gain through the simple kindness and hearty good-will of those fateful first days when, to all intents and purposes, the minister and his family were wholly in the hands of the circuit stewards and their families. If they only knew it, the man and women and children who constitute the first rim in the great circle of Methodist lay life, have enormous power either for good or for evil. They may very often double a man's meanness at a stroke and start him on a career resulting in untold blessing to their own circuit and to circuits in distant days.—The Methodist Recorder, London.

WHENEVER I see Hood's Sarsaparilla now I want to bow and say 'Thank You' I was badly affected with Eczema and Scrofula Sores, almost covering one side of my face, nearly to the top of my head. Running sores discharged from both ears. My eyes were very bad, the eyelids so sore it was painful opening or closing them. For nearly a year I was deaf. I went to the hospital and had an operation performed for the removal of a cataract from one eye. One day my sister brought me

HEED THE WARNING.

Most everyone will remember how the Keely Bi-chloride of Gold, for the cure of drunkards, was imitated by frauds all over the country. So it is now with the Oil Cure for Cancer. Many imitators are advertising to cure with oils, with the hope of making money from the reputation our Oils have made. We send a book free, which tells all about our discovery and price of Oils. HIGH GATE, Mo., Sept. 3, 1895.

Dr. D. M. Bye, Indianapolis, Ind.:

DEAR SIR AND BRO.—The place where the cancer came out on my face is healed up nicely, and there has been quite a number of people that have come to see me and look at the place, and I am doing all I can for you. I am so thankful to God and to you for the cure of my cancer that I can not express my feeling as I wish; but God knows my heart, and may God's blessing rest on you and family, and may you live long to cure cancers and other diseases, and if I never see you on earth I hope to meet you in heaven. Your sister in Christ,

LOUEASY NEEPER.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Sept. 23, 1895.

Dr. D. M. Bye, Indianapolis, Ind.:

KIND SIR—I am now very happy that I can say to you that my face is entirely healed; it commenced healing soon after I wrote you last. I feel very grateful that I learned of your Combination Oil Cure. Now, in regard to my rectal trouble; I used the last of the Oils you sent for rectal trouble Aug 19th, and I feel that what I did use helped me—and perhaps cured me, or nearly so, as I have not had any discharge of pus since. Do you think I should have further treatment for that trouble? If so, let me know. Yours respectfully,

MRS. WILSON HIBBARD.
66 Park Place.

MARSHFIELD, MASS., OCT. 3, 1895.

DEAR DOCTOR—The cancer on my face, I am very thankful to write, has healed. It healed very slow, but very nicely. I should have written to you sooner. Very gratefully,

MRS. JNO. MAGOWN.

TOO LATE.

MARIANNA, FLA., March 15, 1895.

DEAR DOCTOR—Since I heard from you I have parted with the nearest and dearest friend on earth—my mother. I feel satisfied you did all you could; but, alas, it was too late. She has gone to a home with her God, free from all this world of trouble. Her last request was that I write to you, thanking you for the ease she received while life lasted. Oh, if we only had known of your Oil sooner, I feel sure to-day I would have had a mother. I think it one of the greatest medicines on earth, and do truly hope that every other sufferer may get it before it is too late.

Many thanks for the large portion of Oil you sent; it did me good to have plenty to use, even when I knew death was near. May God bless you shall ever be my prayer.

Yours in grief,

ANNIE VICKERY.

The Church Paper.

"Tell it not in Gath, publish it not in the streets of Askelon," that some in the noble army of the itinerants think it beneath their dignity to become solicitors for a newspaper. Now, the men who have scored one great success after another in the churches to which they have been sent never dream of entertaining any such nonsensical notion. On the contrary, they have a distinct and intelligent conviction that a good religious journal is the best helper they can get in all their work, and they are not satisfied till they have introduced it just as far as they possibly can. The late Dr. J. O. Peck, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was a peerless pastor. He was also a notable revivalist. Wherever he went his labors were crowned with God's approval in the conversion and edification of souls. Yet this wise man was in the habit of sowing down the ground thick with the New York Christian Advocate. At one time he procured for it more than two hundred and fifty new subscribers from a single congregation. What other thing could he have done that would have had such a tendency to solidify the fruits of his ministerial toil? We are acquainted with some capital pastors in our own church who act upon the same belief. The truth is that the day in which a church paper begins to make its weekly visits into any family is likely to mark an epoch there. Such a family, in all probability, will neither backslide to the world nor be proselytized into another communion.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

Won't everybody read this, please, from Press and Printer: "Every column in a paper contains from ten or twenty-two thousand distinct pieces of metal, the displacement of one of which would cause a blunder or a typographical error. And yet some people think it strange when they can find an error in the paper. When they see a word with a wrong letter in it or a misplaced one they are sure they could have spelled the word right, and they are happy for a whole day and go around telling how the editor made a mistake."

Education in America.

BY M. A. WELLS.

With regard to the educational status of the United States among the civilized nations of the earth the following facts are of interest:

The school age in England, including Wales, covers a period of twelve years. Her population exceeds twenty-five millions of people, three and one-half millions of whom are kept in school.

France has a total population of nearly thirty-seven millions, with a school population of nearly six and one-half millions, of which it is estimated that only four and one-half millions are in actual attendance at school. The school age is from six to thirteen years of age.

The German peoples somewhat exceed fifty millions of population, with a school population of some ten millions, of which only about eight millions are in actual attendance. The school age is from six to fourteen years.

Both Spain and Italy fall lower in the scale than France or Germany.

The United States of America, with a total population of fifty millions, is estimated to have a school population of nearly fifteen millions, of which number nine and one-half millions are in actual school attendance. The school age varies in different States, but covers an average of fourteen and one-half years, which is a much longer school period than that of any other nation. This fact also accounts for the greater proportion of school population to the total population as compared with other countries.

Thus it is seen that we keep nineteen per cent. of our total population in school, while the three best-educated nations of Europe, viz.: England, France and Germany, keep respectively fourteen, twelve and sixteen per cent. of their entire population in school. Our national education thus exceeds the best in Europe by about three per cent.

I am aware that such a showing could not be made if the comparison had been drawn between the United States and some of the smaller States of Europe, but it has been my purpose to compare our people only with nations which equal or approximate our own somewhat in political importance.—Northern Christian Advocate.

Stimulates Digestion.
Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

It acts directly on the food, thus assisting the stomach, and also stimulates the secretion of the digestive fluids, putting the stomach in an active, healthy condition.

"'I die poor,' said Bishop McTyeire. This reminds us of an incident which illustrates one side of this great man's character. Some years ago Col. J. W. Paniett, of Knoxville, while walking through one of the back streets of Nashville, saw Bishop McTyeire alight from his buggy and enter an humble cottage with a basket on his arm. Anxious to know what this meant, Col. Paniett waited in the street until the Bishop returned to his buggy. 'What are you doing here, Bishop?' 'This is a poor family from Virginia—the man is a carpenter, and is sick—he is a Baptist. I come here every day to bring them something to eat.' Thus the good Bishop went about ministering to the lowly in a quiet, unostentatious way."—Holston Methodist.

Our Premium Offer.

Dr. W. C. Black:

DEAR SIR: I am charmed with my Holman Bible, and know it will bring me pleasure many days. Accept my thanks for your promptness.

Yours, etc., S. W. HARTWELL.
Water Valley, Miss.

The Holman Bible for $1.65.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.65 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to Dec., '96. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2.45 instead of $1.65. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2.45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We are now prepared to fill orders for Bibles (both kinds) promptly.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

In answering advertisements please mention the ADVOCATE for some women—hard work for others. Perhaps, for most women, more or less of both. Fix it to suit yourself. More play and less work—that's when you wash and clean with Pearline. More work and less play—that's when you wash with soap in the old back-breaking way.

PEARLINE

"Play"

Better work, too, with Pearline. Little or none of the rubbing that wears things out. It's something to think about whether you do your own work, or have it done.

Easier, quicker, better, cheaper—and absolutely safe. Facts about Pearline known by millions of women.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, do the honest thing—send it back.

THE Electropoise

is a little instrument, weighing less than a pound, which when attached to the body under proper conditions, causes the whole system to absorb

OXYGEN—PURE OXYGEN
from the atmosphere. It introduces this potent, curative agent, oxygen, into the remotest and most recondite parts. Oxygen purifies the blood, it

VITALIZES EVERY ORGAN,
it makes war on disease, by destroying its producing cause. It eliminates the morbid and noxious elements that act injuriously or that

LOWER VITALITY.
It neutralizes or expels all poisons, either of malaria, contagion, or from the effects of powerful drugs. With the body plentifully and freely oxygenized blood, it is impossible for disease to exist, because the conditions that made it possible have been removed—burnt out.

SUPPLIED WITH OXYGEN

NOT A SURE CURE,
of course not; but, by its new method of applying oxygen, the Electropoise has often effected cures of chronic cases that were pronounced "incurable."

STRICKEN WITH PARALYSIS.

The following, which appeared in the Western Christian Advocate of May 22, 1895, has been inclosed to me, with requests from several sufferers from paralysis for particular information as to the "remedial" treatment quickly and effectually employed in the case referred to.

Similar inquiries came after notices in other papers:

[From the Western Christian Advocate.]

Dr. W. H. DePuy, on April 30, while preparing to leave the New York Christian Advocate office at the close of office hours, was suddenly stricken with paralysis, the stroke involving the right side. Fortunately several good friends among his associates at the publishing house were at hand, and remedial help was quickly obtained, and proved so effectual that circulation was speedily restored and he was able to be removed to his uptown home. Failing to take the immediate rest which the serious nature of the attack required, after a few days he was again prostrated with paroxysms of numbness in the hand and arm, and since that time has been confined to his room. He is now steadily improving, and he expects, after a few weeks of further rest, to resume work on some partially completed books upon which he has long been engaged.

To these inquirers this brief response is cheerfully given: As soon as the nature of the attack was recognized, and while my friends were engaged in rubbing the side affected another kindly, at my request, hastily called Mr. J. E. Du Bois, of the Electropoise office, and the latter, whose office was near by, quickly responded, and applied the Electropoise first to the left wrist, and a little later to the right ankle. No drug or other medicine of any kind was used. I continued the application of the instrument during the night, and the next morning returned to the office feeling no other inconvenience from the attack except that of being much weakened in the stricken side. In the afternoon I attended a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Sunday School Union, of which I am a member. I now believe there would have been no early after effects if I had followed the advice of my more prudent friends and professional attendant. Later during the occasional and severe attacks, the Electropoise was applied at or near the stricken parts of the body with speedy and unfailing relief, until they ceased to return. W. H. DEPUY.

Physicians, Scientists
and all thinking people are requested to thoroughly investigate the theory of and results that attend the use of the Electropoise.

Statesmen, Jurists,
clergymen, scientists, physicians and intelligent members of all classes of society use and endorse the Electropoise. In our illustrated booklet

Their Certificates
are given, together with other information about the Electropoise; its price, method of applying, ease and convenience of application,

Absence of Shock
or other sensation except increase of vigor, and its total difference from the "electrical appliances" commonly known. This booklet will be to any interested applicant. Write for one and learn more of this new home remedy for disease without medicine.

Mailed Free

North Mississippi Conference.

We had the pleasure of attending the recent session of the North Mississippi Conference, at Water Valley. Our time being occupied with business connected with the publishing department, we were so fortunate as to secure the services of "Gilderoy" to write up the proceedings. The brethren gave us a royal welcome and "did the nice thing" by us in every way. We were sorry to leave before the close of the session, but found it necessary to do so. We have seen very few places where the Conference sessions and all the services were so largely attended as at Water Valley. Very few churches in Mississippi can boast of as good a choir as that which Dr. Price has been training for the last four years.

Bishop Fitzgerald's presidency gave great satisfaction. The session was remarkably harmonious. There was no acrimonious debate and no friction anywhere unless it was in the cabinet. Not having attended the sessions of that august body, we can not say what took place there.

We are glad to be able to present the report of the Committee on Books and Periodicals, which will be found on this page.

We were especially delighted with the action of the Conference in regard to the Orphans' Home. When the report was adopted, a brother made a proposition that a collection be taken, asking for five hundred dollars. The sum of eleven hundred and twenty-five dollars was raised in a very few minutes. (We confidently expect the Mississippi Conference to cover that, and go far beyond it.) We were hospitably and elegantly entertained in the home of Mr. Watkins, a good Presbyterian brother, to whom and to his accomplished wife we are indebted for many courtesies. We were exceedingly fortunate in having as our room-mate the genial pastor of Aberdeen station, Bro. Amos Kendall, whose companionship was delightful.

Bishop Fitzgerald Will Preside.

Bishop Fitzgerald will preside at the session of the Mississippi Conference, this week, in lieu of Bishop Hendrix, who has not returned from the Orient. While the Conference would have given Bishop Hendrix a royal welcome, they will be no less delighted with Bishop Fitzgerald. His natural geniality and his admirable Christian spirit will endear him to the brethren so that when the Conference is over it will be felt that his visit has been a benediction.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

FIRST DAY.

The twenty-fifth session of the North Mississippi Conference convened in Water Valley, Miss., on Nov. 27, with Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald in the chair. The opening religious exercises were led by the Bishop. A large majority of the preachers and lay delegates answered to their names. Rev. J. S. Oakley, Rev. R. M. Evans and Rev. J. C. Park were elected secretaries.

The presiding elders nominated and the Conference elected the members of the usual committees.

Communications from the Board of Missions, the Book Agents, the Sunday-school Secretary, the trustees of Malone Female College, the Grenada Collegiate Institute and Millsaps Collegiate Institute and Millsaps College were read and referred to the proper Committees and Boards.

H. S. Spraggins, C. A. Spraggins, W. G. Burks, J. M. Moore, T. H. Dorsey were elected to deacon's orders and to admission into full connection.

Deacons of one year: J. T. Murrah, L. M. Broyles, S. B. Myers, C. H. Pitman and W. W. Mitchell.

A resolution was adopted fixing Saturday night for the Anniversary of the twenty-fifth session of the North Mississippi Conference, and requesting Rev. Amos Kendall to preach on that occasion. Bishop Fitzgerald to preach a Thanksgiving sermon to-morrow at eleven A. M.

SECOND DAY.

Conference met at 8:30 A. M. Rev. K. A. Jones in the chair. Religious exercises conducted by Rev. J. C. Lowe. The Bishop took the chair. The roll was called, and a few who were not present on yesterday answered to their names.

The minutes of yesterday's session read and approved.

Perry E. Duncan and J. M. Brantley were examined, passed and elected to deacon's orders.

S. A. Brown, G. A. Cline, J. W. Raper, Jno. N. Butler, Jackson J. Garner, Charles B. Moss and James A. Wilson were admitted on trial in the traveling connection.

Two questions of law submitted to Bishop Fitzgerald, in regard to recommendations for license and admission on trial from Quarterly Conferences in one district to the District Conference of another district, were decided in the negative. The Bishops publish these decisions in their own way and time.

Rev. C. N. Terry, J. W. Bates, J. M. Hampton, W. R. Rainey, W. S. Harrison, S. B. Carson and S. A. Ellis were recommended for the superannuated relation.

Rev. W. A. Dollar was recommended for the supernumerary relation.

Announcements were made, and Conference took recess to attend the Thanksgiving service.

THIRD DAY.

The Conference was opened with prayer by Rev. J. A. Randolph. The Bishop in the chair. The minutes read and approved.

Wm. A. Clark was passed to the class of the fourth year. J. H. Rogers was continued in the class of the third year. R. A. Meek was passed to the class of the fourth year.

H. C. Morehead, R. A. Burroughs, J. B. Stone, J. H. Mitchell, T. C. Weir, S. M. Thames, H. R. Tucker, J. D. Cameron and J. A. Randolph, elders, characters examined and passed.

Rev. E. S. Lewis passed to class of the fourth year.

Rev. R. W. Bailey, of the Mississippi Conference, was introduced to the body.

The report of the Joint Commission on Orphans' Home reported, and the report was read, discussed and adopted.

Report No. 1 of the Committee on Books and Periodicals, in reference to the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, most heartily approving the business management and the editorial conduct of the paper, was adopted. Pending the consideration of this report, Dr. Black, the editor, addressed the Conference in this interest.

The Conference adjourned with the benediction.

The following report was adopted without a dissenting vote:

BOOKS AND PERIODICALS—REPORT NO. 1.

Your Committee on Books and Periodicals beg leave to make the following report:

We are gratified to learn from Rev. W. C. Black, D. D., editor and publisher of our Conference organ, the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, that this paper is now on a solid financial basis, and that not one dollar of indebtedness has been incurred in its management since the present publisher took charge of it. It is matter of sincere gratitude also to learn through Dr. Black that arrangements are being made by which, at no distant day, the old debt, which has stood against the paper for a number of years, will be liquidated, new type for the first and second pages provided, and the general mechanical make-up of the paper improved. The plant now occupied is a four-story building, at 512 Camp street, owned by the Louisiana Conference, and used by the ADVOCATE free of charge. Great credit is due the publisher, Dr. Black, for the immense amount of work performed by him in that capacity, in addition to editorial work, in order to keep the paper free of debt. As to the editorial management, your committee begs leave to say that its selections are always of a high order, the editorial department filled with strong, vigorous utterances, the general contents pure and elevating, and, what is of vast importance to us, as a people, the paper is always loyal to the doctrines and discipline of the church it represents. The NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE we regard as a fixture, and a very necessary one, in the midst of the people by whom it is now patronized—a necessary factor in the workings of Protestant Christianity, in view of the vast non-Protestant and anti-Protestant element by which it is surrounded. Its noble and honored history is closely interwoven with that of our great church for the past fifty years in the States of Louisiana and Mississippi, and indispensable to the future growth and defense of the same. We regard ourselves, as a Conference, by these ties, and in honor bound to its support, and feel that we can not consistently or safely entertain propositions coming from other quarters that look to the discontinuance or withdrawal of our support of said paper; but, on the other hand, we feel ourselves bound to increase and more fully unite our efforts for a substantial enlargement of our patronage of it.

In conclusion, we recommend, not as a mere form of words, but as full of meaning, the adoption of the following resolutions:

1. That we will always warmly welcome to our sessions the present faithful and hard-working publisher and editor of our own Conference organ, Rev. W. C. Black, D. D.

2. That, as preachers and laymen of the North Mississippi Conference, we feel it obligatory upon us to go to work at once in earnest for a large increase of subscribers within our bounds.

We also recommend the reappointment of W. T. J. Sullivan, T. C. Wier and J. D. Cameron as members of the Publishing Committee for the North Mississippi Conference.

Respectfully submitted.

T. CAMERON, Chairman.

FOURTH DAY.

Conference met at the appointed time, with Rev. K. A. Jones in the chair. Religious exercises conducted by Rev. A. P. Sage. The Bishop came in and took the chair.

The minutes read and approved.

Rev. W. D. Wendall, Jackson Garner and R. E. Duke, local preachers, were elected to deacon's orders.

T. B. Clifford, W. D. Burroughs, W. L. Graves, J. M. Deavenport, W. A. Bowling, L. M. Lipscomb and J. A. Poe were elected traveling elders.

W. F. Rogers character passed and he was admitted into full connection.

W. L. Anderson, B. P. Patterson, H. E. Estes, J. R. Countess and A. B. Cox continued on trial. T. B. Hargrove, G. H. Lipscomb, W. S. Lagrone, T. W. Dye, J. Porter, A. J. Jones, O. L. Savage, R. O. Brown, C. W. Perkins, W. M. Young, K. M. Harrison, T. M. Geddie, T. W. Lewis, W. J. O'Bryant, J. W. Price, R. M. Evans, J. E. Thomas, C. C. Grisham, J. M. Huggins, J. M. Massey, J. W. Luter, E. H. Rook, A. J. Foster, J. W. Malone and W. M. McIntosh passed in examination of character.

A resolution committing the Conference to continue preaching to the colored people in our midst in the future, as in the past, was adopted.

Here Bishop Isaac Lane addressed the Conference in the interest of the work among the colored people.

The class for admission into full connection came to the bar of the Conference to answer the disciplinary questions. The Bishop's address to this class was wise, tender, instructive and full of the Spirit of God.

The report of the Committee on the Spiritual Interests of the Church was read and adopted, and by resolution ordered published in the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.

Conference adjourned to meet at 3 P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Conference met at 3 P. M., with the Bishop in the chair. Religious exercises conducted by Rev. R. M. Davis. Minutes of the morning session read and approved.

One of our scholarly friends was asked the other day how long the present system of attacking the validity of the traditional view of the origin and authority of the Old Testament would last. He does not tell us what answer he gave. But we can supply one from the lips of a man who is universally recognized as the possessor of much learning on this subject, Prof. Sayce. He has recently said in print, "The end of the nineteenth century is witnessing the ebb of a wave of historical scepticism which began to flow more than a century ago. It has spared nothing, sacred or otherwise, and in its progress has transformed the history of the past into a nebulous mist. But the ebb had already set in before its tendencies and results had made themselves felt beyond a limited circle of scholars."—Exchange.

MUL-EN-OL is the most modern remedy for pain, and is free from all objectionable features of the old-time remedies. MUL-EN-OL tastes good, smells good, and does good. It soothes and cools, instead of irritating. It instantly quiets the pain, and effects a permanent cure.

MUL-EN-OL

Drives away every sort of pain—external or internal, in old or young. When you meet with an accident, or are attacked by sickness, MUL-EN-OL, if applied at once, will prevent it from becoming serious. Have it ready. Sold everywhere. Price 50c., $1.00, $2.00. Prepared by FINLAY, DICKS & CO., New Orleans.

Conference Notes.

The Quarterly Centennial service, Saturday night, was a pleasant and instructive service.

Rev. S. A. Steel, D D., edits the Epworth Era, the youngest and strongest paper we have for our young people.

Bishop Fitzgerald was very happy in his sermon on Sunday at eleven A M., and the brethren enjoyed a great season of grace.

Rev. R. W. Bailey and Mr. W. A. Gunnig, of the Mississippi Conference, were present, and mixing with the brethren.

The ladies of Oxford presented Rev. Jac. E. Thomas an overcoat in open Conference. He was so over-coat-come he could not reply.

The Ministers' Relief Association of the North Mississippi Conference had a great revival this session, and largely increased the membership.

The hospitality of Water Valley was equal to the enlarged demands of the North Mississippi Conference. All had homes, and good homes.

The Bishop says: "Methodist people always keep up with the procession. The Baptists press us closely, but we keep up with them on dry land."

Some one said, "This Conference is the finest dressed body of poor men I ever saw." Clothes do not make the man, but they help him to look like one.

Methodist preachers are the most generous and benevolent men living. They can live on less, dress better and pay more than any class of men under the sun.

The Thanksgiving service was a mellow season of grace. The Bishop's sermon was rich, mellow, apt, and appropriate. The church was packed to its utmost capacity.

Rev. W. A Freeman, of the Memphis Conference, preached a strong sermon on the office and work of the Holy Ghost, Wednesday night. It was filled with apt and appropriate quotations from the Word of God. The more Scripture we put into our sermons the more truth we have in them.

The report on the orphanage was adopted with the rising inflection, and a collection was taken, and amounted to one thousand one hundred and twenty-five dollars.

The need of an orphanage in Mississippi, under the management of our Methodist people, is apparent to every thinking man. We need and must have this institution.

Rev. S. A. Steel, Secretary of the Epworth League, made a strong, luminous and powerful statement of that branch of our church work in the Methodist Church on Friday night.

Bishop Fitzgerald is not robust, but he is genial and filled with the spirit of love. The opening exercises of the Conference were spiritual and attended with an unction from the Holy One.

Bishop Fitzgerald is witty and humorous as well as wise. He rules with a hand of love. He commands respect without at all demanding it. "It is better far to rule by love than fear."

Rev. D. C. O'Howell, Rev. J. W. Lowrance, of Missouri, and Rev. W. A. Freeman, of the Memphis Conference, were present shaking hands with the brethren and enjoying the Conference.

"Gilderoy" did not hear the Bishop in the morning, and so he announced the same text the Bishop used, and made himself look small by comparison. He did this ignorantly, but not in unbelief.

The missionary meeting, Sunday night, was addressed by Rev. T. Y. Ramsey and Rev. W. B. Burke, of the China Mission. The collections for both foreign and domestic missions are in excess of last year.

The North Mississippi Conference was organized in the city of Water Valley just twenty-five years ago. The Conference has grown and changed wonderfully in that time, and Water Valley has spread into the regions beyond.

There is no figure of speech in saying Rev. L. M. Broyles stands higher than any other preacher in the North Mississippi Conference. He is the longest single man in the Conference, but it is said he will soon be single no longer.

Rev. W. A. Freeman has preached with his father and grandfather, both preachers, sitting in the pulpit with him. Rev. T. L. Boswell, of the Memphis Conference, has a son, Jno. W. Boswell, D. D., and a grandson in the ministry.

Hard as the times are, or hard as they are said to be, the preachers come to Conference well dressed and, apparently, as happy as if they were millionaires. No wonder this, for their treasure is in heaven and their hearts are there, too.

Bishop Isaac Lane, of the Colored Methodist Church, was present, and addressed the Conference on behalf of the educational work among his people. Bishop Lane has done, and is yet doing, a great and good work among the colored people in the South.

Dr. Morrison, Missionary Secretary; Dr. Steel, Secretary of Epworth League; Rev. J. W. Boswell, D. D, assistant editor of the Nashville Advocate, and Rev. W. B. Burke, missionary in China, were present during part, or the whole, of the session.

Dr. H. C. Morrison, Missionary Secretary, addressed the Conference and a vast throng of people on the subject of missions on Thursday night. This was a great speech on a great theme. A more entertaining and comprehensive address on the missionary work we are doing in Mexico and Brazil was never delivered before this body.

Bishop Lane made a strong speech before the Conference. He says, "The Colored Methodist Church in America is the only legal child the M. E. Church, South, ever had." This is good. When taking a collection, and the preachers began to give, he said, "When I am happy, I call every man brother, and now you are my brethren. Give something to your black child." They gave $131.

Item for Ladies.

Ladies, have your system always right, and you will know and enjoy the luxury of perfect health. CREOLE FEMALE TONIC is the Ladies' Remedy, "par excellence," and, as such, is in high repute, professionally and popularly, for diseases "peculiar to the sex."

NOTES.

Rev. C. M. Lyons preached a stirring sermon last Sunday on municipal corruption.

At the recent session of the North Georgia Conference, Rev. I. S. Hopkins, D. D, was appointed to First Church, Atlanta.

Copy for the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society and the Parsonage and Home Mission Society came too late for insertion in this week's issue.

Rev. G. C. Kelley, of the Louisville Conference, has been transferred to the North Alabama Conference, and appointed to First Church, Birmingham.

We invite the attention of all our laymen to the poem on our second page entitled, "Reading the Appointments." The preachers will read it without an invitation from us.

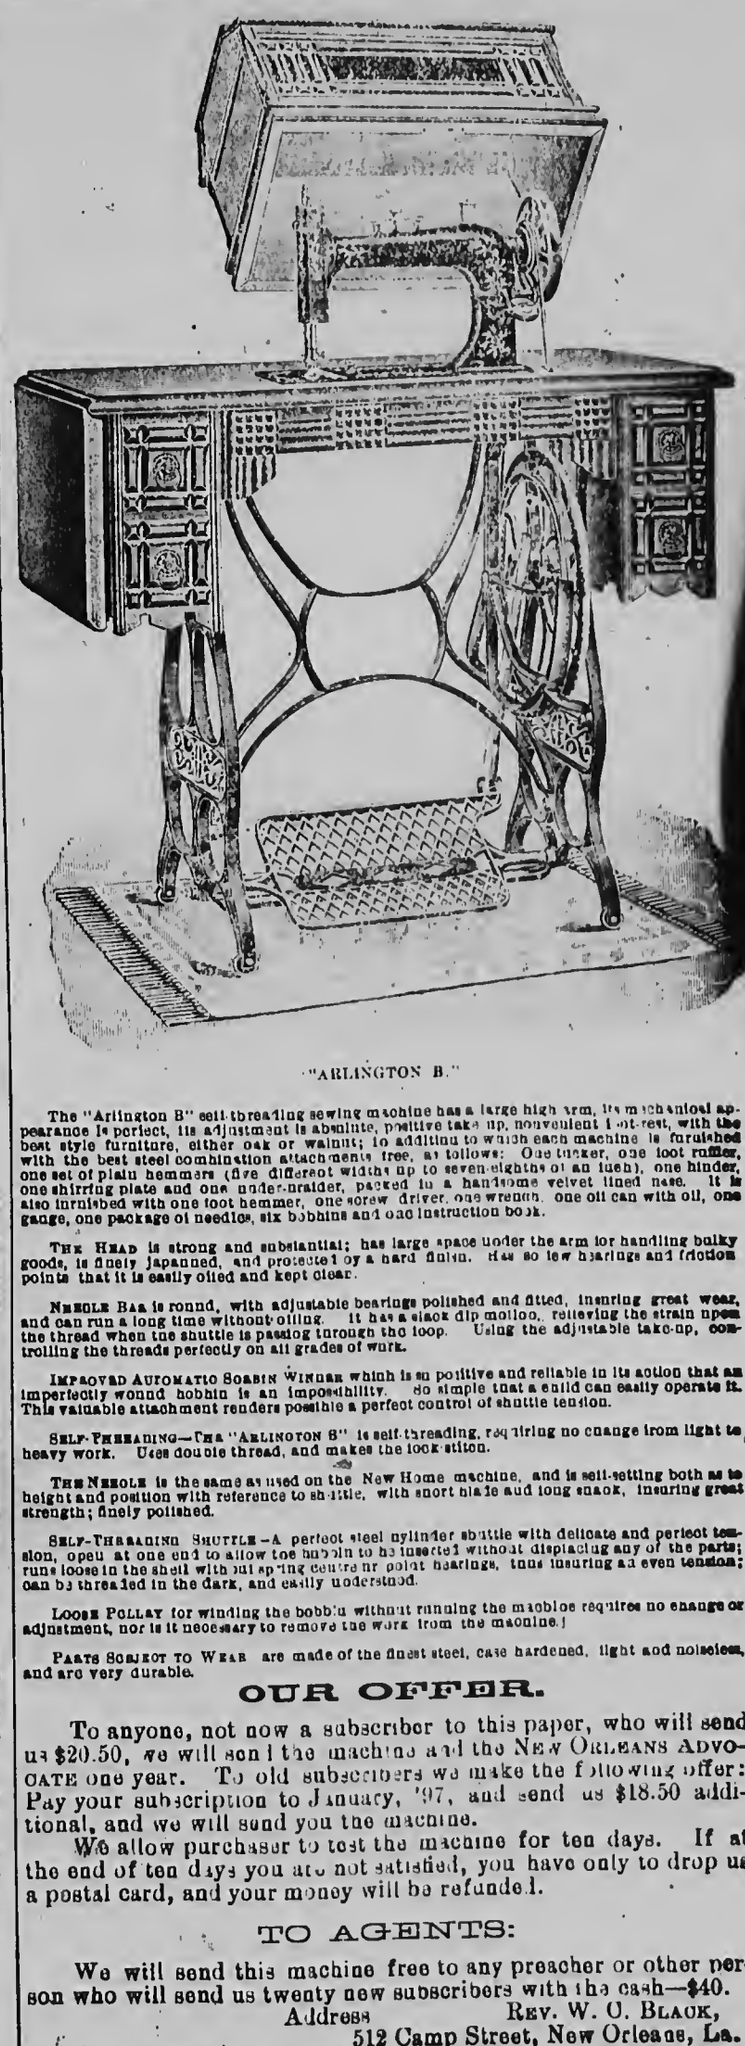
Our Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



"ARLINGTON B."

The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take up, convenient foot-rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; to addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned, and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearings polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—The "ARLINGTON B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock-stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell with but spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE POLLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

OUR OFFER.

To anyone, not now a subscriber to this paper, who will send us $20.50, we will send the machine and the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE one year. To old subscribers we make the following offer: Pay your subscription to January, '97, and send us $18.50 additional, and we will send you the machine.

We allow purchaser to test the machine for ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

HOME CIRCLE.

HELP ONE ANOTHER.

Of all the joys that life affords,
From childhood's sunny morning
Until the paling western sky
Of night's approach gives warning,
There's none that springs so swift and sure,
Delights less pure to smother,
As that which thrills and warms the heart
When helping one another.

If days and nights seem born to me
To be consumed by sorrow;
If hourly we have vainly craved
A happier to-morrow;
If from ourselves we loving turn
To some pain-stricken brother,
The sorriest night finds dawning bright
With helping one another.

'Tis selfish grief that deadliest clings;
But, Christ-like lessons heeding,
We'll find life's devious onward way
To sunnier heights still leading;
Till when these bodies, weak and worn,
Have sought the common mother,
Our souls more joyful sing and soar
For having helped each other.

"Unconscious Education."

One source of unconscious education is to be found in our aims and ideals. These are the motives by which we are actuated. To a large extent, they have already made us what we are. All good work, all high endeavors are born of aspiration. "Hope tells a flattering tale." Fancies light as air, springing from incidents which the world deemed trivial, have been cherished in the heart of a boy till they have made him great. Thought makes character. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." He who does not think high things, whose imagination does not revel in glowing pictures of what he hopes to be and to do, will not achieve high things. Every youth has his day dreams, his half-formed ideals. We can not guard too closely this fountain-head of our aspirations. Thought quickly passes over into action. The ideal becomes the real. The germs of a pestilence in the body are not more active to destroy the health than false ideals are to corrupt the character. They poison the very springs of action, making of one a spendthrift or a libertine; of another, a quack or a miser.

Henry Schliemann, while yet an errand boy, resolved that he would one day unbury Troy. His bold purpose and the wide renown which it afterwards brought him were born of his boyish dreams. He would never have found Troy, he tells us, had it not been for the inspiration he caught while reading Homer. The youth who is strong enough to drive out all unworthy aims, who will make room for no ideals but those that are high and pure, is training himself towards a noble manhood and enduring success. He may never reach his ideal, for that will advance with his progress; but, like hope, it will beckon him on and nerve him for still higher achievement.

"Build thee more stately mansions, O my soul,
As the swift seasons roll!
Leave the low vaulted past!
Let each new temple, nobler than the last,
Shut thee from heaven with a dome more vast,
Till thou at length art free,
Leaving thine outgrown shell by life's unresting sea!"

—President Bradley, in the Illinois College Rambler.

Discipline of the Wood Pile.

Every human male man who possesses even a lingering taint of temper should keep an axe and a wood-pile somewhere handy, that he may rush out and work off his wrath when it waxes fierce. There is nothing in this vain old world that will send a man back to his appointed work with a more wilted collar and a truer comprehension of himself than thirty minutes wrestling with a full-flavored axe. He can use it so fiercely in the wood. All the fury of his nature, all the hate he feels for his enemy, he can infuse into the axe handle; and how the chips will fly! Not very artistically, probably, but they will fly. And presently it begins to dawn upon the man that he is feeling more calm. Evidently he is experiencing a change of heart. He does not hate his enemy at all. He changes his stroke and begins to chop on the system of Italian penmanship—the upstrokes heavy and the down ones light. He rather loves his enemy now. At last he put all his failing strength in one terrific blow. He misses his tip with the axe and smites the chopping-block with the handle. A tingle as though he had swallowed an alarm-clock goes from elbow to nip and back again, the axe drops from his powerless hands, and a weak, limp, nerveless, perspiring, trembling, gasping thing, he staggers to the house, lies down on the first thing that looks like a lounge, and is ready to die. There isn't a fear or a fault in his heart. Death has no terrors, and life has no temptations for him. He has chopped out all his baser nature, and he is just as ethereal and spiritual as he can be on this side of Jordan. It is a great medicine.—Burdette.

The Power of Influence.

A young man recently at a religious meeting told the story of his conversion. It shows how great an influence we may be exerting on others all unknown to ourselves. He said:

On my way to and from my business, I pass a certain home. I am generally on my way about their breakfast time. As I passed one day I saw the head of the house, a man only a few years older than myself, sit down to the table. He had a Bible in his hand, and in the passing glance I saw his wife and little girl, with bowed heads, waiting for him to read. It was only a glance, but it haunted me all that day. It had a purifying influence. The next morning I found myself looking into the window as I passed with curiosity, mingled with more respect than I ever had for religion. Morning after morning it was the same.

I had never been a churchgoer, but one Sabbath morning I resolved to go to church near by. I was ignorant of the time, and so I dressed leisurely and sauntered in. The Sabbath-school was in session. I glanced over the classes, and was pleased to see my unknown friend teaching a class of young men about my age. Before the year was past I made the good confession. That was twelve years ago, and my faith is stronger to-day than ever, but somehow I always feel that the picture I saw through the open window had more to do with my conversion than anything else.

A Wife's Sad Mistake.

Mrs. Chapin, one of the W. C. T. U. workers, was once entertained in Mississippi at the home of a young married couple, and the wife said to her: "Now, Mrs. Chapin, I'm willing to entertain you, but I don't want you to talk temperance, for if you should convert my husband, then I'd have to banish wine from our table, and all my friends would call me a crank." Mrs. Chapin spoke at the public meeting, and then made her way through the audience trying to get signers to the pledge. She begged the young husband to sign, and he was reaching for the pencil to do so when his wife objected, and with a smile he shook his head and said, "No."

Six years afterward Mrs. Chapin passed through the same place. She was the guest this time of another family, but after her address was over, a weeping wife and a gibbering, drunken man came up to greet her. It was the same couple who had entertained her six years before. "Oh," said the wife, "try to get my husband to sign the pledge." "No," he cried, "I wanted to be saved once, you wouldn't let me. Now no one can save me, not even God in heaven."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Parent and Child.

Nothing is sweeter than some times finding a father who confesses himself a child with his children, a mother who is a young girl with her daughters. There is no question of authority or infallibility with these, yet somehow there is always obedience, always harmony; dignities are not sacrificed, while something better than blind homage is rendered. There are no harsh judgments, no moral reactions. Each recognizes that the thing to be attained, the quality to be expressed—as, for example, beneficence, love, courtesy, charity—is forever greater than possible human attainment, yet that each individual grows in knowledge, perfection and understanding while he strives; grows without pain, development being normal, and grows without effort, the impetus being from within and re-creative, not from without, coercive and destructive. True respect each for the other—and this is the vital point—true respect each for the other, for even the opinions and the standards of the other is at last attained. Certainly this is something better than any obedience born of the exercise of blind authority, or cultivated by a parent's personal pride in his position.—Harper's Bazar.

Good Advice to Boys.

Enoch Pratt, the Brooklyn millionaire and philanthropist, and founder of the Pratt Institute, once said:

My advice to a young man just starting in life, and ambitious to become wealthy, is to take good care of his health, to shun all bad habits, and to save at least $1 out of every $5 he earns and immediately get that $1 out at interest. A man must have good health to put forth his powers to the best advantage. To make money his brain must be clear and not clouded by rum or tobacco. I have spoken of the importance of getting your savings out at interest immediately. Few people have any idea of the rapidity with which money at interest grows, and there is no better, safer way to get it out at interest than to buy some small piece of real estate that is improved and pays rent sufficient to yield a surplus that will pay the taxes; the interest on the mortgage you will have to give and something on the principal each year. Continue to work hard and save all you can from your earnings, and apply all you save to paying off the mortgage. In this way you will soon have a good and perfectly safe investment.

Wise Resting for Wise Working.

Wise resting is often the best preparation for wise working. There are times when a nap of fifteen minutes would give a preacher or a teacher better preparation for efficient service in his line of working than would an hour of tired studying. And many a mother who sits up late at night in order to finish her day's work would have less work behind-hand if she went to bed earlier and waked up fresher. Dr. Bushnell once said, in counseling a young pastor as to his studies: "In your studying, work when you work, and rest when you rest. Take hold sharp, and let go sharp." There is wisdom in this counsel. It has, in fact, passed into an adage, that "men who are fastest asleep when they are asleep, are widest awake when they are awake." "Dead-and-alive" people are practically worth nothing either as dead or as alive.—Sunday-school Times.

HYGIENE.

The Need of Sleep.

It is probable, however, we quite admit, that the effect of night on individuals differs greatly, and that a process of natural selection is continually at work, men who can not bear night work avoiding it, while those to whom it is recuperative—and every journalist knows such men—throng into the professions in which sitting up, if not obligatory, is at least advantageous. There are extraordinary differences of instinct in this respect, a few men literally unable to bear night work, while a few others deliberately leave their whole work to be done after the sun has disappeared.

The incapacity and the faculty are connected in some way with the differences in the power of sleeping, which still remain among the perplexities of physicians. Why can some men sleep at will, and some "nervous" men, too, while others, sometimes very "heavy" men, with apparently immovable nerves, are tortured by insomnia? Why, too, do some men seem to obtain sufficient rest with five hours' sleep, while others require nine? Do some men "sleep slow" as Mr. Smedley jocularly argued in one of his amusing stories, or do they actually require more sleep? We can not answer the question any more than the doctors can, but we agree on one side of the subject more heartily with the British Medical Journal. The popular prejudice against sleep works infinity of mischief. There are plenty of sluggards even among the cultivated class, but the sleep-sluggard is in that class a very rare specimen. The tendency of the educated is to wakefulness, and the man who does intellectual work and exhibits what his friends think a disposition to oversleep, is obeying a healthy instinct. Sleep recuperates him, and he knows it The popular notion that a young man who works with his head yet sleeps for nine hours is a sluggard, is popular nonsense. No man whose brain is active and who does not drink ever sleeps more than is good for him.—London Spectator.

Rapid Eating.

In the Journal of Nervous and Mental Disease, Dr. Browning writes as follows:

There is a prevalent idea that slow eating is favorable to digestion, but that is largely fallacious. The important point is, not that we eat slowly or fast, but that when we do eat, we chew with energy. Of course, where the haste is due to some mental anxiety, this may injuriously inhibit the secretions. Slow eating begets the habit of simply mumbling the food without really masticating it, whilst the hurried eater is inclined to swallow his food before the proper mastication. Hence, hurried eating is bad, but rapid mastication is advantageous. It concentrates our energies on the act in question, hence more thoroughly accomplishes it. Moreover, energetic chewing stimulates the secretion of saliva in the most favorable manner. These various points are so commonly misunderstood, at least by the laity, that they demand our frequent attention.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

A DAINTY DESSERT.—Cover one-half box of gelatin with half a cupful of cold water; soak ten minutes. Press juice from five large oranges; add one cupful of powdered sugar, stir until dissolved. Whip one pint of cream; put the orange juice in a pan, and stand it in another pan of cracked ice. Stir the gelatin over hot water until dissolved; add it to the orange juice; stir constantly; just as soon as it begins to congeal, stir in the whipped cream. Turn into a mold, and put in a cold place to harden.—Selected.

HOW TO MAKE AN OMELET.—Three eggs separated, one tablespoon of flour, one small cup of milk, salt, pepper, and either a finely chopped onion or parsley to their taste. Beat flour smooth in milk, add beaten yolks, and, last of all, stir in the whites beaten to a stiff froth. Have melted butter in a hot pan on top of stove, and pour batter into it. When it is set and seems thick, put it in the oven on the slide and let it finish baking. This is excellent.—Selected.

CANAL STREET, - New Orleans, La

In Memoriam.

Mrs. Susannah Trippett, wife of Rev. J. S. Trippett, of the Louisiana Conference, died Nov. 2, 1895 at Doncaster, England, aged seventy-five years.

She was of Methodist stock, her father and mother being both Methodists. She was "brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord," and when about fourteen years of age she was converted, and joined the Methodist Church. As she grew to womanhood she developed capacity for much usefulness. Her love for the Master brought delight in his service. She loved the church in which she found the means of grace for her own spiritual growth, and the spiritual forces by which the plans of that Master's kingdom were to be advanced. The Sabbath-school was her delight, for she fully appreciated the possibilities of it. There were the golden opportunities for shaping characters that were to exert a controlling influence in the church and the world. She became a blessing to many, and many precious souls through her instrumentality were led to Jesus Christ.

In early life she was married to Rev. J. S. Trippett, and in giving herself to him she became a true yoke-fellow in the service of the Lord Jesus Christ. She greatly assisted her husband in visiting the sick and the distressed during the yellow fever epidemic in New Orleans in 1867. Her whole-hearted sympathy with him in his sacred calling brought him a new strength, and they were greatly blest in their work of faith and labor of love.

Some years after her marriage there fell her a painful sickness, which left her prostrate, and that permanently. As she passed into this valley of shadow she little thought how long, during a journey for her lay through it—a journey leading to no return of health in this life. Medical skill was tried, but tried in vain, both in America and England.

In the early days of Methodism in Louisiana they had very few parsonages, and the preachers had to board around, but they always met with a kind people and a cheerful reception wherever they stayed; but this kind life told upon her health. She urged her husband to continue to preach Jesus and the power of his resurrection to the people. She did not yet know that she had entered upon a life-time of suffering. From her sick-room prayer went up for every act of her husband's ministry, and for the dear people with whom he labored in Louisiana. Many of her friends reckoned it among their special privileges to visit her room, and learn there unspoken lessons of faith and confidence and patience in the service of her God.

Her life was true and beautiful throughout. For more than thirty years she had been a great sufferer, and she knew death was sure for weeks before it finally came. Her spirituality was deep, her faith strong. She realized that the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin. Her testimonies and prayers made all around her feel that they were in the very presence chamber of the Almighty. Her confidence in God never for a moment wavered. For nearly a week before her death she was relieved of all pain, and her departure was at once serene—peacefully, calmly and triumphantly did she pass away "to be forever with the Lord." Truly "he giveth his beloved sleep." She died trusting in the atonement.

To her husband, brother, children and grandchildren, and a host of friends, both in England and America, she leaves to them the richest legacy—the influence of her godly life and her sainted example.

Our sympathies are with her devoted husband, children, and all who mourn her loss; and we pray that the family may have a happy reunion that shall never be broken. A FRIEND.

OBITUARIES.

WILLIAMS—EUGENE WILLIAMS was born in Notterway county, Va., in 1845. When he was six years old his parents moved to Panola county, Miss., where he has lived ever since. When about fifteen years of age he was converted and joined the Methodist Church at Davis Chapel. He went into the army when quite young, and served his country faithfully until the close of the war.

In 1873 he was married to Miss Sallie D. McCraokan, who died about six years afterwards, leaving two sweet children, who have since died. In 1882 he was married to Miss Anna Camaron, daughter of Dr J. D. Cameron.

About ten years ago he became a member of the church in Sardis, making a new consecration of himself to God. Though exceedingly modest, he was a man of great firmness. He loved God and desired to see his cause prosper. The prosperity of the church was very dear to him. As assistant superintendent and teacher in the Sunday-school, he was greatly appreciated. He was an excellent steward, always the preacher's friend. He entertained no malice or bitterness toward any human being.

As a citizen, he was brave, honest and just; as husband and father, he was tender and affectionate. His was, indeed, a happy home. Love reigned there. He was devoted to his family.

He was sick but a short time. During his illness he spoke of death without a fear. "I hate to leave my little family," said he, "but I do want to rest." He repeated several times, "In my hand no price I bring; simply to thy cross I cling."

He has gone from us, but he still lives in his influence. We miss him as a friend, as a steward, as Sunday-school worker, as a counselor. He lived well and he died well, and we expect to meet him on the other shore.

HINSON—Sister MARGARET ELIZABETH HINSON, daughter of Alexander and Talitha Boykin, was born Dec. 6, 1844, and died July 28, 1895. She was married to E. H. Hinson, Oct. 7 1864, near Quitman, Miss., and lived happily with him until her death. She was a member of the M. E. Church, South, over thirty-eight years. She was a faithful, consistent member of the church, and her life is worthy of imitation. She loved the church, and was ready at all times to do what she could in advancing the cause of Christ. She was an obedient daughter, a loving sister, faithful, true and gentle wife, and though her physical frame was long racked with excruciating pain, she was always cheerful, and endeavored to make home bright and happy. Unless sickness or some other providential cause prevented, she never retired at night (after she annexed herself to the church) without praying. We all will miss her very much.

A short time before her death she said to her husband, "Meet me in heaven." When death came she clasped her hands in triumph, and died without a struggle. We are sure she is with her rejoicing kindred who have gone before.

May God comfort the bereaved husband, soothe the sorrow of mourning sisters and brothers, and guide the feet of the dear little orphan children, and finally grant them all a happy reunion in the haven of rest!

T. J. O.

Energy, Miss.

JONES—ORA, daughter of Rev. L. J. Jones, of the Mississippi Conference, was born July 15, 1884, joined the church in 1892, and died Nov. 5, 1895.

We mingled our tears with those of our brother around the grave of his bright and promising child. Cut off suddenly at the very dawning of life, she had, nevertheless, made a character in the Pleasant Grove community and in the Pleasant Grove circuit that will tell on the side of God through all eternity. Beginning at eight years of age, she made a free sacrifice of herself to God, and delighted in nothing half so much as in the active service of her Redeemer.

Her scrap-book, the silent witness of her likes and dislikes, breathes forth a spirit of faith, devotion, and child-like trust. The pictures, the prose, the poetry—all speak one language: faith in a living God. The beautiful young life has had a healthful, helpful influence on the home circle. We are poorer today, but heaven is richer. Is it not true that heaven is brought nearer? There is heartache and pain in the parsonage home, but there is also the comfort of the Holy Ghost. May that blessed Comforter continue his ministrations until the "Peace, be still" of the Master shall still life's wildest tempest, and the united family shall find themselves safe on the "other side!" A BROTHER.

WHITE.—CHARLIE WHITE was born Jan. 17, 1869, and died Oct. 18, 1895.

He was the eldest of six sons; the family circle is broken. He was reared by deeply pious parents. He was the pride and joy of his home, the sunshine of his neighborhood. He loved his mother with a devotion unsurpassed, and had the deepest affection and profoundest respect for his father. To each of his brothers he was a true friend and companion, and was, in turn, loved by them. He had a pleasant word and a hearty welcome for everyone. Everyone that knew him spoke only in his praise. He was a member of the Methodist Church. We sometimes wonder why one so dear to us is called away in the bloom of life; but if we are His, can we not say, "The Lord giveth, and the Lord hath taken away?"

Weep not, dear parents; your loving son has only gone before to await the coming of those left behind. An elapse of a few years of faithful toil at best will assure a reunion where parting is no more. May we all "meet in the sweet by-and-by!" A FRIEND.

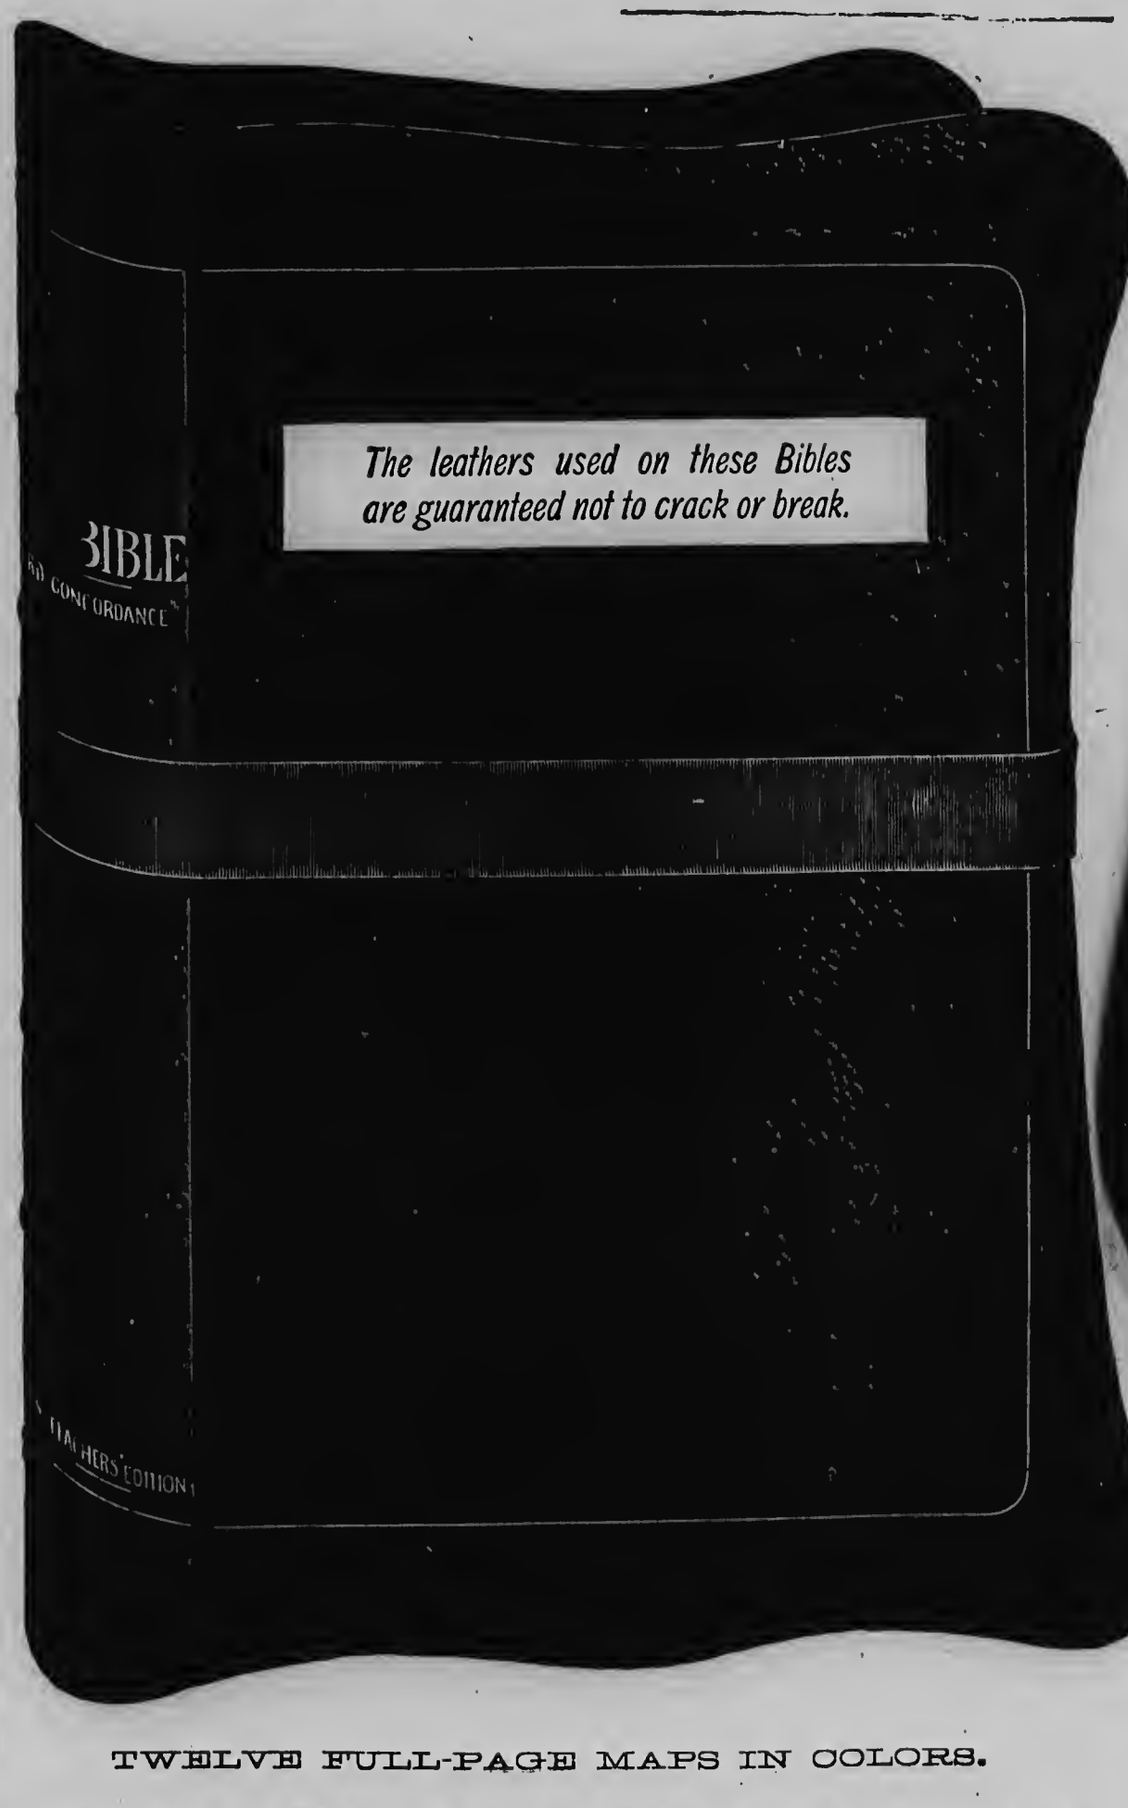
The Holman Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.

Minion, 8vo. Divinity Circuit, Round Corners, etc.



TWELVE FULL-PAGE MAPS IN COLORS.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn, New York, in the "New York Evangelist:" "Of all Bibles yet issued in our country, the most superb in execution and completeness of contents is the 'Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.' Sabbath-school teachers will find this elegant volume a little library of information in itself."

REV. ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., President of, and Professor in, the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.: "It pleases me very greatly. I regard the help which it affords to a correct pronunciation of Scripture proper names as doubling the value of the edition. I trust the book will be received as it deserves to be."

We will send this Bible for $1.65 to all subscribers who will pay their subscription for one year in advance, provided they have not had the benefit of other premium offers. In that case they must write us for special terms. When we say a year in advance we mean one year from this date, i.e., December, '96. A little later it will be January, '97.

The United States Supreme Court refused to go into the question of the legality of elections in the South Carolina Constitutional Convention.

A large meeting was recently held in New York to consider the overcrowded state of the tenement districts, and various measures for the relief of this evil were discussed.

Mr. Platt, who is supposed to know, says that no bill to allow saloons to be open on Sunday can pass the New York Legislature, as the State thinks that the city's saloons should be closed on Sunday.

John Jasper, the negro divine of Richmond, Va., who affirms that "de sun do move," is being urged as chaplain of the House of Representatives. He is 75 years old, but preaches nearly every Sunday.

Hon. Thomas B. Reed, of Maine, who was Speaker of the Fifty-second Congress, was elected, on Monday, Speaker of the Fifty-fourth by the enormous party vote of 234 Republicans to 95 Democrats, who voted for Hon. W. H. Crisp, who was Speaker of the Fifty-third Congress, and 6 for Bell, Populist, of Colorado.

During the progress of a church fair in Wooster, O., Nov. 28, an immense crowd was packed into the City Armory, when a lamp in one of the booths exploded, setting fire to the draperies and an attendant, and a rush for the exit ensued, during which women and children were crushed. Fully 100 persons jumped or were thrown from the windows, many being badly cut by glass.

In the Fifty-third Congress the Democrats controlled the House by a majority of 92 over the Republicans, or by a clear majority of 82 over Republicans and Populists combined. In the Fifty-fourth Congress, which is now in session, matters will be reversed, as the Republicans will have a clear majority over the Democrats of 140 votes, and a majority over Democrats and Populists combined of 184.

The opening of the bids for the two new battle-ships authorized by the last Congress developed some surprising facts, the most important of which is the comparatively low prices bid for the construction of the ships. All the bids are well within the legislative limit of $4,000,000 per vessel; whereas, some years ago, it was extremely difficult to secure bids at all at the Navy Department's estimates of cost.

FOREIGN.

France has determined to levy a 20 per cent. tax on inheritances.

A private track is being built for the Emperor of Germany to practice in. He has caught the bicycle fever.

No railway concessions have been granted to foreigners in China, and the Chinese government intends to keep the railway building in its own hands.

It is said that a number of unpublished hymns and poems by Charles Wesley have been discovered in London. Some of the poems are political and relate to the American Revolution.

They are building locomotives in France now low down to present as little hold as possible to the air, which, it is claimed, is an important factor in diminishing the speed of fast trains.

A committee of the social democratic party in Germany announces that owing to police persecution it has been decided to temporarily suspend operations by the party, the leadership of which until further notice will be vested in the socialist members of the Reichstag.

The Sultan, who is once more thoroughly under the influence of the palace party, led by Izaa Bey, still declines to grant the firmans applied for by the representatives of Great Britain, Russia, Italy and Austria for the passage of the extra guardships through the straits of the Dardanelles.

Notwithstanding the report, or rather rumor, telegraphed from London, some days ago, to the effect that the Emperor of Germany was being talked of as a possible arbitrator of the dispute between Great Britain and Venezuela, it does not appear that there is any real truth that the British government has changed its position and consented to submit to arbitration.

THE SECOND MISSIONARY JOURNEY.
(Acts xv, 36; xviii, 21.)

Paul and assistants had led many to Christ and organized them into churches during a previous journey. Now, it was deemed necessary to revisit them.

1. For the purpose of inspection. "See how they do."

(1) Overseers necessary. Pastor may be led into error. Possibly he may develop as a wolf in sheep's clothing. Perhaps, there may be incipient dissension among the membership.

(2) In our church the presiding elder is the authorized inspector. Four times a year he calls to see if everything is in a satisfactory condition. Methodism owes much of its success to this office.

(3) In turn, presiding elders, together with all the preachers, are inspected by a Bishop at the Annual Conference. At the General Conference even the Bishops have to submit to inspection by an appropriate committee.

2. Paul wished to re visit former places of missionary labor for the purpose of "strengthening all the disciples."

(1) Men, preachers no less, suffer from discouragement. Little success. Lose faith in our ability. Unruly members seem to effect disintegration. An experienced clerical brother, visiting, can infuse courage, impart strength.

(2) Christians, preacher included, suffer from lukewarmness. It is far more common for a spiritual preacher to be dangerously chilled by a cold, formal church, than that he lead the church to higher heights of intimate communion with God. Our system revives the preacher imperceptibly. His faith is strengthened.

3. Again, the apostle desired to revisit the former scenes of his labor for the purpose of "confirming the churches."

(1) We are surrounded by a wicked, sensual world. Unbelievers love the world and the things in the world. Christians are tempted to conform. The pastor has weepingly warned. Now comes the presiding elder, indorsing the course of the preacher.

(2) We are surrounded by sacramentarians. Regeneration made light of. True spirituality a rarity. To many it seems peculiar that we are to be a peculiar people. The presiding elder calls and demonstrates that we are a revival church.

League Dole.

At the session of nearly all our Annual Conferences Epworth League anniversaries are being held. Slowly, but surely, the entire church falls into line.

The Epworth League clamor for cheaper books. Strange, that the world can furnish literature seventy-five per cent. less than the church. Reduced price will largely increase the demand for religious reading.

The Methodist Church may well be compared to an army. In the congregational Leagues the members are drilled for useful church life.

What the salt is to the sea water, preventing stagnation, that the prayer meeting is to the Epworth League. It is a pleasure to hear the young leaguers pray and praise.

Leaguers must help the mission cause. Just think of it: In Jerusalem there are 135 saloons. Steps have been taken to start a brewery. Come to the help of the Lord against the mighty.

The pastor of our church in Sacramento, Cal., assures that the Epworth League is rendering valuable assistance.

In spite of the frequent promises of crushing out the rebellion in Cuba during November, the movement in force which General Campos proposed has not even commenced as yet. In the meantime, however, the Spanish government continues to pour troops into Cuba. Fully 30,000 men are expected to arrive in the "Ever Faithful Isle" within the next few weeks, which, added to the force already there, will swell General Campos' army to a very large figure.

A New Book.

MATOUCHON: A STORY OF INDIAN CHILD LIFE. By Annie Merie Barnes. 12 mo, cloth, 316 pages. 11 Half-tone illustrations. Price $1.25. Published by The American Sunday-school Union, 1122 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia. New York Branch: 111 Fifth Avenue.

Everybody likes Indian stories, and here is one full of thrilling incidents and vivid pictures, yet all of them true to life. The story opens with the finding in the sand of an Indian baby, which had been put there to die by its mother because it was one of twins. Among the Comanches the custom prevails of destroying both the children when twins are born. In order to save one, the mother herself, in the father's absence, often puts the other out of the way. Matouchon was rescued from the pit of sand by the doctor at the Indian station. She is cared for in a white family until the Indian father claims her. The father is a savage who treats wife and daughters after the Indian style, which is somewhat worse than brutal. All the bright things in the dark life of the Indian camp come from the light of the gospel kindled there. Young people will read Matouchon for the story's sake, but with it they will absorb ideas of the power of the gospel in the civilization of the Indian.

Where there are children, there Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup should be always handy.

THE CELEBRATED CARICATURIST, Thomas Nast, has not hitherto been known as an author. He has written an article for THE YOUTH'S COMPANION, illustrated by himself, showing "How Caricatures Are Made," which will be published in the next volume of the paper.

Louisiana Conference Notice.

Assistant General Passenger Agent Kelloud, of the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley railroad, writes that the south-bound train, leaving Vicksburg, Miss., at 1:15 A. M., Tuesday, Dec. 10, will stop at McManus that morning. All preachers and delegates going via Vicksburg, and reaching there Monday evening, can go on to Jackson in time for committee work, etc., next day.

J. D. HARPER.

Coughing is at once stopped by Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. Keep it always in the house.

Louisiana Conference Board of Missions.

As the president of the Board will be engaged with the Bishop and other presiding elders, it is of great importance that the Board of Missions meet on Tuesday evening, Dec. 10, at 7 30 o'clock. The place of meeting will be designated by Bro. Singleton. (See Minutes, p. 15.)

Dr. Hartman Says

NOW IS THE TIME TO GUARD AGAINST COLDS—THE FIRST COLD WEATHER.

In a recent lecture at the Surgical Hotel Dr. Hartman is reported as saying that no one need catch cold if he is willing to give the matter slight attention; that a cold is the beginning of chronic catarrh, consumption, disease of the liver, stomach kidneys and pelvic organs. All this could be prevented by taking his advice. The doctor's professional duties compelled him, for many years, to be much on the road night and day, by carriage, railroad and steamboat. During all this time he never caught a cold. This could not have been done without Pe-ru-na, he says. At the slightest evidence of a cold a few doses of Pe-ru-na invariably check it.

This is especially seasonable advice, for the cold Winter is here, with its storms, sudden changes, slop, rain and snow. Thousands of people will contract diseases from which they will never recover by catching cold. Dr. Hartman's advice should be heeded. Pe-ru-na cures catarrh of any stage or location. It is the most popular remedy for la grippe, coughs, colds, etc.

Send for a free copy of an illustrated book on catarrh. It contains sixty-four pages of valuable instruction. Address The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company, Columbus, O. Ask your druggist for a copy of The Pe-ru-na Almanac for 1896.

A NEW AND WONDERFUL BOOK.

Touching Incidents
—AND—
Remarkable Answers to Prayer.

AS RELATED BY

John Wesley, Bishop Simpson, John B. Gough, Edward Payson, James Caughey, Bishop Bowman, John Knox, Martin Luther, C. H. Spurgeon, Wm. Carvosso, S. A. Keen, A. B. Earle, B. Fay Mills, D. L. Moody, Guy Fox, Chas. G. Finney, T. DeWitt Talmage, Frances E. Willard, George Muller, James H. Potts,
Any Many Others.

Western Christian Advocate: "It is simply wonderful. No one can read the book without having his faith in prayer greatly strengthened."

Union Signal: "Its high religious tone, its fascinating spirit, and the high rank of its contributors, make it a strong faith tonic and an inspiration to prevailing prayer."

B. Fay Mills: "A wonderful book, an excellent book."

Cumberland Presbyterian: "It is indeed full of touching incidents calculated to quicken the faith of all who read it."

Pres. Franklin College, New Athens, O.: "This is one of the best and most interesting books we have ever seen."

Central Congregationalist: "Many of the incidents are exceedingly pathetic, and can scarcely fail to stir any tender heart to tears. It is a rich mine of illustrations for a preacher and deserves to be in every minister's library, while no Christian heart can fail to be deeply interested and profoundly stimulated by it toward faith in God."

Methodist Recorder: "It is a well-bound book, full of incidents and illustrations, to public speakers, and will encourage every reader to greater faith and more earnest prayer."

Christian Herald, edited by T. DeWitt Talmage: "Mr. S. B. Shaw has done a wise thing in making a compilation of Notable Answers to Prayer. Such incidents encourage the desponding Christian and are useful to Christian workers in leading their hearers to pray for themselves."

Christian Arbitrator: "Some of the incidents are very touching; we could only read them with tear-dimmed eyes."

The book contains 320 pages, and when open measures 8¼ by 12¼ inches, and is beautifully bound in full cloth.

It is equally adapted to the learned and unlettered.

Young and old, saved and unsaved, all read it with delight. Leaders of the various Christian denominations commend it highly.

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

In Uric Acid Diathesis, Gout, Rheumatism, Bright's Disease, &c.
Its Nerve Tonic Properties.

Dr. Harvey L. Byrd, of Baltimore, President and Professor of Obstetrics and Diseases of Women and Children in the Baltimore Medical College, formerly Professor of Practical Medicine, etc.

"I have witnessed the best results from the action of the BUFFALO LITHIA WATER Spring No. 2, in Chronic Gout, Rheumatic Gout, Rheumatism, Gravel and Stone in the Bladder, and I do not hesitate to express the opinion that in all diseases depending upon or having their origin in Uric Acid Diathesis, it is unsurpassed, if indeed it is equaled, by any water thus far known to the profession.

"It is an admirable general tonic and restorative, increasing the appetite, promoting digestion and invigorating the general health. It is powerfully anti-acid and especially efficacious in what is commonly known as acid dyspepsia. It is strongly commended to a very large class of sufferers by a peculiar power as a nervous tonic and exhilarant, which makes it exceedingly valuable, where there is nothing to contra-indicate its use, in all cases where nervous depression is a symptom.

"It has an ascertained value in Bright's Disease. A knowledge of its action in that disease thus far would seem to warrant the belief that it would in many instances, at least in its early stages, arrest it entirely, and in its more advanced stage prove a decided comfort and palliative."

Dr. J. S. Wellford, Professor of Diseases of Women and Children, Medical College of Virginia:

"I have paid a great deal of attention to Urinary Troubles, and have frequently and freely prescribed the BUFFALO LITHIA WATER in their treatment, with the very best results. In all the various forms of the Uric Acid Diathesis, whether as well-formed Gravel, Gout, or the milder forms of Gouty Dyspepsia or Nettle-rash, in their varieties, I know of no mineral water which I consider at all equal to that of Spring No. 2.

"In many Skin Diseases of old age, dependent on the Uric Acid Diathesis, such as Eczema, etc., this Water acts most beneficially."

This Water is for sale by druggists generally, or in cases of one dozen half-gallon bottles $5.00 f.o.b. at the Springs. Descriptive pamphlets sent to any address.

FAITH.

BY CHARLES KNOWLES BOLTON.

If, like a child that ever loves
A mother's least command,
Yet sometimes does half-wittnlly
Decline her proffered hand,
I, Lord, who know thy ways are best,
Sometimes still hesitate
To put my hand in thine, think me
Thy wayward child, and wait.

And if I put away the proof
That once had seemed so clear,
And walk with restless heart alone
Through pathways of new fear,
Dear Lord, believe me still thy child,
And hold my hand secure,
For though the mind that sees not doubts,
The hand that feels is sure.

Then lead me by a quiet stream
That threads green hills and dales,
Where I may walk in reverence,
Where simple thought prevails;
And let, O Lord, thy presence fill
My mind with proof of thee;
But this I know: till as a child
I walk, it can not be.

Palamedes; or, the Deathless Mind.

BY H. M. DU BOSE, D. D.

"Ut mors ultra non exit"

However laurels fade and harps become silent, there is no death; surely no death for those who have made life, and made it strong. Man is the true cosmos; man, not the puppets of flesh and blood who usurp the titles and dignities of manhood; man who brings the constellations above and the depths beneath under the sway of his mind, and with these seeks admission to the commonwealth of immortality. However crowns perish, sceptors be broken, thrones overturned, and the currents of the blood quenched in the urn's ashes, man, in this realization of his end, can not die. Dissolution only frees his life, which forever thereafter walks the earth as a familiar ghost, and becomes part of the conversation of the ages. Old and new are blended in the moving miracle of mind. As there is one heart of human sympathy, whether its records be sought in the offices of Pagan worship and the inquiries of olden philosophy, or in the clarified vision of Christian faith and knowledge, so there is one mind dealing with all things from the beginning until now. Who has not perceived this has carried but a vain endeavor to his task of studying life.

This, then, is the record of life when its center and affluents are in and from the mind. But when centered in the physical, it is not so, but is a fair delusion, an epitaphal urn, having, indeed, an exterior conformity of shape, but otherwise only a block of stone. Neither amaranth, nor bay leaves, nor the inmultuous applause of nations, nor the traditions of all the Olympiads, can glorify in the past or redeem in the present that which, apart from mind, is only of the earth, earthy.

It seems to me that it was but yesterday that I sat, in the twilight, over against the heaps of ruined Troy in the plains of Hissarlik, and entered into communion with the mythic and epic years. It matters not if it were yesterday or never that I so sat, or if it were not in my proper person. By these tokens, believe me, I have so sat, and remember well the hour. The thymy sward was soft under my feet, and the Phrygian sky above me was deeper than sleep and sweeter than a vision of sleep. The blue smoke of a camp-fire floated over the Pergamus Hill, silent in the night of ruin. A solitary white tent stood like a wedge of alabaster against the distant bine of Ida, Dardanian Ide, fraught still with memories of Œnone and the court of Aphrodite. Ilium was risen before me; in ruins, but still risen. A voice from the new world bade this ghost of the old world arise. It could but obey; it was predetermined that it should obey. There was Priam's treasure-house, lately rifled of its tarnished trinkets and rust-eaten coins by the Teuto-Greek archæologist, the discoverer of Troy; there Athenes temple; near by the breach in the wall through which the Epeian horse was dragged into the devoted city. Here Andromache waited by the distaff the return of her lord, and knew not that the haughty victor exulted above him while his graceful head was trailed along the plain." And that intimation of a fountain there—a mere spot of dampness in the sand—is what remains of the gushing well that fed of old two marble baths, and where fell "that Hector famed so far." On this side Æneas scaled the tottering wall and escaped to the sea, and thence to Latium; and so Rome, and Cæsar, and Europe, and millennium following millennium on. Said not the Mantuan so, and that by so much authority as the poet is both annalist and seer?

* * * * * *

I was thus lost in revery when, looking up, I saw two strangers walking toward me in the distance. The glory of the sunset was behind them, and made a halo about their heads. They seemed to walk straight out of the vastness of heaven, which shone like a wall of sapphire beyond. Their arms were interlocked, and they walked with a slow and meditative step, as though one talked and the other listened, but as though each had other thoughts than those he spoke or heard. The elder man's person was wrapped about the shoulders with a mantle, and his feet were covered with a half-sandal sort of shoe, common in the villages of Mysia. He stood taller than his companion, with a generously rounded forehead, a wreath of short grey hair circling it; a wide, but majestically set mouth, gracefully drooped at the corners, and a full, wavy beard, not long, but rich and grey. His eyes were sightless, but the balls were unshrunken, and full of the majesty of a twilight sky into which no star is risen. In his left hand, which was disengaged from the embrace of his companion, he bore a curious musical instrument, made partly of the shell of a tortoise, finely polished, and strung with three steel wires, which rang with a low thrill when brushed by the sleeve of his tunic. His companion was a man of about threescore and five years, and whose features had been ungainly but for the light of majesty which indued them, and the almost radiance which sat on his brow. His hair was of the dull whiteness of unbleached flax, and his beard, like the other's, was full and short. His eyes were lustrous, and looked forward with a steady, confident gaze. I heard the low hum of their voices long before I detected one syllable of that noble Ionian dialect in which they communed. When I at first comprehended the younger of the twain was leading the discourse, and this I heard:

"I walked that day in Phthia—'fertile Phthia'—even as the beautiful woman clad in white had told me in sleep, and even as I told Crito, in the dungeon at Athens, while he sat at my feet. The land was indeed the soul of a dream, and such as one fancies or thinks of only in the years of infancy. A breath of harvest and vintage was abroad on the breeze, and orchards and meadows, lit with a light of unearthly softness, sloped down to the sea. There also, when my feet had touched the marge of the sea, I encountered the shade of the son of Thetis, pulssant in armor, and topped with a mighty plume that shook with a symphony of music when but a breath came in from the sea. The pleasure and awe of my mind were not yet abated when he pointed to a galley which sat like a swan upon the water. Into this we were soon entered, and greeted there many of the departed heroes of the ancient times of our country, and especially those who had perished through cruel judgment and unjust sentences, and whose offenses were, that in their life-time they saw the soul more noble than the body, and sought to lead their fellows into the same occult faith. Chiefest among these were Palamedes and the son of Telamon. At what cost would one not purchase fellowship with these illustrious ones! Glad was our greeting, and comfortable our converse. While we looked upon the sloping shores and drank the mellow breath from meadow and orchard, the reeds and rushes about the water rustled to a wind that sprang out of the north, and our galley turned its prow to the deep. The Ithican prince, whose life it had been to 'follow knowledge like a sinking star,' and who knew the uttermost secrets of the deep, held the rudder and stood the craft straight into the south, and thence into the wider seas beyond the boundary of the world. At length we came to that remote and ruined isle where dwelt Poseidon and his sons in that most ancient age of time. Here all the sea is barren, albeit mildly breaks and dies the day throughout the year. But we looked beyond to see a happier shore rise out of the wave, and cheered ourselves with noble speech, caring not for such mean things as meat and sleep, nor burdened with one oppressive thought either of the place from whence we came, or that whither we went."

By this time the two had approached so near me that their shadows, cast by the dying sunset, fell over and beyond me on the thymy banks sloping up toward the Pergamus Hill. I arose and made obeisance after the manner of the East. This neither one nor the other perceived; but they seated themselves on a grassy mound, so that when I sat again I occupied a position at their feet, and heard the full intonation of their speech, which seemed to give the flavor of old wine to the air. I was content to listen; to speak had been sacrilege. I knew not, and yet I knew, who they were and whence they came. I needed only to think to have my thoughts interpreted. When the one spake, I heard the souls of war-like Grecians move in marches down the years. The wires of the shell which he carried thrilled to low, but pompous, measures, as though they extolled again the hosts that swept the plains of Troy. But when the other spake, a multitude of listening spirits seemed to fill the brooding air, bending close to the lips of the reverenced man, and silently pressing one against the other to secure the vantage of hearing those sapient syllables. It was a dream that moved to swift unfoldings.

"Troy was the chrysalis from which burst the Hellenic soul," so said the more ancient man when pressed by the questionings of his companion. "From the Ilian decade national Greece awoke. From that supreme effort to vindicate honor and avenge virtue, the Argive spirit rose into a super-sensuous region. Sacrifice made heroes, heroes made song, song gave birth to philosophy, and philosophy made possible the things which the largest hope of the Greeks did not even prophesy. The Argive hero, fearless in combat, made possible the philosopher, who found death the most desirable of states, because it led into the possession of that large and enduring substance from which the soul is an emanation. Achilles, with grosser instincts, made possible Socrates, with chastened intellect and passions not destroyed, but led into their proper functions; and thus Socrates but foreshadowed whom the world should see, blest with the fullest likeness to the life, a light also in every darkness of time. Life can only inherit itself; but it doth inherit, and will inherit."

The less ancient man had remained silent, listening; but at this he laid his hand on the sleeve of the other, and spake thus in reply: "No man deserves honor or praise for obeying the truth, much less for examining into its claims, but such a penalty as his own sense of justice must inflict for its neglect. No man is wise except in the wisdom which discovers his own ignorance. It should be little concern to men what life has been, but much concern to them what it now is; likewise too curious concern about the future ill becomes the brave and just. If life have confidence in itself, and doubt not the mission on which it is sent, it will be enough to find each day fair when it dawns, or foul when it ends. The year brings seasons of sowing and tilling, and crowns its days with the harvest. It is falsehood, therefore, in the very fiber of one's being to believe so much for the order of the year before it comes, and yet doubt that order of life to which all else is shaped. How much more is it falsehood to conspire, or even wish, to have that order changed, or seek the reward of life through the grosser rather than the more spiritual accessories of being! One should be willing to take all risk in living and endure all peril in dying, having this confidence before him. Such, then, has been the result of all those eventful and more or less happy chances which you have enumerated, that the good you have imagined has been partly realized, and so the greatest fear of humanity—that of dying—has come to be accounted its greatest good, and not to be thought on except as such things may be pleasant, or fall out by chance. One should, indeed, be willing to die often, if only the surprises following death should be found to be fresh each time; and seeing there are certain changes and passages of the soul from place to place in the after life, this must needs be so; and the after life is also such as feeds those cravings which were particularly denied here, and brings the soul into companionship with the mighty dead, and most truly unveils the Deity; so to go hence by passage of death is to live doubly."

"Now," said the first when they were a little time silent, "your discourse brings us back to those things of which we earliest talked: which, therefore, of those great shades who voyaged with you when first you went out from Phthia was esteemed most to be loved, and, for all uses of the soul, to be most cultivated, and, therefore, most honored, even in that place to which you voyaged?"

"By all means that Palamedes was most to be loved and honored, because in life he was for wisdom envied, and for justice he was calumniated and condemned. It was meet that he who was a light and an oracle in peace, creating for his people the gentler arts and conserving the instincts of benevolence and piety, should have no renown as a warrior, nor die as a hero, but, as all others who have testified to the truth, as an offender, and by reason of a false judgment, and that venally rendered. Herein is written, not in books, but in human life, the oracle of that love shining, first like a star, then like the planet of dawn, and then like the sun unclouded. So lived and died Palamedes; and although the tales of the heroes know him not, he lives in more endearing memory, being more in his life of the substance of mind than any beside who faced the Trojans in the years of war. In that far place where the gulfs wash downward, and the happy isles rise, flocking all the seas, he sits and judges, but in mercy, even those who judged him falsely here. Nor of Palamedes only is this true, but of how great a multitude beside is a secret, the discovery of which shall make glad all those whose happiness takes them thither. But a pledge of these things is ever whispered by the spirits into the ears of men, so that not the memory of Palamedes, nor yet of all the rest who have followed an inner light, and set at naught the grosser for the higher things, shall quite fade from the earth, or lose the power to rule in the thoughts and hopes of men. But the shadows deepen; it is time to depart."

Spiritual Interests of the Church.

The following is the report of the Committee on Spiritual Interests of the Church, North Mississippi Conference:

Your committee beg leave to submit the following report:

We believe the spiritual state of the church is as good now as it has ever been at any time in our history. The grand body of our membership are true to God and to the doctrines and polity of our church, and, in the main, they lead orderly and consistent lives—lives that honor the profession they make. Of course, it is well understood that the numerical church and the real church are two entirely different things. This has always been true of the church, as it is true of all organizations composed of human beings. The wheat and the tares are found growing together in this field, and none of us are wise enough to weed out the tares without at the same time rooting up much of the wheat. Both will have to grow together till the harvest, which will be at the end of the world. The real church—those who carry on the work of God in the world—is composed of men and women of strong faith, of deep piety, of thorough consecration, and of burning zeal. These so live as to adorn the doctrine of God by a pious walk and a godly conversation.

Your committee are glad to report that there has been a large increase in the number of family altars in our bounds. The time should come when God is worshiped regularly in all our homes. Our Sunday-schools are increasing in numbers and in the average attendance, and we believe they are growing in usefulness and in real power. Thousands of our children are coming into the church and into intelligent Christian living through this instrumentality. We have good reason to believe that our young people have been greatly developed in knowledge and in active work for Christ by the Epworth League. We should see to it that Leagues are organized wherever possible in all our charges. The attendance upon public worship and upon the other means of grace is as good now as it ever has been in the years gone by. Our people support the gospel and all the institutions and enterprises of the church more liberally now than ever before, and we believe they are growing in the grace of liberality. During the past year there have been many and powerful revivals of religion in most of our charges. Thousands have been deeply convicted of sin, and thousands born into the kingdom of God, and hundreds added to our branch of the church. The revival fires have been burning throughout our Conference. We believe our pastors and our laymen and laywomen are growing in evangelistic grace and power and in zeal for the salvation of souls. As a rule, our pastors have held their own meetings, with the assistance of neighboring pastors and with such assistance as could be given by the members of the church. This is a helpful and hopeful sign. Woe betide the church when the evangelistic gift is lost, or runs low, among our Methodist ministry and membership. The revival stage is the normal state of every healthy and growing church. This has been true of the church from the beginning.

Your committee are satisfied that the fundamental doctrines of our holy Christianity were never more strongly, constantly and clearly presented to our people than at the present. Sin and salvation is the sum and substance of nearly every sermon. Conviction for sin, repentance toward God, faith in Christ, justification, regeneration, sanctification, and the direct and abiding witness of the Holy Ghost, are the themes discussed before our people every week and in every place. Our pulpits give forth no uncertain sound. We cling to the Word and doctrine of God. The Lord stands pledged that his Word shall not return unto him void.

Your committee are pleased to note that the polemic style of preaching is rapidly giving way to that which is more practical and experimental. This foretokens great good to the church. At no time within the memory of any here present has such emphasis been given to the doctrine of sanctification—holiness of heart and life. The contests and contentions that have sprung up among us are, perhaps, inseparable from differences among men. So it has been in the past, and, likely, will be down to the end of time. It may be, after all, that it takes just this to arrest public attention and to interest the individual human mind. Any way, your committee are glad to say and to believe that the thought of our people has been turned to this subject as never before, and that out of it all we are going to come more generally and fully into higher and holier living. We ought to see to it that the spirit of perfect love controls us in our differences as well as in our agreements.

"He that loveth is born of God, and he that loveth not knoweth not God." This is a truth so simple that a child can understand it. There is nothing higher or better than this. The essence of religion is love to God and man. There can be no theories about love. It is a pure, simple, uncompounded principle. God is love, and the only way we can know God is by loving him with all the heart, mind, soul and strength. The only way to know our neighbor is by loving him as we love ourselves. May this love be perfected in every one of us!

Your committee believe that our people everywhere would be stronger and better every way by keeping our rules rather than by mending them—or, worse still, by breaking them. We be Methodists, and we ought to live by our method. In some places we have become lax in some utterly disorganized, and in some anarchical in spirit. Our liberality has degenerated into license and into lawlessness. Our churches were built for our people to worship God in according to our rules and usages, and for our regularly constituted pastors to preach in, and we can but deplore the tendency in some few places to open our houses of worship and our pulpits to every unauthorized person that comes along. This is liberality gone to seed, or into license, that amounts to lawlessness. If we do not respect ourselves, our churches, our ministers and ministry, nobody will respect us. We need to cultivate the spirit of denominationalism in order to retain our individuality and our identity among the churches of the land.

Your committee believe that great good would come to our preachers and people if both should make a persistent effort to hold their protracted meetings without calling in outside and extraordinary help. The only way to retain evangelistic power is by exercising the evangelistic gift. The people need to have faith in their pastors, and pastors need to have faith in their people. Dependence on extraneous help tends to destroy the faith of each in the other. Methodism has been a system of organized evangelism from the first. This is the meaning, purpose and intent of an itinerant ministry. With a full baptism of fire, it will soon take the world for Christ.

Your committee believe the spiritual state of our church would be greatly improved if we could get our people to sing. Congregational singing is largely an unknown quantity among us. We worship God in song by proxy—specially so in our larger congregations. Choirs and quartets do most of the singing in all our congregations.

It is to be regretted, so we believe, that our own hymn book, so full of spiritual songs, sound doctrine and deep religious experience, is being driven out of so many of our churches, and substituted by books of doubtful character, often filled with sentimental ditties and jingles, utterly unworthy of a place in our service of song. No book is so good for our people as our own. Our preachers ought to use, and encourage our people to use, our own hymn book in all the public services of the church. We ought to sing the doctrines we so faithfully preach.

Resolved, That we stress the duty and obligation of family worship and religion.

Resolved, That we will strive to put into active and efficient operation all the machinery of the church.

Resolved, That we will urge and encourage our people to attend more regularly and to depend more largely upon the regular and stated means of grace, and to depend less upon that which is exceptional and extraordinary, specially less upon that which is sensational.

R. G. PORTER, Chairman.

In the Living Present.

A cunning business firm in New York imported a large cargo of water from the river Jordan, and offers the same for sale by the barrel, gallon or quart bottle. It is intimated that the water is designed for baptismal purposes. Said firm is aware of the perversion of religious feeling. It was this perversion which gave such eminent success to Peter the Hermit in setting on foot the Crusades.

The authorities in Moscow have analyzed the wines sold in Russia. Of a hundred and sixteen samples only nine were composed of grape juice. The others were made up of glycerine, sugar, tannin and bad spirits. In one country the proportion of genuine wine is even smaller than that of the Muscovite Empire.

In this age of selfishness it is a source of pleasure to know that Lord Rowton has built and supports in London a large lodging-house for the indigent of both sexes. Seven hundred persons can be accommodated. Applicants receive warm bath, supper, a separate room, lit by electricity, good bed and breakfast gratis. Only criminals are refused admittance.

The doctrine of papal infallibility is monstrously absurd. Pope Pius IX. ordered to be placed on the Index Expurgatorius a book entitled "Virgin Mary," by Cardinal Pecci. And that same cardinal is now Pope Leo XIII.

Governor Altgeld, of Illinois, has concluded to retire from the political arena. The odium of our nation and the ridicule of the civilized world failed to affect his equanimity; but a recent lyric poem by Herr Most, in which the anarchistically inclined governor is extravagantly praised, calling him the Messiah of the laboring masses, has caused this present revulsion. And nobody cries.

General Duchesne, commander of the French forces in Madagascar, reports that his soldiers of light hair, blondes, seemed impervious to the inroads of climatic fevers. Those of dark hair, brunettes, sadly succumbed. In Mexico, years ago, the same experience was had. In Puebla thousands of dark-haired French soldiers lie buried. It was grim humor which induced a French atheist to paint in large letters on the gate of the military graveyard of that place: "Jardin d'acclimation."

THY WILL BE DONE.

He always wins who sides with God—
To him no chance is lost;
God's will is sweetest to him when
It triumphs at his cost.

All that God blesses is our good,
And unblest good is ill;
And all is right that seems most wrong,
If it be his dear will.

When obstacles and trials seam
Like prison walls to be,
I do the little I can do,
And leave the rest to thee.

I have no cares, O blessed Lord!
For all my cares are thine;
I live in triumph, Lord, for thou
Hast made thy triumphs mine.

"Trouble in the Camp."

With no little interest, and with considerable amusement, we have watched the cross-firing of several of our preachers in the last few issues of the ADVOCATE. In my humble judgment, Dr. Parker has made out a good case, and to his testimony I wish to add mine. We would repeat the oft-asked, but unanswered question, Where is the law in our book of discipline prohibiting laymen from conducting and controlling religious services in our churches and at our camp meetings? We all know that no one has a right to enter the ministry of our church without ecclesiastical authority. But we know also that every layman in the church, under proper supervision, has a right to lead men to Christ either by conducting religious services or by a private, personal appeal. Does not every pastor urge his laymen to labor by precept and example for the salvation of souls?

During the past year we have charged every Board of Stewards in the Natchez district to seek a divine filling that they might be qualified to act as sub-pastors, to be co-laborers with their pastors in saving souls. Since the birth of our church Methodism has stood as a divine, emphatic protest against high-stilted ecclesiasticism. With us sacerdotal robes and consecrated surplices have had but little weight. These we have not entirely neglected, but we have given more earnest attention to the spirit of holiness.

To accomplish the end for which Methodism was created, we have used all the agencies we have been able to secure. And, as a church, we must confess that we owe our success to our consecrated laymen as well as to our ordained ministry. From the days of Wesley to the present day we have had strong men among our laymen who have labored efficiently at our altars, who have wrought by precept and example for the salvation of souls. Mr. Wesley, in his absence from London, appointed a young layman, Thomas Maxfield, to hold prayer meetings, to exhort and give spiritual advice to the people as they might need it. Being fervent in spirit and mighty in the Scriptures, he greatly profited the people. Some were indignant at this irregularity, and complained to Mr. Wesley on his return to London. Mr. Wesley evinced great dissatisfaction at Maxfield's conduct; but, by the suggestion of his saintly mother, was led to hear him for himself, after which he said: "It is the Lord. Let him do what seemeth him good." And, thanks be unto our God, from the moment John Wesley's prejudices bowed to the force of truth down to the present controversy men and women unauthorized to preach have held religious services in our churches, and have thereby brought thousands to the Savior of men. What shall we say to such a man as Judge Estes who, though unlicensed, holds meetings during the interims of his court, thus making it possible for men to live by the golden rule? Or what shall we do with such men as Carlyle, Gordon, and Willis, who write, teach and hold religious services for the conversion of sinners and the edification of believers? Shall we say to them?—You are unauthorized; therefore you must hold your peace. Mr. Moody is not a minister. But where is the preacher in our connection who would not be glad to have Mr. Moody's labors in his charge? How appropriate and opportune the following lines from an eminent divine:

Eldad, they said, and Medad there,
Irregularly bold,
By Moses, uncommission'd, dare
A separate meeting hold;
And still whom none but heaven will own,
Men whom the world decry,
Men authorized by God alone,
Presume to prophesy.
How often have I blindly done
What zealous Joshua did,
Impatient to the rulers run,
And cried: "My lords, forbid;
Silence the schismatics, constrain
Their thoughts with ours t' agree,—
And sacrifice the souls of men
To idol unity."
Oh, that the church might all receive
The spirit of prophecy,
And all in Christ accepted live,
And all in Jesus die!

Is it not a fact that all this ado about unauthorized, self-constituted preachers has grown out of the fact that Mrs. Snell has been invited by several of our preachers to hold religious services in their respective charges? But why object to Mrs. Snell's holding religious services? It because she is a woman, the objection is puerile. From time immemorial women have been co-laborers in the gospel. Paul, in closing his letter to the Romans, says: "I commend unto you Phebe, our sister, . . . that ye assist her in whatever business she hath need of you, for she hath been a succourer of many, and of myself also." Beginning with the birth of Methodism, we have the example of Mrs. Susannah Wesley, the illustrious mother of Methodism, who gathered the people together in religious meetings, appointed, held, conducted, and controlled by herself. Time fails us to mention the host of godly, consecrated women who have wrought with us in the Lord, and who are helping us to give the bread of life to the perishing millions. But if objected to because she is unlicensed, and, therefore, not under the supervision and control of the church, the objection is not valid. The book of discipline (page 128) has the following question and answer:

'Ques. 3. What shall be done with members who disseminate doctrines contrary to our articles of religion?

"Ans. If a member of our church endeavor to sow dissensions in any of our societies by inveighing against either our doctrine or discipline, such person so offending shall first be reproved by the preacher in charge, and if there be persistence in such practices, the offender shall be dealt with as in case of immorality."

From the above paragraph it is manifest that laymen holding religious services are amenable to the law of the church for what they teach, just as the ministry are.

In conclusion, Mrs. Snell is not a preacher. She is simply a helper in the work of saving souls, and, as such, any preacher has a right to invite her into his charge to hold religious services. And happy are the people who are privileged to sit under the influence of her words of joy and life.

L. S. JONES.

Give Us the Law.

Whereas, It is contrary to the law of the M. E. Church, South, to permit unlicensed persons to occupy the pulpits of our churches, or to have control of the services held therein, or in any property owned by said church.

Bro. Emery has relieved me very much by his article, "Where Is the Law?" never supposing that men, usually so clear and deep, would assert a thing positively to be law which can only be found by implications in their own fertile imaginations. These resolutions eliminate every question except that of the law prohibiting unlicensed persons preaching in our pulpits, etc. We are now led to ask what is law. Blackstone's Commentaries, Vol. I., page 441: "Municipal (ecclesiastical) law, thus understood, is properly defined to be 'a rule of civil (ecclesiastical) conduct prescribed by the supreme power in a state (church), commanding what is right and forbidding what is wrong.'" And, first, it is a rule (Vol. II., page 53): "I proceed now to the later branch of it, that it is a rule so prescribed, 'commanding what is right and prohibiting what is wrong.' Now, in order to do this completely, it is, first of all, necessary that the boundaries of right and wrong be established and ascertained by law; and when this is once done, it will follow, of course, that it is likewise the business of the law, considered as a rule of civil conduct, to enforce these rights, and to restrain or redress these wrongs. It remains, therefore, only to consider in what manner the law is said to ascertain the boundaries of right and wrong, and the methods which it takes to command the one and prohibit the other."

"For this purpose the law may be said to have several parts: one, declaratory, whereby the rights to be observed and the wrongs to be eschewed are clearly defined and laid down; another, directory, whereby the subject is instructed and enjoined to observe those rights, and to abstain from the commission of those wrongs; a third, remedial, whereby a method is pointed out to recover a man's private rights, or redress his private wrongs, to which may be added a fourth, usually termed the sanction or vindicatory branch of the law, whereby it is signified what evil or penalty shall be incurred by such as commit any public wrongs, and transgress or neglect their duty."

Page 56: "And we have seen that, in things naturally indifferent, the very essence of right and wrong depends upon the direction of the law to do or to omit them."

We are now led to ask what boundaries have been established.

Section 417, Discipline, 1894, says who shall be permitted to use the church-houses, property, etc. Section 430: Trust clause of deed says certain persons shall be allowed to use the house, but we do not find anything to forbid other persons using it by permission.

Blackstone, Vol. I., page 56: "When, for instance, the declaratory part of a law has said that the field of inheritance which belonged to Titius' father is invested by his death in Titius, and the directory part has forbidden anyone to enter on another's property without the leave of the owner, if Gaius, after this, will presume to take possession of the land, the remedial part of the law will then interpose, its office. Will Gaius make Gaius restore the possession to Titius, and also pay him damages for the invasion?"

Our law has said that the field of inheritance which belonged to Titius' father is invested in Titius, in Sections 417 and 430 of our Discipline, but has not forbidden anyone to enter on another's land, especially when invited there by the parties in charge; neither forbids the invitation. We have a right to even enter each other's premises, except for evil purposes, unless forbidden by the owner or his agent, without violating any law. It is true that the person designated to take charge of property has the exclusive control of it, but this does not forbid another, by invitation of the person in charge, from the use of it, if not used for purposes contrary to the use for which the trust was created.

The Methodist Church, through its officials, holds property in trust for the use of its members. For what use? Religious worship. No one claims to be a minister of the M. E. Church, South, without license; but we find nothing forbidding the use of our property for religious purposes by unlicensed persons. So far as the civil officers of the State are concerned, it is not a violation of the law, unless expressly forbidden by statute of the State, for a person to assume the duties of an office; but if a person act under any color of title, his acts are valid. If a person were to assume the duties of an office without any color of title, his acts would not be in violation of law unless they were forbidden by law, but without authority of law. The governor, or judge, derive all their authority from the law, and their appointment or election to the office; and acts without appointment or election are void, because not authorized by the law, and not because they are in violation of law. But who ever heard of a sermon preached by a person called of God to preach the gospel being void for want of authority of law? The enforcing a right is one thing, and a thing in possession is another. A sermon preached and a soul saved is a thing already done, and the result obtained without authority of law. Will God declare that conversion null and void because the preacher had no license, and deliver the soul back to the devil? If I were to pardon a prisoner, acting as governor of the State, he would remain in prison, for my act would be void for want of authority. We hear of no unlicensed person doing more than preaching the gospel to sinners, and their conversion under it; and it is impossible for me to believe that such conversion will be void for want of authority of the M. E. Church, South, to preach the gospel, and in violation of an implied law.

T. M. EVANS.

Gall Nuts and Else.

These, sometimes called nut-galls, are not the legitimate fruit of any tree; neither do they have any posterity to rise up and call them blessed. They often, as an excrescence, spring from giant oaks, and are believed to result from the sting of a poisonous insect or fly, and to harbor the larvæ of same, thus increasing the generation of such pests. They are beautifully variegated in outward seeming; within, they are as wormwood to the taste. Often ink is made from them.

This suggests that sometimes ADVOCATE correspondents seem to "dip their pens in gall." When written thoughts are touched with such flavor, the general effect is that of the "little book" which the apocalyptic angel held out to John. An acid is sometimes quickening to the system, but gall is like poison when it gets to coursing through the blood. Bile should never "re-gurgitate."

These reflections were suggested by utterances of one of your honored correspondents in a recent issue of our beloved organ. I need not mention his name. The brother seemed out of harmony with those who work spiritual miracles in the Master's name, without authority — "not following with us." His righteous soul seemed specially vexed at the "big-footed women" who wanted to take the "earth, stars, nebulæ," etc. Well, if they would take these from the devil and present them to Christ, what servant of his should enter protest? They belong to him by right. We are not afraid of women with feet, either big or little, keeping all these conquests to themselves. They have always shown themselves ready to share every blessing with us "lords of creation." The "sacred precincts of the English nobility" sadly need invasion for the Master. It is a source of devout gratitude that one so noble, gifted, gracious and beautiful as "Lady Henry Somerset," has braved the scorn of wicked men and rage of hell in order to lift up the fallen and rescue the perishing. She deserves praise—not blame.

Other daughters of our race and true sisters in Christ are doing equally well, according to their rank and station, and to the measure of faith given them to profit withal, specially when they have such wise, apostolic men "in charge," who "help those women," as Paul the aged and highly honored. Mrs. Susannah Wesley expounding the Word to the Reverend Samuel's hungry flock—bringing out and leading forward in true progress her great son, John—should be a signal to Methodist folks. The Reverend John, in his turn, as often and distinctly encouraging Mary Bosanquet Fletcher in conducting those public services—frequently attended by distinguished divines—in which she had so much liberty while expounding the Word, and which resulted in so much of lasting good, would speak to us from his grave, if he could, and say: "My sons in the gospel, be not wiser than what is written in God's Word, and by the hand of his ever-unfolding providence. Do not be afraid of ecclesiastical censure, if you are convinced God is in the work." This divine courage was the guiding-star of his own marvelous career.

Referring to those "big-footed women" who crave so much for Christ: We have not noted any abnormal pedal development among those women who are disposed to help the apostles and their successors by "laboring with them in the Lord." Yet, if this were the case, wherein comes the reproach? It is true that among high-caste heaten in China a "big-footed woman" is under the ban of cultured (?) society. But Christian missionaries, with other foreign residents and some of the wisest among the natives, are organizing to broaden out the base on which these long-tormented women walk.

The Psalmist asserts: "A good understanding have all they that do His commandments."

Let us have more of the "fat" and the "sweet," and less of the "gall."

To Corresponding Secretaries of the Woman's Missionary Societies.

It has been suggested that a word to the corresponding secretaries of our auxiliaries would be timely, and, perhaps, prove very beneficial to the work; so, if you are a corresponding secretary, this article is especially for you; if you are not, please see to it that it comes to the notice of that officer of your auxiliary.

In the first place, I would remind you that it is no light thing that you occupy this position. It in the providence of God you find yourself in possession of it, you should consider it a post of special duty for him, and should realize how necessary it is that its obligations are met faithfully and fully. Important they must be, for a glance at the by-laws of your society shows that the detailed account of your duties occupies more space than of any other officer. Now, let's see what these duties are.

In the first place, "It shall be the duty of the corresponding secretary to conduct the correspondence of the society." This makes your relation to the society pre eminently connectional, for in this relation you receive for the society all communications in regard to your own Conference work, and from officers of the Board all that relates to the entire work at home and abroad. All plans for the execution of connectional work and information regarding our workers in the field must come through you. Then all leaflets and information designed to arouse the members of your auxiliary and make its meetings profitable must find their way into the auxiliary through you, and the impression made depends largely upon your being a good medium of communication. As Mrs. Morton writes to the corresponding secretaries of the P. and H. M. Societies:

"It is to be regretted that because the corresponding secretary does not represent the moneyed interests of the society, the importance of her duties is often, even by the secretary herself, depreciated. They lose sight of the fact that while the treasurer is sending out that which is the very life-blood of the work at large, the corresponding secretary is gathering in for its sustenance the life-blood of the society at home — information, the source, the foundation, of interest.

* * * * * *

"She should honor and dignify her office. When her report is called for at the monthly meetings she will not carelessly reply: 'I believe I have nothing to report. Oh, yes; I remember I have received some leaflets but forgot to bring them.' What conception of official obligation! What appreciation has she of the thought, the prayer, the work, that has gone into the make-up of one of those leaflets? Our model secretary would have read and been prepared to speak a word for them, exciting interest and desire, and then have passed them over to the president. She will keep up with the work at large, be familiar with the demand and the plans for meeting them.

"Some secretaries are slow to learn that the letters and supplies sent to them are not their individual property, especially the letters, which in many cases never reach the society at all, thus withholding much of suggestion and inspiration, which in many cases is badly needed. I very much fear that many such papers find oblivion in the Noah's ark of the bureau top drawer."

The president of the North Mississippi Missionary Society says that, to her certain knowledge, there are four auxiliaries within the bounds of this Conference into which the programmes recently issued for the Week of Prayer never found their way at all; did not even reach the eyes of the president. These were prominent auxiliaries, and, for aught we know, this may have been the case in twenty others.

Sisters, these things ought not to be, for in such instances of negligence you are as a stone wall, effectually blocking all progress and growth.

But this is only part of your work. The sending of quarterly reports to the Conference corresponding secretary is equally important, and should never be omitted or neglected. If you could only realize what a break the negligence of one officer makes in the entire work, you would never be that negligent officer. The months of June, September, December and March should be indelibly impressed upon your mind, and should never roll round without the prompt mailing of your report. Let the secretaries bestir themselves, and be very faithful in all that pertains to the office, doing it all unto the Lord.

MRS. G. H. LIPSCOMB.

Miss Anna Trotter, of Langsdale, Miss., has been appointed district secretary of the Woman's Foreign Mission Society on the Enterprise district. Let all auxiliaries in that district report quarterly to her. She will furnish them with all necessary literature. The past week was appointed by the Woman's Board of Missions as a week of prayer and self-denial. If any auxiliary in the Conference failed to observe it, let them select a time that will suit them, and give unto the Lord a thank-offering. (Malachi iii, 10.)

Let each district secretary send me their third quarter's report not later than Dec. 15. Report of auxiliaries should be sent me as soon as organized, that I may forward to Mrs. Trueheart for her report in the Woman's Missionary Advocate.

The Baby Roll.

The president of an auxiliary in the Florida Conference P. and H. M. S. was repeatedly absent from the regular meetings. Some of the members went to see her to inquire what was the matter. "I can not leave my baby," she said. "Bring it with you," some one laughingly advised, and at the next meeting she acted on this suggestion. The baby was good, and its presence was enlivening, and somebody else recommended that it be made a member of the society. A membership fee was agreed upon, and the young visitor's name was enrolled—the first upon a now famous list. Other mothers followed this example and made their babes members of the society, and thus the "Baby Roll" was originated. Other auxiliaries caught up the idea, and the "Baby Roll" became an established part of the P. and H. M. S. in the Florida Conference. The story of its simple beginning and its success financially was told at the Asheville convention, and, as a result, the following item formed a part of the report of the Committee on Extension of Work as finally adopted:

"Since the organization of the 'Baby Roll' in some of the auxiliaries has proven a source of revenue, and is a practical application of that passage of Scripture which should be the life-text of every mother, 'Train up a child in the way he should go,' we heartily commend to our auxiliaries the adoption of the 'Baby Roll' membership, which may be secured by the payment of twenty-five cents a year."

This is one of the sweetest—and may I not say one of the strongest?—movements our society has yet made. "A little child shall lead them." The hearts of the mothers will follow the babies wherever they go, and this "Baby Roll," as it seems to me, will not only increase the interest of the mothers already engaged in the work, but will enlist others not heretofore interested in it.

The North Mississippi Conference Society has commenced a "Baby Roll," headed with the name of the youngest daughter of our first president, Mrs. Robert Somerville, and we hope, before the year closes, the list will be a long one. I wish every auxiliary in the Conference would start a "Baby Roll" and send the names of the members to this editor. If the lists are not too long, I will promise to publish them; and, even if they should require the whole column, I think I could well afford to give up the space for one week, for I am sure it would furnish more interesting reading than anything I could write.

Sisters, do think of this, and try to enlist the mothers of your church in the effort to bring this fresh, young life, this unconscious influence, into our society. The flowers do not realize how they enliven a banquet or cheer the sick, and yet who would question the sweet ministry of the flowers? So, let us bring these tender human blossoms into our Master's service, to brighten and cheer our labor of love. Let every auxiliary in the North Mississippi Conference Society have its "Baby Roll."

S. MYRA SMITH SCHOLARSHIP.

It is generally known that the S. Myra Smith Scholarship in the Scarritt Bible and Training-school, on which $1,500 had been already paid, was offered by the Greenville Auxiliary W. F. M. S. to our North Mississippi P. and H. M. S., if we would complete the endowment. This offer was gladly accepted, and pledges for various liberal amounts were made by the delegates. We are promised for our P. and H. M. column a sketch of the noble woman for whom this scholarship is named, and hope to have it in time for the next issue.

Consistency.

No great work is accomplished in a moment; the first attempts must be repeated again and again. The iron can not be fashioned at a stroke, however heavy; but what the smith was not able to do with one blow he does with a hundred. In the work of God the order is for line upon line, and precept upon precept. The littles are influential in securing the much. The advantages of the good beginning are lost without perseverance to the end. In the race the test is on the last mile, which requires "mettle and bottom." The final prize is to him who perseveres to the end. A spurt never wins; Holdfast must come in to gain the prize.

Many believers have begun well; they have had a spurt of goodness, or, it may be, they have continued well on toward the goal, and then have slackened their pace and lost the prize. Many a person has given up when within reach of the blessing. The preacher sometimes does. Elias would have lost all if he had prayed only three times; the seventh time crowned and secured all that had gone before. Constancy is a most important lesson in the Christian life. Much else may be desirable, but be sure not to fail in constancy.—Zion's Herald.

Accept the place the divine providence has found for you; the society of your contemporaries, the connection of events. Great men have always done so, and confided themselves, child-like, to the genius of their age, betraying their perception, that the eternal was stirring at their heart, working through their hands, predominating in all their being. And we are now men, and must accept in the highest mind the same transcendent destiny; and not pinched in a corner, nor cowards fleeing before a revolution, but redeemers and benefactors, pious aspirants to be noble clay, plastic under the Almighty effort, let us advance and advance on chaos and the dark.—Emerson.

A preacher whose name we don't know, but which deserves to go thundering down the ages, is reported to have told a despondent young parishioner to "look on the bright side." "But there is no bright side," replied the despondent one. "Then, my boy," said the cheery parson, "you must polish up the dark side."—Journal and Messenger.

Lord Kelvin: "Overpoweringly strong proofs of intelligent and benevolent design lie around us, and if ever perplexities, whether metaphysical or scientific, turn us away from them for a time, they come upon us with irresistible force, showing to us through nature the influence of a free will."

There is evil enough in man, God knows! But it is not the mission of every young man and woman to detail and report it all. Keep the atmosphere as pure as possible, and fragrant with gentleness and charity.—Dr. John Hall.

A courteous disposition becomes the elect of God; for the design of the gospel is not only to soften the minds of men, but to sweeten them, and to promote friendship among man, as well as reconciliation with God.

Ministers of the Gospel

Have done much for suffering ones by telling their congregations of the Oil Cure. We cured a Baptist minister's wife of cancer that had been given up to die. Her husband published the facts from his pulpit and was the cause of many cures. This was near Indianapolis. For particulars and price of Oil send for book, sent free. Address

DR. D. M. BYE,
170 N. Illinois St.,
Indianapolis, Ind.

CARAPEAKE, S. C., Aug. 31, 1895.

Dr. Bye, Indianapolis, Ind.:

My Dear Friend and Brother—I thank you for what you have done for me. You have cured me of a terrible cancer. It gave me much trouble and pain. I heard of you through my pastor, Rev. H. H. Butler. I got him to write to you for me; you sent the oils. I began to get better from the very first treatment, and in a few weeks it was all healed up and now I am a well man. God bless you.

Yours in Christ,
WESLEY BRINKLEY.

Rev. H. H. Butler, referred to in the above letter, has been the means of having many of his members cured of cancer with the balmy oils. Old Jassy Ballard was the first one, and while writing for oil for Bro. Johnson he makes this reference to Bro. Brinkley. He writes: "My Dear Friend and Brother, the Lord bless you in your good work. Do all you can for Bro. Johnson. I want to see dear old Bro. Brinkley last Saturday afternoon. He and his dear wife were glad to see me. They are about seventy years old, both members of my church, and they are as good as they know how to be. I felt it was good to be there, as I heard them talk and tell what the Lord had done for them. He said his father died of cancer, and he was so glad that he learned of the oils. He said: 'You see now that I am well, God bless Dr. Bye,' and his good old wife said, 'Yes, God bless that man, he has cured my dear husband.' They will love you as long as they live."

SUFFOLK, VA., May 8, 1895.

DEAR DR. BYE—You have made one of the most wonderful cures in the case of Bro. Jesse Ballard I ever knew. He was at death's door; now he is well.

REV. H. H. BUTLER.

ALAS! IT WAS TOO LATE.

SKIPPERVILLE, ALA., Nov. 1, 1895.

DEAR DR. BYE—I write you to let you know that my brother, Daniel M. Munn, who was taking your medicine, is dead. He died Oct. 16. Your medicine at first seemed to do him a great deal of good, but alas! it was too late. I believe if he had gotten it in time that it would have cured him, but he commenced it too late. But he died thanking you for the good it done him, and for the kind feeling that you always expressed toward him in your letters. Allow me to return thanks for your kindness towards him. May the Lord bless you. With best wishes for your success, I am, Fraternally yours,

REV. JNO. M. MUNN,
Pastor Presbyterian Church, Manina, Greene county, Alabama.

God's Plan for You.

Go to God himself, and ask for the calling of God; for as certainly as he has a plan or calling for you, he will somehow guide you into it. And this is the proper office and work of his spirit. By this private teaching he can show us, and will, into the very plan that is set for us. And this is the significance of what is prescribed as our duty, namely, living and walking in the spirit; for the spirit of God is a kind of universal presence, or inspiration, in the world's bosom; an unfailing inner light, which if we accept and live in, we are guided thereby into a consenting choice, to that what God wills for us we also will for ourselves, setting into it as the needle to the pole. By this hidden union with God, or intercourse with him, we get a wisdom or insight deeper than we know ourselves; a sympathy, a oneness with the divine will and love. We go into the very plan of God for us, and are led along in it by him, consenting, co-operating, answering to him we know not how, and working out, with nicest exactness, that good end for which his unseen counsel girded us and sent us into the world. In this manner, not neglecting other methods, but gathering in all their separate lights, to be interpreted in the higher light of the Spirit, we can never be greatly at a loss to find our way into God's counsel and plan. The duties of the present moment we shall meet as they rise, and these will open a gate into the next, and we shall thus pass on, trusting and secure, almost never in doubt as to what God calls us to do.—Horace Bushnell.

Most men have what they really want. That is, if a man puts his life into a want, or puts a want into his life, so that he is not content to live without that one thing which has his heart, he is likely to get it, and not likely to stop until he has got it. The trouble with men generally is that their thoughts and desires do not center on one thing at a time, so that they feel they must have that one thing or die.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. W. J. Porter, P. C., Indian Bayou, La.: "Our second year at this place terminates on the eighth instant. When the condition and need of my people are considered, I can but feel sad; yet the Lord has graciously remembered us in the demonstration and power of his Spirit. The visible results for this year are as follows: Baptized 10 adults and 54 infants; received 66 into the church, and buried 32; conversions, 80, and 33 sanctifications. Will carry up the best report on the Conference collections ever taken from this place, and one student for Centenary College."

Rev. F. N. Swaney, Dry Creek circuit, N. v. 22: "The Conference year for 1895 will soon come to a close, and I wish to write to the dear old ADVOCATE one more time before Conference to tell the good news abroad what the Lord has done for us on the Dry Creek circuit. Since my last report I have held several meetings. I had helped in two of them. In last month Mrs. Kate E. Wilkins, president of the fifth district of Louisiana W. C. T. U., and her co-laborer, Mrs. Morse, of Jennings, La., visited my circuit in the interest of the W. C. T. U., and did not only do a great work on that line, but assisted me in a meeting at Dry Creek, which resulted in getting the church revived up; and on the thirteenth instant Rev. Chas. R. Montgomery, of Berwick, La., arrived, and we began the battle. Bro. Montgomery aimed, he fired, and he hit. He dug up the tap-roots of sin, and showed them to the people. Sinners were convicted, and came to the altar pleading for mercy. Backsliders were reclaimed, and the church greatly revived and built up. There were 17 accessions, and among them was Mr. J. T. Kent, the father of Rev. J. B. Kent, of Louisiana Conference. There were a number of conversions. Some will go to the Baptist Church. I have had a hard year's work; but it has been a labor of love. God has blessed me with 67 accessions; baptized 40 adults and 20 children, and to him be all the glory!"

Rev. I. T. Reames: "I will soon leave for the Annual Conference. Having served the people of this circuit for four years, I feel that I must give expression to my feelings of gratitude to God and to the kind people of the charge before leaving. Truly, 'the lines have fallen unto me in pleasant places.' I wish to make mention of some special tokens of appreciation—which have come in a very substantial way. In December, 1893, I was the recipient of a handsome gold watch, the price of which was $75. Last year there were given to us six 'Christmas turkeys.' This year a beautiful bicycle, which I used extensively in filling my appointments and visiting the people. Now, I want to give you some idea of the work done during the quadrennium. Not that I would reflect honor upon myself, but that the circuit may receive the honor and good name to which it is justly entitled. Two churches have been erected—one worth $1 000, and the other $1 200. The parsonage has received considerable attention from the ladies, and has been wonderfully improved; so that the church and parsonage property is worth about $2,400 more than it was four years ago. All this is due (or largely so) to the fact that our people of Rayville circuit are liberal, and are willing heartily to engage in such enterprises as the above. This year has been one of great bodily affliction throughout the charge. As a result, no revival meetings have been held, except one held by Bro. Morphis at Rayville, which was a blessing to our church and to the town. On Nov. 19 there was an election held in the parish to decide whether or not 'intoxicating liquors' should be sold, and the parish went dry by a majority of 222. Praise the Lord! That puts 'King Alcohol' out of the bounds of this circuit. Between seventy-five and one hundred members have been added to the church, quite a number of infants and adults have been baptized by the pastor, 23 couples have been united in marriage, and about 25 persons been laid to rest. And now I must take my departure to another field of labor, praying, as I go, the blessing of our loving heavenly Father on the dear people I leave; that 'God may make all grace abound' toward them, and more than repay them for the kindness we have received at their hands. And at last may we all meet again around our Father's throne in heaven, where the word 'farewell' is unknown."

MT. CARMEL CIRCUIT.

Mt. Carmel circuit, on the whole, is doing very well. Our assessment is about paid. Owing to the stringency of the times, we think we have done very well. Spiritually, we are progressing slowly. Our young are taking a great interest, and we look forward for great things in the future. During the year 38 persons have joined the church; 14 have been moved by letter, and 2 have died. We hope to show a good report at Conference. Pray for us.

Whereas, Rev. M. L. White has been our beloved and highly esteemed pastor for four years; And, whereas, The laws of the church require that he can not be with us another year; therefore, we, the members of the fourth Quarterly Conference, Mt. Carmel circuit, Enterprise district, Mississippi Conference, do hereby express our earnest sorrow at having to part with so good and faithful a pastor, and we will ever hold him and his family in kindest remembrence, praying that God will shower richest blessings upon them all through life. While our associations and services have been pleasant, together, we hope for him that his lot may be cast among a people who will appreciate his good qualities, even better than we have done, and we trust the time may come when it may please Conference to return him to us.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the Minutes of Quarterly Conference Record and a copy furnished the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication.

How is Tell It.

The best man is the happiest. Only he who prays without ceasing can rejoice evermore. Only he who is full of divine love and trust has perpetual peace and praise. There are two lessons from this thought: One is that true pleasure must be sought indirectly, by the pursuit of piety. The other is that piety is best professed indirectly through the exhibition of real happiness. God is honored when we shout, if there be a genuine ring in the shout. He gets glory from our song if we sing with the heart. Bliss shining in the countenance, peace reposing in the face, joy streaming from the soul at every outlet, give a louder testimony to the possession of something which hands and stocks can not convey, than any amount of creed coldly confessed. Be happy! Wesley said: "He who is not happy is not a Christian."—Zion's Herald.

How to Live.

Few men know how to live. We grow up at random, carrying into mature life the merely animal methods and motives which we had as little children. And it does not occur to us that all this must be changed; that much of it must be reversed; that life is the finest of the fine arts; that it has to be learned with lifelong patience. . . . Yet this is what Christianity is for—to teach men the art of life. And its whole curriculum lies in one word—"Learn of me." Unlike most education, this is almost purely personal; it is not to be had from books or lectures or creeds or doctrines. It is a study from the life. Christ never said much in mere words about the Christian graces. He lived them; he was them. Yet we do not merely copy him. We learn his art by living with him, like the old apprentices with their masters. —Prof. Drummond.

If it is worth while to be a Christian at all, it is worth while to be the highest type of a Christian. So seek to attain unto the largest measure of Christian usefulness, and the highest possible experience of Christian love.—Baltimore Advocate.

We begin to doubt the inspiration of the Bible only when we get tired trying to live up to it.

Scrofula in the Neck

The following is from Mrs. J. W. Tillbrook, wife of the Mayor of McKeesport, Penn.:

Willie Tillbrook.

"My little boy Willie, now 6 years old, two years ago had a bunch under one ear which the doctor said was Scrofula. He finally lanced it and it discharged for some time. We then began giving Willie Hood's Sarsaparilla and he improved very rapidly until the sore healed up. Last winter it broke out again, followed by Erysipelas. We again gave him Hood's Sarsaparilla with excellent results and he has had no more trouble. His cure is due to

DR. W. C. BLACK:

DEAR SIR: I am charmed with my Holman Bible, and know it will bring me pleasure many days. Accept my thanks for your promptness.

Yours, etc., S. W. HARTWELL.

Water Valley, Miss.

The Holman Bible for $1 65.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.65 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to Dec., '96. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2 45 instead of $1 65. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2 45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We are now prepared to fill orders for Bibles (both kinds) promptly.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

THE Electropoise

is a little instrument, weighing less than a pound, which when attached to the body under proper conditions, causes the whole system to absorb

OXYGEN—PURE OXYGEN
from the atmosphere. It introduces this potent, curative agent, oxygen, into the remotest and most recondite parts. Oxygen purifies the blood, it

VITALIZES EVERY ORGAN,
it makes war on disease, by destroying its producing cause. It eliminates the morbid and noxious elements that act injuriously or that

LOWER VITALITY.
It neutralizes or expels all poisons, either of malaria, contagion, or from the effects of powerful drugs. With the body plentifully and freely oxygenized blood, it is impossible for disease to exist, because the conditions that made it possible have been removed—burnt out.

SUPPLIED WITH OXYGEN

NOT A SURE CURE,
of course not; but, by its new method of applying oxygen, the Electropoise has often effected cures of chronic cases that were pronounced "incurable."

STRICKEN WITH PARALYSIS.

The following, which appeared in the Western Christian Advocate of May 22, 1895, has been inclosed to me, with requests from several sufferers from paralysis for particular information as to the "remedial" treatment quickly and effectually employed in the case referred to.

Similar inquiries came after notices in other papers:

[From the Western Christian Advocate.]

Dr. W. H. DePuy, on April 30, while preparing to leave the New York Christian Advocate office at the close of office hours, was suddenly stricken with paralysis, the stroke involving the right side. Fortunately several good friends among his associates at the publishing house were at hand, and remedial help was quickly obtained and proved so effectual that circulation was speedily restored and he was able to be removed to his uptown home. Failing to take the immediate rest which the serious nature of the attack required, after a few days he was again prostrated with paroxysms of numbness in the hand and arm, and since that time has been confined to his room. He is now steadily improving, and he expects, after a few weeks of further rest, to resume work on some partially completed books upon which he has long been engaged.

To these inquirers this brief response is cheerfully given. As soon as the nature of the attack was recognized, and while my friends were engaged in rubbing the side affected, another kindly, at my request, hastily called Mr. A. K. DuBois, of the Electropoise office, and the latter, whose office was near by, quickly responded and applied the Electropoise first to the left wrist, and a little later to the right ankle. Nothing or other medicine of any kind was used. I continued the application of the instrument during the night, and the next morning returned to the office feeling no other inconvenience from the attack except that of being much weakened in the stricken side. In the afternoon I attended a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Sunday School Union, of which I am a member. I now believe there would have been no early after effects. It had followed the advice of my more prudent friends and professional attendant. Later, during the occasional and severe attacks, the Electropoise was applied at or near the stricken parts of the body with speedy and unfailing relief, until they ceased to return. W. H. DEPUY.

Physicians, Scientists
and all thinking people are requested to thoroughly investigate the theory of and results that attend the use of the Electropoise.

Statesmen, Jurists,

Mississippi Conference.

We attended the Mississippi Conference from start to finish. No Bishop being present, Dr. C. G. Andrews was elected president. His presidency gave universal satisfaction. He presides with as much dignity and grace as if he had years of experience.

On the third day Bishop Duncan took charge. It hardly needs to be said that he is an admirable presiding officer, as he is already known throughout the church as the peer of anyone of our chief shepherds in this respect. His various talks from the chair, his missionary address and his sermon on Sunday were all of a high order. We missed his sermon owing to the fact that we occupied the pulpit of the Presbyterian Church at the same hour. It is spoken of by those who heard it as a sermon of great spiritual power. Dr. Featherston received high praise for the admirable manner in which he presided over the work of entertaining the Conference. We do not wish to accuse the Doctor of showing partiality, but we must be allowed to say that he gave the best Conference home to Rev. L. Carley and this editor. We were domiciled with Rev. C. E. Cunningham, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, to whom, as well as to his accomplished wife, we are indebted for a most delightful week.

Being busy with publisher's work, we were unable personally to write up the proceedings of the Conference. Rev. W. H. Huntley brought us under obligations by writing up the proceedings of the first three days. The rest of the session was written up by Rev. M. M. Black.

Missionary Anniversary.

The missionary anniversary was held on Saturday night. The treasurer's report showed an increase of about $100 over last year, not including $800 collected for the Fearn Mission.

Rev. T. W. Adams delivered a very able address on home missions. Bishop Duncan followed in a masterly discourse on missionary work in general. A collection was taken aggregating $104. In his address Bro. Adams stated that his charge, Moss Point, had paid this year $500 for missions.

The following appointments and transfers were made at the Mississippi Conference:

Professor in Millsaps College, J. A. Moore; financial agent for Millsaps College, T. S. West; students in Millsaps College, A. H Shannon and C. W. Crisler; colporteur, R. W. Bailey; editor NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, W. C. Black; transferred to St. Louis Conference, W. H. Lewis, and to the Louisiana Conference, W. H. Roberts.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

FIRST DAY.

The eighty-second session of the Conference opened this (Wednesday) morning, with full attendance, under pleasant circumstances. The Christian hospitality of Yazoo City seems sensible of no strain under the burden invited at last Conference and now cheerfully undertaken. The absence of Bishop Hendrix, while generally deplored, gave the members of the Conference opportunity of delighting to honor a number of its faithful servants and honored members. Bishop Hendrix has not yet landed from his long circuit, and is not expected before the twentieth instant upon American shores. Our other Bishops are engaged, and the opening hour found the Conference preparing to elect its president from the ranks of its elders and settle to its work. Dr. J. W. Harmon, venerable, yet always young, was made temporary chairman of the Conference. Dr. Andrews, secretary of the last session of the Conference, called the roll of members, nearly all answering "present" to their names. On motion, the choice of the Conference for president of the session was effected by ballot, as seen in the result following: C. G. Andrews, D. D., 74; W. C. Black, D. D., 32; R. J. Jones, 3; R. D. Norsworthy, 1; T. L. Mellen, 2; W. L. C. Hunnicutt, D. D., 5; H. W. Featherston, D. D., 2; J. M. Weems, D. D., 1.

Twice have the members of this Conference thus honored Dr. Charles Green Andrews. Courteous and gracious with all men, the true Christian nature, childlike in its faith and sweetness, the graces of the character increasedly effective through a noble physical bearing—peerless, able and gentle withal—Dr. Andrews exhibits a most admirable type of Mississippi Methodism. Assuming the chair with tender words of appreciation, the president, leaving the secretary's desk, to which he has been elected some thirty successive times, made place for Rev. John A. B. Jones, who received unanimous call to its serious duties. Revs. M. M. Black, H. M. Ellis, J. W. Chambers, W. L. Linfield, J. G. Galloway, W. M. Stevens and George H. Galloway were made assistant secretaries. Opening and closing hours for the sessions were determined, welcome and place for visitors arranged, and committees appointed upon the regular work of the Conference.

Mr. Leech, representing the Publishing House at Nashville, was presented to the Conference. Communications from our Missionary Secretaries relative to mission fields, and urging their increasing importance, was received and referred to proper committee. Similar disposition was made of reports from Dr. Morton, Secretary of Church Extension; Edward McGehee Female College, Whitworth College—all referred to proper committees.

On motion, Question 1, "Who are admitted on trial?" was deferred until later until relations of supply and demand in the ranks were ascertained.

Under Question 20, the call by districts began with the Vicksburg district. Dr. J. M. Weems, P. E., in a few earnest words outlined the results in his district during the year. Rev. C. A. Powell, sincere and vigorous, declared the plentiful exercise of himself and fellow-workmen upon the Seashore district during the year. Rev. R. J. Jones exhibited satisfaction from a brief review of the affairs of Meridian district. Rev. L. Carley, speaking for his district, asserted confidence in his assistants and his pleasure in the success of their labors. Rev. C. McDonald pronounced this, his fourth year, to be the best of the series upon the Brandon district. Rev. E. H. Mounger gave instructive account of his fourth year's service upon Jackson district. Rev. L. S. Jones, for Natchez district, made attractive statements. Rev. R. D. Norsworthy, for Brookhaven district, said its progress had been excellent.

Dr. W. B. Murrah made brief remark relative to the happy circumstances of Millsaps College.

The following names of elders were called, their characters passed and their work reviewed: Revs. C. G. Andrews, W. H. Lewis, John D. Crymes, T. W. Brown, A. D. Miller, F. M. Williams, C. D. Cecil, J. P. Drake, W. M. Stevens, G. A. Guice, J. W. Crisler, H. M. Ellis, T. W. Adams, P. Howard, R. B. Downer, R. Selby, N. B. Harmon, J. H. Holland, J. G. Sibley, G. W. Ferrer, R. S. Woodward.

Memorial from Enterprise District Conference was presented by Rev. H. C. Brown, secretary, recommending division of the Education Funds between male and female colleges. Referred to committee.

Instructive diversion from the regular channel was initiated by the president of the Conference, and prolonged in useful, eloquent suggestions by other members, as to the attitude and opportunities of the ministry with the colored churches. Opportunity was declared ample and duty clear to preach as often as possible for our colored brethren.

W. O. Saddler was introduced as a young brother, zealous in the affairs of Epworth Leagues, and equipped for assisting the work of inaugurating Leagues in all the pastoral charges.

After the announcements of preaching at 3 P. M. by Rev. M. L. Burton, and at 7 P. M. by Rev. H. E. Partridge, the Conference united in singing the verse beginning,

"O, to Grace, how great a debtor"— and was adjourned with benediction by Rev. W. B. Hines.

SECOND DAY.

The morning hour for assembling found the members in their places responsive in song to the lines of "Rock of Ages," and to prayer led by Rev. H. P. Lewis.

The pews, as the hours advanced, were brightened by the presence and attentive faces of many ladies. Alert and sensitive to speech, they followed the movements of the session with the true interest of daughters of the church.

The president, taking the chair, proceeded to business. Under the affectionate and watchful guidance of Dr. Andrews, the proceedings to-day were, as yesterday, smooth and complete as if from hands skilled by long episcopal practice.

An incident, to become historical in the records of the Mississippi Conference, occurred after the reading of a report from Dr. James Burrus Fearn. The last Conference pledged and secured funds for sending this young Christian physician and minister to China. Dr. Fearn is nephew to Dr. Andrews. The letter this morning from China breathed a spirit greatly enjoyed by those who heard. After its reading a motion to adopt Dr. Fearn as the Mississippi Conference's missionary was passed. Special prayers was offered by the Conference led by Dr. W. L. C. Hunnicutt for Dr. Fearn and the missions of China. Messages of affection and sympathy were ordered sent our young brother.

Dr. David Morton, General Secretary of Church Extension, reached the city and was presented to the Conference. It came about in their remarks that Dr. Andrews and Dr. Morton are exactly equal in age. Each called attention to the more venerable appearance of the other, and neither declared the year or day especial upon which both were born.

The time of evening service was devoted to the interests of Church Extension, Dr. Morton in charge.

It was stated that Bishop W. W. Duncan would reach Yazoo City to-night.

The remainder of the session was employed in passing character and receiving reports of the ministers. Secretaries were busy winding up their work of receiving and tabulating returns for the year.

Adjournment followed the benediction by Rev. D. G. W. Ellis.

Afternoon service, conducted by Rev. W. B. Lewis, was attended and enjoyed by a full audience.

The sermon was well adapted to help all who heard, Christian and sinner alike.

The weather continues bracing and delightful.

THIRD DAY.

The morning was clear and sunny, soon substituting the early ice and chilly air with the temperature of a perfect Southern day. Nine o'clock found Bishop W. W. Duncan in the president's chair, opening the session with fervent praise for blessings over all and prayer for divine direction in the issues of the day.

Reports from connectional officers were read and referred to committees.

A pleasant diversion was given in the action of Rev. J. A. B. Jones, secretary of the Conference. Addressing the Conference in graceful words, he referred to his consecutive service for twenty-nine years at the secretary's desk under Dr. Charles G. Andrews, and now, with the arrival of the Bishop and consequent relief of Dr. Andrews from the duties of president of the Conference, Bro. Jones prayed the return of his chief to his old place at the desk. The motion received unanimous assent, after which the Conference proceeded to regular work.

The names of Bros. Price, Merchant, Nicholson, Hines, Harris, Flowers, Bancroft, Vance, Pugh, Caldwell, Evans, Sandell and Parker were called and referred, excepting J. M. Pugh, to Committee on Conference Relations. Bro. Pugh was recommended by Presiding Elder Powell for the regular service. The names of Rev. R. A. Sibley and N. B. Young were referred by their presiding elders to the Committee on Conference Relations.

Bishop Duncan showed little evidence of the fatigue of his rapid trip to reach the Conference. His hair has silvered somewhat since the Mississippi Conference first saw him in 1886, when assembled at Port Gibson. His presidency then greatly endeared him to his brethren, and his welcome this morning evinced the pleasure of the Conference at seeing him again. His wise, kindly words found instant way to the heads and hearts of his hearers, as with satisfaction and dispatch he moved through the routine of the session.

Considerable interest sprang from discussion of the report of the Board of Colportage, the Conference dividing, with T. L. Mellen and J. M. Weems leading the divisions. The report, on suggestion of Bishop Duncan, was withdrawn, to afford time for its digestion and wise disposal by the members when it is presented again to-morrow.

The large hospitality of Yazoo City is becoming more manifest with the advancing days. The little city, compact and prosperous, its foot pressing the left bank of the river whence it derives its name, sweeps back and upwards, stopped half a mile away by the long hill line which marks a boundary of the great Delta. Our Methodism is firmly established here and the future beams with promise.

Rev. Isaac L. Peebles conducted three o'clock service to the pleasure and profit of the congregation.

FOURTH DAY.

Conference met at nine A. M., Bishop Duncan in the chair. Bro. T. W. Brown led in prayer. After minutes of previous session had been read and adopted, Secretary Andrews stated that the cost of printing minutes of last Conference was $190.82. Question 20 was called, and the characters of all the brethren not previously acted upon were passed.

W. W. Hopper was located at his own request. The name of J. S. Parker was referred for a supernumerary relation. The Conference requested the Bishop to appoint C. W. Crisler and R. H. Shannon as students in Millsaps College. On motion the names of J. M. Pugh, V. V. Boone, and W. B. Hines were referred for a superannuated relation. R. H. Barr having stood an approved examination, was advanced to the class of the fourth year. The orders of Rev. L. T. Cole, an elder in the Campbellite Church, were recognized by the Conference, he having applied for admission into our church, and he was received into the traveling connection.

When the name of J. D. Crymes was called, his presiding elder, Rev. J. M. Weems, made complaint against him of insubordination in employing a female evangelist, and propounded the following questions which were ruled on by Bishop Duncan:

1. Does the Discipline of the M. E. Church, South, recognize the employment of women as preachers of the Word, with the authority to occupy its pulpits in reading the Holy Scriptures and in preaching the same as ministers of the Lord Jesus Christ? Ans.—It does not.

2. Does the Discipline of the M. E. Church, South, authorize a pastor in charge of a station, circuit or mission of said church to invite a woman claiming to be a minister of the Lord Jesus Christ to occupy the pulpits of said church to expound the Scriptures as a preacher of the Word? Ans.—It does not.

3. And does not such invitation given and services so rendered offend against the authority and order of said church and the teaching of the Holy Oracles? Ans.—It does.

A motion having been made to pass the character of Bro. Crymes, a substitute was offered and adopted to the effect that his character be passed, provided he accept in good faith and abide by the rulings of the chair upon the foregoing points.

The following having previously been examined and passed upon, were admitted into full connection: Thos. Jones Norsworthy, Matthew J. Miller, Elbert T. Breland, Chas. F. Emery, A. H. Shannon, John D. Ellis, McKendree Marvin Black, Thos. H. King, Robt. E. Rutledge, Waldo W. Moore, William M. Williams.

The Bishop's remarks to the class admitted into full connection were peculiarly striking and appropriate, frequent touches of humor serving to arouse a lively interest in his words of wisdom and sound advice. Piety, studiousness and industry were the three points he emphasized.

The report of the Church Extension Board, which was next read and adopted, stated that during the thirteen years this Board has been in existence 114 churches have been aided within the bounds of the Mississippi Conference to the amount of $9,172.00. Receipts from all sources during the present year have been $1,889 31, being an increase over last year of $305.16. It was recommended that the Ladies' Aid Societies in the various charges be changed into Parsonage and Home Mission Societies. A communication was read from W. H. Cassell, a nurseryman of Canton, Miss., making inquiry as to the care of the fruit trees which he had kindly donated to a number of parsonages of this Conference. Several of the brethren then testified to having eaten delicious fruit borne by these trees.

The Conference then adjourned to meet at three P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

At the hour appointed Bishop Duncan took the chair. The Joint Board of Finance made its report, which was adopted. The importance of a uniform observance of Veteran's Day appointed by the Board was emphasized.

The report of the Committee on Publishing Interests was next duly submitted and adopted. It spoke in high terms of our Sunday-school literature, of our general organ, the Nashville Advocate; the Bi-monthly Review, and the Missionary Review, and included the following in regard to the Conference organ: "The NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, under the wise and conservative management of Dr. Black, is meeting all the requirements of a first-class organ, and we earnestly and cordially recommend it to the patronage of the whole Conference as a vehicle through which the church can express her thought, advocate her enterprises, defend her policies, and uphold her faith. We are gratified to learn that the paper, which is the property of the church, is again on a solid foundation, and has had a gratifying increase in circulation during the past year. We recommend the re appointment of the present Publishing Committee, and the re-appointment of Dr. W. C. Black, editor of the paper." — T. P. Ball, chairman.

The following resolution, signed by H. M. Ellis and C. A. Powell, was heartily adopted.

Resolved, That we deprecate the fact that some of our preachers interest themselves more in the circulation of the Methodist and the Tennessee Methodist than in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

Next came the report of the Orphans' Home Committee, providing for the immediate establishment of an orphanage under the joint management of a Board of Directors consisting of three ministers and two laymen from the Mississippi and the North Mississippi Conferences. It was recommended that a collection be taken in each charge for this cause the first Sunday in April, and that Sunday-school superintendents and presidents of Epworth Leagues be enlisted in this work. Before the adoption of the report the ADVOCATE editor and Rev. A. F. Watkins each addressed the Conference in behalf of this new benevolent enterprise. A collection was then taken, and responses came in so rapidly and generously that in less than half an hour $2,082 50 was raised for Methodist orphanage.

The Conference then adjourned to meet in memorial session Sunday night.

SUNDAY'S SERVICES.

The Baptist and Presbyterian and the two colored Methodist Churches of the city were courteously offered to the Conference, and were occupied both morning and night by the brethren appointed.

At eleven o'clock Bishop Duncan preached in the Methodist Church to a packed house from Phil. iv, 19: "My God shall supply all your need through the riches of his glory by Christ Jesus." It was a most edifying, soul-stirring sermon. Several times almost the entire audience was moved to tears. Frequent flashes of humor served to deepen the interest. The point most emphasized was that God does not pledge himself to give us all we want, but to give us what we need. After the sermon the following were ordained deacons: Traveling preachers — Thos. J. Norsworthy, Chas. F. Emery, Wm. M. Williams; local preachers—Chas. W. Huff, Needham E. Alford.

At three P. M. Dr. J. M. Weems preached a strong sermon on the work of the Holy Spirit, after which Bishop Duncan ordained the following traveling preachers elders: J. W. Tinnin, Geo. H. Thompson, Wm. T. Griffin, C. C. Evans, B. W. Lewis, Jas. T. Abney, W. J. Dawson, M. L. White.

At seven P. M. the Conference met in memorial session, followed by a communion service. Three preachers died during the year, namely, D. A. Little, J. W. Ellison and W. E. Ballard. A sketch of Bro. Little was read by Rev. R. S. Woodward, one of Bro. Ellison by W. H. Huntley, and one of W. E. Ballard by W. B. Lewis. After the reading of these papers remarks of tribute were made by a number of the brethren. It was a most precious service.

Rev. H. G. Hawkins delivered a very interesting lecture to the children at three o'clock P. M. in the Presbyterian Church on Japan and her Customs.

MONDAY MORNING'S SESSION.

After religious exercises, the following statistics for 1895 were given by the Joint Board of Finance: Local preachers, 144; infants baptized, 976; adults, 809. Members, 36,133, being an increase over last year of 1,240. Number of Epworth Leagues, 32; Epworth League members, 932. Number of Sunday-schools, 350; Sunday-school scholars, 16,245. Number of churches, 394—value of same, $398,700. Number of pastoral charges, 121. Number of parsonages, 100—value of same, $88,102. Number of district parsonages, 4.

Report of Colportage Board mentioned failure of firm of Laird & Dominick, said failure involving a loss of over $2,000 to our Publishing House, and recommended the appointment of R. W. Bailey as Conference colporteur. A resolution was adopted urging that all our preachers and people purchase their books and Sunday-school literature from our own colporteur.

Much of the morning session was consumed in discussing the proposition to authorize the establishment under charter of a Conference Book Depository, the proposition being finally voted down.

The report on the state of the church spoke of the large number of young people who will pray in public, congratulated the church upon the numerous revivals which have been held, and called attention to the disloyalty to the church manifested in some sections. Certain immoralities, as drunkenness, profane swearing, Sabbath breaking, gambling and dancing were mentioned as on the decrease.

The report on the Bible cause called attention to the fact that the lesson papers and quarterlies have driven the Bible from nearly all our Sunday-schools.

Rev. J. W. McLaurin then addressed the Conference in behalf of the American Bible Society.

A resolution levying an assessment of $1,000 on the Conference for the Bible cause was adopted without a dissenting vote.

J. W. Sandell, J. M. Cowan and J. S. Parker were placed on the supernumerary list. The following were superannuated: T. Price, D. Merchant, A. B. Nicholson, H. J. Harris, E. A. Flowers, G. Bancroft, J. W. Harmon, J. A. Vance, H. R. Caldwell, J. H. Evans, R. A. Sibley, N. B. Young, W. B. Hines, J. M. Hugh, V. V. Boone.

W. D. Dominick was located at his own request. Robt. Lee Phillips, Robt. A. Sibley, Thos. B. Cottrell, Geo. M. Hull, Geo. W. Huff were continued on trial.

The report on Sabbath observance, which was unanimously adopted, condemned in strong terms the reading by Christian people of Sunday newspapers, the use of Sunday trains, and the making of Sunday a special day of social visiting. The Conference secretary was authorized to memorialize the Legislature to make some provision for a better observance of the Sabbath day by restricting railroad traffic as far as lies in the power of the Legislature so to do.

Conference then adjourned to meet at three P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

All other business having been disposed of, the time was occupied in hearing reports from committees and speeches from the college presidents.

Report on the League emphasized the importance of organizing Leagues wherever there are Sunday-schools. Permission was granted to raise $100 toward paying the expenses of the second annual Epworth League Conference, and also the putting an unsalaried organizer in the field.

Much confusion having arisen as to moneys paid in and moneys reporting, provision was made for an Auditing Committee for the next Conference, nominations to be made by the presiding elders.

After the reading of the report of the Board of Education, President Murrah, of Millsaps; President J. W. Chambers, of Whitworth; President T. B. Holloman, of East Mississippi Female College, each addressed the Conference in behalf of their respective institutions. Port Gibson Female College was represented by Rev. H. M. Ellis.

Millsaps College reports an enrollment of 155. It has 21 students preparing for the ministry. Thirty of its students are the sons of preachers. Each of the four female colleges reported an increase in attendance over last session.

Rev. F. M. Keen introduced a resolution strongly condemning lynch law, and recommending that our preachers speak out upon the subject from their pulpits, which was unanimously adopted.

Resolutions were passed expressive of sympathy to A. B. Nicholson and D. Merchant, both of whom were unable to attend the Conference on account of bodily affliction.

The next Conference will be held at Port Gibson.

After the reading of the appointments and the singing of the Doxology, the Conference adjourned with the benediction by Bishop Duncan.

HOME CIRCLE.

THE BIBLE.

I have yet the dear old Book,
That lay upon the stand,
In which she often used to look,
And always at her hand;
The corners rounded are with age,
The leaves are worn and thin,
And dim the lines on many a page
She so delighted in.

A half hour's rest in household toil
For needed strength she sought,
And in the light of fragrant oil
She found the place she sought;
And heavy labor turned to love,
And duty led away
To visions of the land above,
A Sabbath hour each day.

The Book remains more blessed still,
Because of her dear eyes,
That saw therein God's wondrous will,
And saw not otherwise;
For thus she found the way to him
Who dawn to evening late,
And through the valley, lone and dim,
Brought her to his dear gate.

Save the Children.

Many a boy is made a drunkard at his father's table, or by food prepared by his own mother's hands. The wine upon the sideboard, the cider in the cellar, the brandied peaches, the mince pies with brandy in them, along with the salt and pepper and spices which irritate the stomach, burn the throat and excite and benumb the nerves of taste, alle ultivate an evil appetite and beget a desire for stimulants, which in certain temperaments is quite likely to send a boy to ruin at railroad speed.

Mothers are also largely responsible for the ill health and the bad habits of their children. Ill-cooked and half cooked food, which can only be eaten when stimulated with salt, are washed down with tea and coffee, with all sorts of condiments and stimulants, produce bad results in coming days; while plain, simple, healthful food, carefully prepared and cooked, enables the rosy-cheeked children to laugh at the doctors, and resist many temptations which might otherwise overcome them.

The mother who is wise will guard her little ones from many ills, and especially will do nothing that could subject them to temptation or lead them astray from the righteous path.

There is a story of a boy who had signed the temperance pledge, as many other boys might well do, and save themselves abundance of sorrow and trouble. One day his mother was cooking and she said to him:

"Bring me the brandy. I want it for some of these pies."

Davy obeyed. But as he went the thought came to him:

"Can I, a temperance boy, carry a brandy jug?" Hurrying back to the kitchen, he said:

"Mama, I can't carry the brandy jug—I've signed the pledge; but I'll stir the batter while you go."

Without a word, the mother gave into his little hand the spoon and went herself to bring the jug. She felt a strange, choking sensation in her throat; but she walked up those steps with a firm tread, and seized the jug. When she came down the dear little fellow was beating away at the dough. His eyes followed her as she went to the sink and began to empty out the contents of the jug.

"What are you doing, mama?"

"I'm emptying out the brandy. We'll not have any more in our mince pies."

"O mama! I'm so glad! Then I can eat them too, can't I, mama?"

"Yes, my dear; and mama will never make anything again that her boy can not eat."

"Oh, I'm so glad we're going to have temperance piee!"

Davy fairly danced up and down in the kitchen, as the brandy gurgled into the sink out of the jug. And his mother afterwards took care to make pies which her boy could eat with safety. Many other mothers might profitably follow such an example, and banish from their tables that which lays the foundation for misery, sin and death. —The Christian.

Hard to Efface His Image.

The beauty of the following incident lies in its truth, and in the light it throws upon the better side of human nature. The kindness which these men and women, many of them depraved and wicked, showed to a forlorn child, proves how hard it is for hearts to quite efface the image of God in which they are created.

Four years ago a poor laborer named Halletza left Hungary, and came to this country to prepare a home for his wife and boy. The wife soon died, leaving the baby.

Halletza worked hard and saved every penny; but three years passed before he could rent a little cabin and make it comfortable. He was hungry for the sight of the child, to hear it speak, to hold it in his arms; but he could not go after it to Hungary. He had not the money, and besides, to give up his work last Winter when work was so scarce was to sentence him to idleness and starvation. All that he could do was to send money for the child's passage, asking that it should be sent to him in the care of some emigrants coming from Hungary to New York.

Its guardian was old and dull of wit. She did not know any emigrants who were coming to America; but she bought the ticket and tied it about the child's neck with a tag, on which was written its father's name and address, and a few words begging all good Christians for the love of God to give it food and drink.

The four-year old boy, with his blue eyes and fair hair, his little bundle of clothes at his side, was found by the astonished guard sitting alone in an emigrant train leaving Pesth.

The man shared his own meals with him. Then the ragged, disorderly mob that crowded the car gathered round him in amazement and pity. They fought with each other, but they spoke gently to this frightened little tot. The women made room for him beside their own children, and at night when he cried for home, they rocked him to sleep in their arms.

In their care he crossed the Alps, and passed through Italy to Genoa, where they carried him on board the steamer for New York.

He was among strangers again, but the story of the friendless baby was told through the ship. After that somebody always was ready to feed him, to rock him to sleep, to hold him on the knee. The cabin passengers made up a purse for him. The women in the steerage washed his little aprons and frocks, and mended them.

When he reached New York his friends bade him good-bye, and placed him on a Pennsylvania train. Some kind soul telegraphed his father, and that evening when the cars rolled up to the station of the hill town, a gaunt workingman caught the child in his arms, and, with tears rolling down his cheeks, carried him to his home.—Selected.

The Prompt Clerk.

A young man was commencing life as a clerk. One day his employer said to him:

"Now, to-morrow that cargo of cotton must be got out and weighed, and we must have a regular account of it."

He was a young man of energy. This was the first time he had been entrusted to superintend the execution of this work. He made his arrangements over night, spoke to the men about their carts and horses, and resolved to begin very early in the morning. He instructed the laborers to be there at half-past four o'clock. So they set to work and the thing was done, and about ten or eleven o'clock his master came in, and, seeing him sitting in the counting-house, looked very black, supposing that his commands had not been executed.

"I thought," said his master, "you were requested to get out that cargo this morning?"

"It is all done," said the young man, "and here is an account of it."

He never looked behind him from that moment—never! His character was fixed, confidence was established. He was found to be the man to do the thing promptly. He very soon came to be the one that could not be spared; he was as necessary to the firm as one of the partners. He was a religious man, went through a life of great benevolence, and at his death was able to leave his children an ample fortune.

Religious Training.

More and more there is growing a disposition among parents to permit all matters of religious observance to be with their offspring mere matters of choice or preference. Your child must learn French and German and drawing; but he shall learn his catechism and his Bible lesson and a reverent observance of this holy day if he chooses, and not otherwise. A more dismal and irrational folly it is not easy to conceive of! I do not say that there may not have been folly in another and an opposite direction. I am not unmindful that religious teaching has been sometimes made a dreary and intolerable burden. But surely we can correct one excess (not, I apprehend, very frequent or very harmful) without straightway flying to an opposite and worse one. And so I plead with those who are parents to train your children to ways of reverent familiarity with God's Word, God's house, and God's day. Let them understand that something higher than your taste or preference makes these things sacred and binding, and constrains you to imbue them with your spirit. And, that they may do this the more effectually, give them, I entreat you, that mightiest teaching, which consists in your own consistent and devout example.—Bishop H. C. Potter.

Bad Reading.

The other day a little fellow sat reading a book, when suddenly he saw his father coming along; he put the book out of sight, and stood up in great confusion, waiting for his father to pass by. Now, I didn't like that; and I herewith advise that boy, and all other boys, never to read anything they are ashamed of. Open out every page you read, full and free, in God's light and presence, as you must; and if it is not fit to be opened so, do not read it at all.

Bad reading is deedly poison; and I, for one, would like to see the poisoners—that is, the men who furnish it—punished like any other murderers; yes, and more, it's far worse to kill the soul than to kill the body.

In my opinion, parents are not half watchful enough in this matter, and if I were you, young folks, I wouldn't stand it.—Selected.

One of the great mysteries of the Christian life is the fact that we lighten the burdens and mitigate the sorrows of our own lives by ministering relief and sympathy to others who are suffering and sorrowing.

HYGIENE.

Alcohol as a Medicine.

"There is a grave responsibility resting on the physician who prescribes alcoholic liquor. It may arouse in a susceptible patient a dormant inherited tendency to drink. He may, by authorizing its use during the period of convalescence, fix a habit upon a patient of feeble will which the latter will never be able to shake off. No physician who realizes this great moral responsibility will be willing to accept it habitually. He certainly knows that the best medical authorities agree that alcoholic intoxicants are rarely used as a medicine; and at best they are dangerous remedies; and that the less they are resorted to, the better for both the brain and body, the better for his well-being, physical and moral. Furthermore, every physician owes it to his profession to teach his patients the utter fallacy of the common belief that alcohol is an article of food value. It has none whatever.

"The use of intoxicants in any quantity whatever, and at any time, is entirely useless and unnecessary. Furthermore, the continued use of them gradually induces structural degradations and functional derangements of the great bodily organs, thus leading to the gravest physical disorders. Alcohol is a poison, and nothing more; a poison which exercises its paralyzing, narcotizing influence in exact proportion to the quantity consumed and the power of the consumer's physical system to resist its poisonous action. If every intelligent physician would thus correct old errors and disseminate a knowledge of the truth, there would be a great impetus given to the effort to pulverize the rum power."—Toledo Blade.

Catching Cold.

Very severe colds are caught indoors, the result of indigestion or foul air. A cold is frequently brought on by eating a hearty dinner, becoming mentally absorbed for two or three hours immediately afterwards, and retiring to a warm, close room. The food is not digested, the temperature of the body is raised by the exertions of the stomach, the sleep is broken, and the individual rises chilled and ill. Had relaxation followed the dinner, and the room been supplied with refreshing air, everything would have been different.—Presbyterian Messenger.

I could give abundant testimony that the use of alcoholic drinks is one of the strongholds of unchastity, but it is not necessary: you all know this. With the reign of universal temperance its worst forms will, I believe, disappear, and whatever of it that remained could, without doubt, be easily managed by the right kind of education, and a knowledge that happiness is the result of obedience to the laws of life, and that misery comes from disobedience to the same. —Dr. M. L. Holbrook, in Journal of Hygiene.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

BEATEN BISCUIT.—To a quart of flour take a large tablespoonful of lard and a teaspoonful of salt. Mix with cold sweet milk and water—half and half—into a stiff dough, lay it on marble or a wooden board, and beat it with a club of hickory or poplar wood till the dough becomes blistered and nearly as soft as yeast powder dough. Roll it half an inch thick, cut out with a biscuit-cutter, prick with a kitchen fork three rows of holes clear through to the bottom. Bake in a moderate oven, and when done, allow them to remain a few moments longer, to brown a little more thoroughly. Break open and butter.—Selected.

CREAM TOAST.—Cream toast is a delightful, old-fashioned supper dish, not at all like its modern substitute—milk toast. Heat the cream by setting the dish containing it in a dish of boiling water. When the cream is thoroughly heated, salt it and drop thin slices of delicate brown toast in it. When all the toast is dipped serve what hot cream remains in a gravy-boat. As the toast is served, pour a little cream from the boat over it. This toast must be served very hot.—Exchange.

OBITUARIES.

DUKE—Col. JAMES JEFFERSON DUKE was born in Putnam county, Ga., Dec. 9, 1819. His parents soon moved to Newton county, where most of his boyhood was spent. About this time the Emory College was established, and by the Methodist people as a manual labor school, and the subject of this sketch was one of the first to matriculate. While he was attending this school President Van Buren called for volunteers to aid in removing the Cherokees to their new home beyond the Mississippi. Young Mr. Duke, together with several of his school-fellows, joined the company then forming at Covington and marched to the scene of the disturbance in North Georgia. After the Indian troubles were over he removed with his widowed mother into the new county which the removal of the Indians had left open to settlement. Thus he became one of the pioneer settlers of Heard county, Ga.

In due course of time he was married to Miss Atlanta F. Tait, and opened a farm of his own near Franklin, the county seat.

After a few years he and many of his neighbors and relatives removed to Claiborne parish, La., where the last forty years of his noble life were spent.

Col. Duke joined the M. E. Church, South, in his early manhood, and remained a consistent member of the same until God called him to his reward in heaven.

Col. Duke was elected to represent his parish in the Legislature in 1875, thus serving his country in its most critical period.

Bro. Duke died on the second day of October, the current year, 1895.

It was the privilege of the writer to be Col. Duke's pastor in 1893 and 1894, and he feels safe in saying that there were few better men in Claiborne parish than Col. Duke. He was true to his country, true to his church and to his God. While in Claiborne parish his membership was at Lisbon, where some of the truest and best of men held their membership, and Col. Duke was regarded as one of the best and most important of the Official Board. He was ready with his money and influence for any duty put upon him. He had a big soul in him; loved his friends and his church. The pastor had no better friend and counsellor, no better neighbor.

Col. Duke raised a large family of respected sons and daughters. His home was the preacher's home—and the home of a friend or a stranger that perchanced to drop in for shelter and food. This dear, good man was best known in his home. It was there that you could get close to him and study his real worth. In his home he was tender as a child, and was as much devoted to his dear ones as though their every comfort and happiness depended solely on him.

His last illness was brief. The end soon came, and his mortal remains were laid away to rest in the Lisbon Cemetery by the side of his loving wife, who had preceded him about twenty years

May God bless his dear ones left behind! God bless his precious memory to the good of his friends! He loved the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. His home was never without it, and may it still visit and cheer his home in their sorrow.

The writer sheds a tear of sympathy for his family as he pens these lines. But, dear ones, God has taken thy precious jewel to himself. Be faithful and meet him in heaven.

R. M. BLOCKER.

Jeanerette, La.

BUBENZA—Mr. CHRISTIAN BUBENZA, the subject of this sketch, was born in Germany, Aug. 21, 1842, and in 1848, at the age of six years, came with his parents to America, and settled in the State of Indiana, where he grew to manhood. In 1866 he came to Louisiana, and settled in Avoyelles parish, where he has continued to reside until his death, which took place at his home near Bunkie, Nov. 10, 1895.

He was happily married to Miss Clara Cheatham, of Avoyelles parish, on Aug. 26, 1869, and by this union became the father of eleven children, two of whom preceded him to the eternal world.

Bro. Bubenza was a member of the Masonic Lodge of Evergreen, La., and in his death they have lost one of their most worthy and useful members, and this community and parish one of its best and truest citizens.

As a husband and father, he was devoted, thoughtful and kind; and few men of our acquaintance during the past years of financial stringency have succeeded better than he in providing liberally for his family's comfort.

In faith he was a Presbyterian; but, as there was no church of this denomination near, his sympathies and support were given to the Methodist Church, of which his wife and daughter are members.

His death was sudden and unexpected, being sick only one week. A few hours before the end came he called his family around him and calmly gave them instructions regarding his business and as to his burial. On being questioned by his wife as to his prospects for eternity, he said: "My mother's prayers have been to me a source of restraint in temptation and of encouragement in the performance of duty during my whole life of fifty-three years, and now I am fully trusting in Jesus, and am not afraid to die."

Thus a good man has fallen on sleep to await the resurrection of the just. He leaves an aged mother, a wife, nine children, and a host of relatives, to mourn his loss. God grant that while sorrow only sees the lifeless clay, and, with broken and bleeding heart, murmurs, "Woe is me," that faith, offspring of sorrow, may gently lead them from the gloom-enshrouded sepulchre up to Him who has said, "I am the resurrection and the life!"

KENDALL—Dr. WM. T. KENDALL died Oct. 30, 1895 aged fifty-four years. He was born in Crawfordsville Ga., July 8, 1841. He came with his parents to Canton, Miss., in 1843. His mother dying when he was about four years of age, he was reared by his grandmother in Baltimore

In his eighteenth year he went to New Orleans to study medicine. At nineteen he entered the Confederate Army, in which he continued to the close of the war. For a time he was captain of a company of scouts. At the close of the war he was filling the position of surgeon in Meridian. In May, 1865, he commenced the practice of medicine in Attala county, and on Sept. 21, of the same year, he was most happily married to Miss Sarah Bryce Wyse, who, with two sons and two daughters, survive him. He went to Baltimore in 1866, where he completed his course and graduated in medicine. He practiced successfully for seventeen years in Attala county. He moved to Meridian in 1883, where he established a good practice and remained until his death. He was popular not only from his skill in his profession, but from his social qualities.

He was a member of the Methodist Church from his early manhood, and for several years was a steward. During the last two years his religion has been of a more hopeful and aggressive type than formerly. He thought for himself, reached his own conclusions, and adhered to them.

He was a devoted husband and father, an earnest and faithful friend, a lover of truth and honesty, the friend of the church and his pastor, was kind to the poor, and always had a heart to sympathize with the unfortunate and suffering.

I visited him often during his illness, which was of about four months' duration. I found him always ready for religious conversation and prayer, which always proved a comfort. He suffered greatly, but was patient and submissive. He often expressed himself as willing and ready to go or stay, as the will of God should be.

He is sadly missed in all the relations of life. The respect shown him by the physicians of the city was beautiful. All of the pall-bearers were physicians. Best of all, "he died in the faith."

R. S. WOODWARD.

PARKER—MARY R. PARKER, wife of W. T. Parker, and eldest daughter of Rev. R. A. Sibley, of the Mississippi Conference, was born in Newton county, Miss., Feb. 15, 1853; was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, in her seventh year, at Bethel Church, Jefferson county, Miss., to wit: August, 1866; was married to W. T. Parker in the Methodist Church in Trenton, Smith county, Miss., April 10, 1872, Rev. J. L. Vieson, L. D., officiating.

She was the mother of ten children, six of whom preceded her to glory, they dying in infancy. She was a very great sufferer in body for years. God only knows what she did endure in physical suffering. Death came to her relief Nov. 11, 1895, at 5 P. M., in Trenton, Smith county, Miss., at the age of forty-two years eight months and twenty-six days.

She was an affectionate and obedient daughter, affectionate wife and mother. She leaves father, mother, husband, four sons, one brother, one sister with other relatives and many friends, to weep for her departure. But, blessed Lord, we "weep not as those who have no hope." Our dear girl loved one said in the very last moments of her earthly life that she was ready and perfectly satisfied to depart and be with Christ.

We will meet again soon at the beautiful gate, where she will be waiting and watching for our arrival. Then we'll hear, "Come in, papa, mama, husband, children, and relatives."

FATHER.

WATTS—Our dear sister, Mrs. SIDNEY WATTS, was suddenly called from life to immortality, Oct. 28, 1895. Many were the hearts deeply touched by this sad announcement. At the regular monthly meeting of the W. F. M. S., on Nov. 4, the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, It hath pleased our heavenly Father to remove from our midst a true friend and faithful supporter; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Woman's Missionary Society of Central Church, Meridian, Miss., feels keenly the loss of such a kind, steadfast, true, and cheerful Christian worker; and that her noble example and ready sympathy be held in loving remembrance by this society.

Resolved, That this sudden removal of such a woman in the midst of a useful and busy life leaves a vacancy that will be deeply realized by our society and her numerous friends; and to the little children, whose ardent friend she ever was, will prove a grievous loss, while the church loses one of its devoted members. She was a woman of strong Christian character, but ever quiet and undemonstrative, doing what her hands found to do with all her might.

Resolved, That her friends have lost a heart to love and a hand to help them; the church, a faithful, earnest member; the home, its central light; our society, one of its earliest supporters and followers. In homes of sickness and distress, among the afflicted and the destitute, wherever aching hearts were found, she was always at the front. Her cheerful, sunny spirit and kind heart endeared her to all who knew her. To know her best was to love her most. Truly, a good woman has gone to her reward

Resolved, That we extend our sincere sympathy to the manly sons, and other near and dear relatives, whose lives and homes are darkened by the shadow of this bereavement, pointing them to the only true source of consolation, feeling that in His own good time they may be enabled to realize that all God's plans are for the best; also, that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this meeting, a copy sent to the family of the deceased, and a copy furnished the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication.

oxygen starvation

You can starve the body in more ways than one; you can give it food and not feed it. It needs oxygen. The oxygen you get from the air is carried to all parts of the body by the red corpuscles of the blood. One drop of blood contains millions of these. When these are deficient in blood, we call it poor blood, and it shows itself in general weakness, lack of appetite, and loss of weight. What you want is something which will make more red corpuscles.

Scott's Emulsion

of cod-liver oil, with hypophosphites, is something more than an oil. Its peculiar action depends on a number of substances—active principles—which will increase the red corpuscles of the blood.

The Holman Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.

SMS Minion, 8vo. Divinity Circuit, Round Corners, etc.

TWELVE FULL-PAGE MAPS IN COLORS.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn, New York, in the "New York Evangelist:" "Of all Bibles yet issued in our country, the most superb in execution and completeness of contents is the 'Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.' Sabbath-school teachers will find this elegant volume a little library of information in itself."

REV. ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., President of, and Professor in, the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.: "It pleases me very greatly. I regard the help which it affords to a correct pronunciation of Scripture proper names as doubling the value of the edition. I trust the book will be received as it deserves to be."

We will send this Bible for $1.65 to all subscribers who will pay their subscription for one year in advance, provided they have not had the benefit of other premium offers. In that case they must write us for special terms. When we say a year in advance we mean one year from this date, i. e., December, '96. A little later it will be January, '97.

N. B.—Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two years in advance can get this Bible for $1.35; and this, too, regardless of whether they have had the benefit of other premium offers.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

THE THIRD MISSIONARY JOURNEY.

(Acts xviii, 22; xxi, 17.)

1. In this third missionary journey it is narrated that Paul "went over all the country."

(1) It is the glory of Methodism that it is a pioneer church. Its circuits and missions reach every hamlet and settlement.

(2) This can not be said of certain other denominations which prefer to operate chiefly in cities. Their pretensions are vast, but they are, after all, numerically very insignificant.

(3) Perhaps Methodism lacks change of tactics from pioneer operations to those dictated by life in the city for its city churches. Not a few think that such change is imperative.

2. In connection with Paul's third missionary journey we read of Apollos, who thus far knew only of the baptism of John the Baptist. Aquilla and Priscilla were instrumental in making him fully acquainted with the plan of salvation.

(1) We always think of unspiritual Apollos when we hear sermons denunciatory, censorious, without accompanying encouragement, found in the salvation of Christ.

(2) Yes, present the law, let the thunder of Sinai reverberate, but do it in the spirit of the Master who wept over Jerusalem and who said, "Come unto me, all ye that labor," etc.

3. It is said of this Apollos that he was "mighty in the Scripture."

(1) Not a few preachers take a text for no other purpose than that it affords a convenient beginning for their harangue. They deal in pet theories interwoven with humorous anecdotes.

(2) A preacher should be mighty in the Scriptures. Not select certain detached phrases to prove a theory, but have man's duty appear plainly from the general tenor of the Word of God.

4. This same Apollos, after being warned in the blood of Christ, "mightily convinced the Jews, and that publicly, showing by the Scriptures that Jesus was the Christ."

(1) Convince a man of Christ's divinity, and he will soon penitently come to the "Rock of Ages."

(2) Sad that so many discourses on politics, political economy, sociology, and topics of the day are called sermons; giving the worshipers a stone instead of bread.

(3) In preaching, St. Paul should be imitated. Said he in Cor. ii, 2: "For I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified."

What a Woman Can Do.

I want my lady friends to know of the new field now open for them. In the past six months we have made a profit of $907 02 after paying all expenses. All our sales have been made at home, not having canvassed any. My official duties calling me away most of the time, I left the Dish Washer business in my wife's control with the above results. The business is rapidly increasing and will continue to grow until every family has a Climax Dish Washer. Not a day passes but what we sell one or two, and some days fifteen, or twenty Dish Washers It's easy selling what everybody wants to buy. You can wash and dry the dishes perfectly in two minutes. For full particulars address the Climax Mfg. Co, Columbus, Ohio. Get a sample dish washer and you can not help but make money. The Climax Mfg. Co. do not ask any pay until you have the Dish Washers sold. You may just as well be making $5 a day as to be doing nothing.

A Significant Departure.

With the departure of summer year when a review is made of the condition of affairs, it is only right that some thought be given to the physical body which enables everyone to battle with life's problems and figure for themselves the profit or loss on the trial balance sheet. Though the bank account may be large and each one's material gain be great, it would not be surprising if it suddenly dawns upon many that good health has been greatly impoverished by the low condition of the blood. It is in this state that the lactic acid in the vital fluid attacks the fibrous tissues, particularly the joints, making known the local manifestations of rheumatism. Thousands of people have found in Hood's Sarsaparilla the great blood purifier, a positive and permanent cure for rheumatism.

It is rumored that Capt.-Gen. Campos will shortly return to Spain, and he succeeded in military command by Gen. Pando, a former governor-general of Cuba, and a fighter, who, more than perhaps any other Spanish soldier, is feared by the insurgents.

"Wheezing" in children is soon cured by the famous Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

The True Condition.

Morphia, quinine, antipyrine, salts, and other nauseous doses from my remedies I've banished. PRESTON'S BED-ACHE is my stand-by for every type of headache.

CHILLIFUGE is a superb appetizer, and is highly valuable for weak and sickly children, as well as the aged and feeble CHILLIFUGE contains Iron that does not Discolor the teeth, nor constipate the bowels. Makes rich blood.

CHILLIFUGE possesses all the virtues and none of the disagreeable features of Quinine used by Physicians.

CHILLIFUGE does not require a nauseating dose or a stick in mix every dose. No iron filings to settle at bottom of bottle and irritate a weak stomach.

Life is but an empty dream, there is always time for a prize.—Kin ser.

TESTIMONIAL.

LINDEN, ALA.

I. L. LYONS, New Orleans—

Dear Sir: Last winter I had a severe cough, pain in the chest and spitting of blood. I procured a bottle of Dr. Locock's Cough Elixir, and am happy to state that four doses relieved me entirely, and I can safely say that I think it is the best cough medicine I ever saw.

THE SUN-BRIGHT CLIME.

Have you heard, have you heard of that sun-bright clime,
Undimmed by sorrow, unhurt by time,
Where age hath no power o'er the fadeless frame,
Where the eye is fire and the heart is flame—
Have you heard of that sun-bright clime?

A river of water gushes there,
'Mid flowers of beauty strangely fair,
And a thousand wings are hovering o'er
The dazzling wave and the golden shore,
That are seen in that sun-bright clime.

Millions of forms, all clothed in white,
In garments of beauty, clear and bright,
There dwell in their own immortal bowers,
'Mid fadeless hues of countless flowers
That bloom in that sun-bright clime.

Ear hath not heard and eye hath not seen
Their swelling songs and their changeless sheen,
Their ensigns are waving, their banners unfurl
O'er the jasper wall and gates of pearl,
That fixed in that sun-bright clime.

But far, far away in that sinless clime,
Undimmed by sorrow and unhurt by time,
Where, amid all things bright and fair, is given
The home of the just, and its name is heaven—
The name of that sun-bright clime.

Correspondence.

Belle Kearney in Scotland.

On leaving Ireland I went directly to Glasgow, which is the second city in size in the United Kingdom of Great Britain, and the largest in Scotland; the centre of commercial activity, strongly built, modern in appearance, and exceedingly prosperous. The old cathedral, which is so closely associated with the history of the place, and the elegant monuments in which the city abounds, are about the only objects of especial interest to travelers. Edinburgh, the historic, the romantic, the beautiful, was the goal of my ambition. At sunset I reached that glorious old city, and caught my first glimpse of its magnificent castle, Holyrood Palace, and Prince's street, incomparable for beauty. Its crags and rocks, its hills and stretch of sea, are all made familiar by tongue and pen of poet, novelist and historian. Memories of many things and people rise unbidden; but pre-eminent are those connected with Robbie Burns, Sir Walter Scott, and a certain fair, but frail young creature, whom the world has known and loved as Mary, Queen of Scots. There is nothing more enjoyable than to ramble about the quaint streets of Edinburgh. In going to the castle we pass St. Giles' Cathedral, which is said to have been in existence as early as 854. It was here that John Knox preached his straight-laced doctrine, and hurled his sarcasm against the iniquities of the royal family. Just behind the cathedral is a large square, in the middle of which is an equestrian statue of Charles II. Under this, or near by, the body of Knox is supposed to have been buried, and a spot on the rooky earth marked by the letters, J. K., is pointed out as his presumed resting-place. Strange that so definite a character of so recent a date should have such an indefinite grave in a place like Edinburgh! Facing this square is the old Parliament House, which was built in the seventeenth century. It was used for meetings of Parliament before Scotland was united to England in 1707, but now by the Court of Sessions. To the right of St. Giles, in the centre of the pavement leading further up the street, is the figure of an immense heart, clearly outlined by stones. "It is the heart of Midlothian," said to mark the centre of the district. But my old guide declared that it was decidedly in one corner. Soon we come to the house where Scott wrote "Waverly," to the house where Burns lived for awhile, to the residence of John Knox, and to that of Mary of Guise, the queen of James IV., and to the building in which Mary, Queen of Scots stayed the last night she was in Edinburgh. The castle crowns the western summit of the High Street Ridge. On every side it is peculiarly beautiful and picturesque. Within the castle walls is St. Margaret's Chapel, a tiny church, which is the oldest building in Edinburgh.

My first entrance into the castle was the Crown Room. In the centre of this little apartment is a glass case, in which are exhibited the ancient regalia of Scotland, consisting of the crown, the sceptre, and sword of state, besides additional jewels deposited by William IV. Between the Crown Room and Parliament Hall are the apartments of poor Mary Stuart. The first is an ante-room, unfurnished and unadorned save by a few paintings hung on the walls. Beyond is the little bed-chamber, where James VI. was born, and from the window of which he was lowered to his mother's friends to be educated in her faith. So says tradition. In this little chamber, which is not larger than an ordinary bath-room, a woman sits placidly knitting near a table laden with pictures of Mary, books, and other articles for sale. The handsome Parliament Hall is closely associated with the history of the Stuart kings. James II. was crowned here, and it was afterward used as a great ceremonial chamber. Not long after Charles I. had a reception of unusual magnificence in it; Cromwell figured at a great banquet served within its walls. Years ago a handsome Norman church stood opposite this hall, but it has been replaced by barracks now occupied by regiments of soldiers. Returning from the castle, I saw these regiments drilling on the esplanade—a spacious parade-ground leading up to the entrance. These Scottish soldiers still dress in the costume peculiar to the country when the clans were holding sway. Kilts, sashes, naked knees, and all. On asking a Scotchman if the men dressed this way did not suffer with cold, he said: "Why, no; it is a very warm mode of dress. Their knees do not get colder in Winter than their faces."

When Mary, Queen of Scots arrived in Edinburgh, she went first to Holyrood Palace. "Here she was married to Lord Darnley; here Rizzio was murdered almost at her feet; here was the scene of her fatal nuptials with Bothwell; here she laid down her troubled head, the captive of her own subjects, on the eventful night before she was committed to the Castle of Lochleven. Within these walls we look on Mary Stuart only as that lovely, suffering, intensely interesting woman, whose personal charms and tragic death have drawn eloquence from the pens of so many illustrious historians, and whose beautiful countenance has peered through the day dreams of so many of Europe's mightiest poets." Here we can imagine her reading Livy after dinner with George Buchanan, and playing chess, or sedulously employed with her needle in company with her famous "Maries," or at her many royal entertainments captivating all who saw her by her infinite grace and beauty. At Holyrood Palace visitors are shown through the picture galleries, Lord Darnley's rooms, and those of Queen Mary. This last suite has been rendered the most famous in the world. The first that we see is the audience-chamber of Mary. It was here she had those painful interviews with stern, iron-natured old John Knox. The next is her bed-chamber. Almost the sole article of furniture remaining is her bed, with its crimson damask hangings, decorated with green fringe and tassels, all sadly faded and decayed. On one side of this room is the door which opens on the secret stair by which Darnley and his associates ascended the royal chambers to assassinate the unfortunate Italian. Beyond an intervening dressing-room is the little apartment where the murder was committed. Standing on this spot, it required no vivid imagination to picture the whole of that terrible affair—the upsetting of the table, the forceful detention of the queen, the stabbing of Rizzio, and the dragging of his body through the other apartments, until he fell dead at the top of the staircase by the door of the audience chamber.

Edinburgh's beauty is enhanced by a superb monument to Sir Walter Scott, which cost £16,000, and one to Robert Burns. In the interior of the latter an old Scotchman stands to receive admittance fees, and afterwards walks around the circular room showing the few relics of poor Burns, and reciting by the half hour his most popular poems. The Scotch people were a delightful surprise to me. Instead of being cold, reticent and forbidding, as I had imagined them, I found them bright, warm-hearted, and exceedingly gracious.

Of all the fascinating spots around Edinburgh, the most charming is the home of Sir Walter Scott. A short ride on the cars brings us to Melrose, where we take an omnibus for a four-mile trip through the country to Abbotsford, the baronial castle that was the pride of the heart of the grandest old man that Scotland ever produced. The building is situated in a little valley right on the banks of the Tweed. Mrs. Maxwell Scott, a granddaughter of Sir Walter, owns the property, but is too poor to keep it up, so she rents it to a family who are kind enough to allow visitors to see the apartments of Scott. We were first shown into Sir Walter's study, where he wrote his novels. In the centre of the room are his chair and desk. The walls are lined with books. A little staircase is built midway entirely around the room, so they could be reached easily. This stair leads also to his bed-room. In the library proper the ceiling was copied from Melrose Abbey, which Scott so much admired. In this room there is a painting of Scott's oldest son and a bust of himself. In a case of curios standing in the niche of a window that looks out on the Tweed is the crucifix that Mary, Queen of Scots held when she went to her execution; also buckles in the shape of flies from the shoes of Napoleon, who, by the way, was born on the same day and in the same year that Scott was; also Rob Roy's purse, a knot of the Duke of Wellington's hair, a brooch of Robert Bruce, an ebony cabinet given by George IV., and many other interesting things. The drawing-room, whose walls are covered with old-fashioned paper, gay with numerous flowers and peacocks, has nothing in it but paintings of Scott and his family, the queen of Charles I., Mary Stuart's head after death, Nell Gwynn, Oliver Cromwell, and Hogarth, painted by himself. On the grate is Scott's coat of arms. The implements of warfare in the armory were collected and arranged in Scott's time. Among the numerous weapons that lined the walls and covered the ceiling are Napoleon's pistol, Scott's sword and gun, and by way of additional ornament are the keys of Lochleven Castle, that were fished out of the lake. In the hall, which is the main entrance to the house, under a glass case, are seen the last suit of clothes that Scott wore; his high, white beaver hat, checked pantaloons and broad shoes being noticeable. In this hall also are casts of Bruce's and Wordsworth's skulls, keys to heart of Midlothian, and old suits of armor. A high stone wall surrounds the building, as always in Europe among the rich gentry of the country districts. At intervals in the walls historic stones are inserted which Scott collected. On the outer side the walls are covered with masses of rich, green English ivy; the yard was bright with patches of the brightest flowers. An ideal home!

On my return from Abbotsford I visited wonderful old Melrose Abbey, which has been so exquisitely described in Scott's "Lay of the Last Minstrel." Visitors, on entering this ancient monastery, can not help having their admiration riveted by its former greatness, and by the exquisite beauty of the foliage tracery, grotesque corbels and other ornamental sculpture. Melrose Abbey unquestionably affords one of the finest specimens of Gothic sculpture and Gothic architecture, and though it may not be the most entire, it may fairly rank among the most beautiful of all the ecclesiastical ruins which lie scattered throughout this reformed land. In this sacred precinct lies Douglas, the dark knight of Liddesdale, and James Earl Douglas, who was killed by Hotspur; Alexander II. and his wife, Johanna; but, chief of all, the heart of King Robert Bruce.

"Within the pile no common dead
Lay blended with their kindred mold;
Theirs were the hearts that prayed or bled,
In cloister dim or death-plain red,
The pious and the bold."

The most captivating region in all Scotland is that of "The Lady of the Lake," otherwise known as the Trossachs. Unless experienced it would be difficult to believe that so much beauty could be crowded into the space of one small day. The trip consists of two long coach drives through the wildest, grandest parts of the Highlands, and two boat rides; one down Loch Katrine, the other down Loch Lomond. In coming over the rough mountain passes Rob Roy's cottage was pointed out to us, and the exact (?) spot where James Fitz James had his memorable fight with Roderick Dhu. When nearing the eastern extremity of Loch Katrine we are shown where James Fitz James viewed lovely Ellen Douglas while she innocently sat in her skiff waiting for the notes to be blown from her lover's or father's bugle. Both of these beautiful lochs are hemmed in on either side by lofty mountains, the tallest of which is Ben Lomond. "It is the land of beauty and of grandeur, of seas and lakes and hills and forests and torrents. Here are bounding floods, and there the tempest roams as large in all the terrors of its glory."

BELLE KEARNEY.

Edinburgh, Scotland, Aug. 20, 1895.

The Atlanta Exposition.

The Exposition is booming. Sixty-four thousand people in one day. Every train comes loaded. They come in sections, one following the other, and yet there is room in Atlanta.

Since writing my last letter I have had the pleasure of meeting many from Mississippi. It afforded me great pleasure to meet Mrs. Ben Muse, of Sharon, near my old home. She brought me Methodist news, as well as family and neighborhood news. A princess in Israel—what a pleasure it is to meet such! What would the world, the state and the church do without the women? Was it Napoleon who said, "Give me the mothers, and I will conquer the world"? Give Christ the mothers, and he will conquer the world. Alas! alas! the mothers, even the Methodist mothers, are not all for Christ! God bless the boy who has a mother! God pity the boy who has an ungodly mother! I will drift away from the Exposition, not that it is not attractive, but because, when I get to thinking of the children, I will say something about them. I do love the boys and girls. I have a Sunday-school of over two hundred. We are acquainted with each other. We love each other. I love them like I love the big-hearted, big-souled Methodist preacher here in Georgia who wrote me a love card the other day about my letters in the ADVOCATE. What do you think he said, Mr. Editor? Why, sir, nothing more nor less than he skipped your editorials to find my letters. Now, if I have risen higher than the editor, I am satisfied. If I were a preacher, I would have the "Bishop's bee" in my hat.

Excuse me, dear sir; I will get back. Let me see; I intended writing about the Exposition, and about the Liberal Arts Building. This is a magnificent structure, and full from door to door. Let's go in and see some of the exhibits. I can't stay long enough to show you all of them. There are so many attractions outside. For instance, there is Sousa's band in the Auditorium, giving the most magnificent concerts I ever listened to. We must hurry and get there. At half-past two he will begin, and again at five. Now come. Here is a fine exhibit of marble—everything from a tombstone to a bath tub. We no longer have to go abroad for our marble. The crystals, you notice, are not as fine as those of the Italian; but it is said to be a better marble. You want to order neither a tomb nor bath tub, we will go over here and look at this silk exhibit. The ladies will enjoy it. See, the silk is being reeled from the cocoons. Three of them are put together to make one thread. You did not know, perhaps, that artificial silk is now being made. It is so, and the imitation is so great that you can't distinguish between the worm product and the manufactured article. Even the silk-worms have been set free by the brain of man. Here is the Italian exhibit. In it you will find some beautifully carved wood, and you will almost covet the marble statuary if you have not enough money to buy some of it. Here is a fine lot of majolica ware. Now we are in the English exhibit. Here are some lovely little pictures, said to be reproductions from the old painters. We will believe it is so, and buy one or two of them. This Elton ware is beautiful, and this old ivory porcelain is exquisite. What a pity your bank account is limited! You will have to do as I do—be content with looking at them. The Bohemian glassware is beautiful. Now we will enter this whole corner. In it California has the finest exhibit of preserved and dried fruits you ever saw—carloads of it. What a wonderful State it must be! Not more so, however, than many Southern States; only they show to the world what they have, and they give away tons of valuable reading matter; and not only that, but they have employed a woman to come to the Exposition and deliver stereopticon lectures free in the Auditorium every night. Does that not show pluck, not luck?—for there is no such thing as luck in legitimate business. Here is France. We are sailing along quite rapidly. From Italy to England, now in France. Did you ever see such lovely stationery? Look at this beautiful furniture. See those curtains, only $700 a pair. "We will call again." At least, that is what we tell the man in the store when the price is beyond us. Look at those beautiful surveying instruments. No country in the world can equal France in the production of scientific instruments. Here are measurers of heat, caloric meters. The faintest trace of heat can be detected with one of those instruments. What a nice display they make! Now we come to the weather instruments, used by all weather departments the world over. And here is an exhibit of a Frenchman who belonged to the whole world. It is that of the Pasteur Institute of Paris. God does not create Pasteurs and Jenners and Kochs every day. The first-named only died a short time ago, to be mourned by the world. I sometimes think of that when I see a little-headed fellow, who feels very important, and who is vain enough to imagine that when he dies there will be a big space left in the world. Poor fellow, he will be brushed away as a gnat, and nothing more thought of him. Even the mother and father will hardly miss him, if he is of the kind who say "the old man" and "the old lady" when speaking of his parents. This man Pasteur did something for the world, something for mankind. His name will live forever. Across here we find artificial pearls. I am not much on anything artificial; I like the genuine, especially a genuine Christian. These pearls are pretty and showy; externally, they are all right. Come and see this fan, the price of which is only $200. You say, "I will call again." Here are artificial diamonds. Don't get the idea that France is artificial. It is in many respects, but there is much that is genuine in that country. Across the way, and you will see a wonderful exhibit from Pennsylvania, showing the birds and animals of that State. They have made a small mountain, which adds to the beauty of the exhibit. Next we come to the Winchester Repeating Arms Co. Here you will find the Hotchkiss gun. But these things—at least this gun—means murder; so we will not stay in its company. Around here, taking a large section of the building, is the fine exhibit of Flint, Eddy & Co., of New York, the largest importers and exporters in the world. They control one-fifth of the American shipping. What a varied assortment of wares from all parts of the world you find here! You can spend hours in studying everything from crude rubber to anything else that is shipped from one country to another.

I have not shown you the one-hundredth part of what there is in the building. I will not call your attention to the thousand and one things offered for sale. Make your arrangements to see this fair. If you don't feel repaid for your trip, call on the editor of the ADVOCATE to refund your money. Just about Conference time now, and he feels good. Poor fellow, he ought to feel rich once a year, for really silver and gold he has none. Have you paid for your ADVOCATE? I will meet you in the Forestry Building next week. B. H. CATCHING.

P. S.—The North Georgia Conference has just adjourned. St. John, of Atlanta, the best church in the Conference, has for its new pastor Bro. Daves, a son of Rev. Joel T. Daves, once of the Louisiana Conference.

B. H. C.

Millsaps College.

Maj. Millsaps proposes to give $25,000 this year if the church will raise the same amount, to better equip Millsaps College with educational facilities. He will duplicate any part of that amount that may be raised. The immediate need of the college is a Science Hall, that will cost $10,000; a telescope, costing $1,000, and for improvements about the grounds, $1,000.

Now, if the agent can raise $6,000—and at the very least that amount ought to be raised—it will secure $12,000 to the college.

I feel that I am in one of the most important fields of labor that I ever was in. My opportunities for usefulness have never been greater. But the difficulties in the way are so great that I feel the need and prayerful sympathy and aid of the brethren as never before.

It has not been my habit to annoy the people with money speeches and collections, and I don't expect to do it now. It is true, I have always brought up my collections, and I expect to do it yet. The righteousness of the cause will plead itself. Many of the preachers have invited me to come to their works. I expect to spend my time among them. T. S. WEST, Agt.

Attention, Mississippi Conference.

I sent the MSS. for the Minutes to Rev. R. W. Bailey, Jackson, Miss., on Thursday, Dec. 12. He sent me the first installment of proof on Dec. 14, and promises to have the job complete by Jan 1.

1. It is important to have the postoffices of the preachers, unless your postoffice is the same as last year, or is unmistakably indicated by the name of your appointment. Please do not presume upon my knowing it, but inform me at once.

2. Where there have been changes in the pastoral charges, presiding elders and preachers will please let me know the number of members in the pastorates as they now stand. This is necessary in order to carry out the instruction of Conference to apportion the Minutes pro rata among the members.

In the Living Present.

Indolence is the prevailing vice of thousands. Waste their time. Loafing. A preacher recently visited the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association, not many thousand miles from here, and found—eleven o'clock in the morning—a dozen young men playing on the checker-board. Rolling cotton bales and gathering sugar-cane would have enabled them to pay their board.

Mr. Dana, proprietor of the New York Sun, recently said in his paper: "O! great powers religion is the greatest. It is indestructible. Its vitality amazes. As in the case of truth, the eternal years of God are hers." We know this is true of the Christian religion. Even the heathen have religion. Is Mr. Dana a theosophist?

In the Duchy of Brunswick the government decreed that ministers of the gospel must under no circumstances indite or write the last will and testament of sick and dying people. Not even appear as witness on such documents. Non-compliance will result in heavy fine.

The Converted Catholic, for December—an excellent paper—contains the picture of Dr. Vanoli, a recent convert from Roman Catholicism. Dr. Vanoli was a pupil under and received his diploma of doctor of theology from the hands of the present papal ablegate in Washington, Satolli. During the last few years he has been papal missionary in Constantinople.

The Epworth Herald speaks of the "Women's Bible" in fitting terms. Deplores, that said publication will be short-lived. Interests only curiosity-seekers. The learned consign it to the waste-basket. All true friends of woman are filled with aversion. The historian of the future will point to it as one of the follies of our century.

Dr. Ahlwart, the fanatic Jew-baiter of Berlin, is in the United States engaged by some benighted society to deliver twenty-one lectures against the Hebrews. He will fail as lecturer in our country more signally than did Senator Hill of New York. Say what you will about the Jews, they pay liberally for the education of their children, love home-life, are enterprising in business, and are usually thrifty.

The Paris Academie of Science has unanimously decided that the nineteenth century begins not in 1900, but in 1901. There could never have been anno 0. The first century of the Christian era had begun anno 1. Well, this is a debatable question. We are inclined to differ from the sages of the Academie.

We like the law and its advocates. But we deem it unfair, even dangerous, that more than half of our representatives in Congress, 238, are lawyers. Lawyers make the law. Its ambiguity is notorious. Judges can decide any given case either way—and fully according to law. ICH DIEN.

WHAT IS MY WORK TO-DAY?

To bear another's weakness,
To soothe another's pain;
To cheer the heart repentant,
And to forgive again;
To commune with the thoughtful,
To guide the young and gay;
To profit all in season.
This is my work to-day.

What Shall I Do, Then, with Jesus, Which Is Called Christ?

I am indebted somewhat for this article to an article I saw in a newspaper which accidentally fell into my hands some months ago; but I have forgotten the name of the paper and its place of issue, and, therefore, can not give the proper credit.

This is an exceedingly interesting question, especially when considered in connection with the surrounding. Pilate was a Roman citizen, and governor of a conquered Jewish province, and, as such, cared but little, as an individual, what disposition should be made of the parties to the quarrels among the Jews. Pilate knew that the man against whom the Jews had brought many charges, which they could not prove, was innocent, and should be set at liberty, and so expressed himself; but the clamor of the Jews to crucify him overruled his better judgment, and he hesitated. Hence the question, "What shall I do, then, with Jesus, which is called Christ?"

Pilate, as a Roman citizen, cared nothing for the questions arising among the Jews as to their traditions; but, on the other hand, his office and his influence at the court of Rome might be in danger; and, although he alone had the power to decide the question, yet he appealed to the frenzied mob of Jews for advice, saying, "What shall I do, then, with Jesus, which is called Christ?" Pilate seems to have been willing to have released Barabbas, a murderer and mover of sedition, and let Jesus go free; but, being willing to go with the multitude to do evil, he delivered to the Jews to be crucified One whom he had just declared to be innocent, and then washed his hands in token of his innocence in the transaction. What a mistake was that! The crime was not on his hands, that they needed to be washed.

Pilate was conscious in a good degree, no doubt, that he had in his possession the "Pearl of great price," and that he was dealing with the world's great High Priest possibly, and was anxious to make a profitable disposition of him. There was no question but what he had great value. He was Jesus, believed by Pilate to be the King of the Jews; believed by Herod to be John the Baptist risen from the dead; believed by the people to be the son of David; believed by some to be Elias, and by others to be Jeremias, or one of the prophets; believed by Nicodemus to be a teacher come from God; believed by Philip to be him of whom Moses in the law and the prophets did write; believed by John the Baptist to be the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world; believed by Gabriel to be the Son of the Highest, and declared by Peter to be the Son of the living God. He was truly the Pearl of great price, which many had given their all to possess; yet by others despised and rejected. Now, by these various estimates of him it will be readily seen that he was held by a few to be above price, while by the great mass of the people he had no fixed or permanent value. To Solomon he was the chief among ten thousand and altogether lovely; but to the Jews he was a stumbling-block, and to the Greeks foolishness.

It is evident that Pilate intended to put him on the market for sale, and to make the most of his opportunity. He had often been sold before, and why might not he sell him? Like many at the present day, he could see no harm in it. Pilate would have been glad to save Jesus, no doubt, but he was anxious for the good-will of the Jews, and for this he was willing to sell him, and thus sold him for the prospective good-will of a despised people. Judas had just sold him for thirty pieces of silver. The Jews were then in the act of selling him for Barabbas, a murderer. Esau had traded him for a mess of pottage; Lot's wife had traded him for simply a look at a burning city; Israel had once offered to trade him for onions and garlic, at another time for a drink of water and a mess of quails, and finally traded him off for the commandments of men; Balaam had traded him for the blessing of Balak; Saul had exchanged him for the cattle of the Amalekites; one man in the parable had sold him for a piece of land, another for five yoke of oxen, and yet another for a wife. Neither was it an uncommon thing for him to be traded for the honor and good-will of men. Moses had once made such a negotiation, King Saul had made the same kind of bargain, and Peter had just traded him for a little popularity in the judgment hall. Indeed, there are no lusts or evil devices for which he has not been sold. Solomon gave him for his idolatrous wives; David, the sweet singer of Israel, had traded him for Uriah's wife; Pilate had it now in his power to sell him as others had done, but he had been warned against it by his wife's dream, and he gladly would have saved Jesus, but he, like many of us, was under temptation. Herod had purchased the good will of the Jews by rebuilding the temple, and Pilate saw the necessity of doing something that would merit the approbation of the Jews. The opportunity now presented itself, and the selfishness of Pilate claimed it as his own. Gladly would he have released Barabbas, and thus sacrificed the laws and government of Rome, if the same end could have been reached.

A commandment had been rolling down through all the ages, saying, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me." The great question before Pilate was: "What shall I do with Jesus? Shall I accept him, or shall I reject him? Shall I keep him, or shall I sell him?" Ah, brethren, does not the same questions come home to each of us in the hour of temptation? "Think-est thou that these old Jews, with Pilate at their head, were worse than other men? I tell you nay." What are we doing with Jesus? What estimate are we putting upon him? Where in the scale of being have we registered him? On what altar are we sacrificing him? Are we putting a price on him at a dime a head from the multitude who may attend some frivolous formula enacted in the church for the benefit of the church? Or are we trying to obtain the coveted prize which a doubtful pleasure offers, and keep Jesus also? Let us beware just there, brethren. Balaam tried that, and lost his life; Saul tried that, and lost his crown; Pilate tried that, and the innocent was crucified. It is truly amazing to see what a low estimate we place upon Jesus. We condemn Judas roundly for selling Jesus for thirty pieces of silver; yet many of us sell him for thirty pieces of silver, and leave the silver in the pocket of the purchaser, and because of that silver become a respecter of persons, thereby selling him thirtyfold cheaper than Judas sold him. Some will sell him for a mug of beer, and pay for the beer in hard-earned money besides; some will sell him for an hour's pleasure at the card-table or the horse-race; some will sell Jesus for the pleasure of a single waltz with a congenial partner in the dance; some will sell him for the privilege of being angry with his brother because he happened to differ with him on some question of but little importance, whether it be the one way or the other; some will sell Jesus for the pleasure (if there is any pleasure in it) of whispering something (in confidence) about a brother or sister, with the solemn injunction: "Now, don't you tell anyone that I told you that. I hope it is not so."

Brethren, these things ought not so to be. But, then, things being so, the question comes back to us, "What shall I do with Jesus, which is called Christ?" I would accept him as my Savior, the sent of God. I would put a value on him that a thousand worlds like this could not pay. I would make him the man of my counsel. I would make him my ideal of all that is pure and lovely and of good report. I would make his will my will, his pleasure my pleasure. I would make his joy my joy. I would make his sorrow my sorrow. I would make his life my life. Yes, I would make him

My companion in my waking hours,
My guardian when I sleep,
My hiding-place from Satan's powers,
My comfort when I weep.

Is the Bible a Divine Book?

This question is being asked by hundreds and thousands of people, and people, too, who, by education and nature, ought to know what the Bible is, and what it professes to teach. Yet withal there seems to be a great deal of prevailing ignorance about the Book, not only among those who do not read and study it, but among some of our wisest and ablest scholars. Students of science and history, as well as students of divinity, are seeking to solve the origin and the divinity of this sacred and holy Book. The Bible seems to many, even of our highly educated people, a sealed book, a profound and deep mystery, a cavern of marvelous and mysterious wonders, whose interior can not be explored. Why this is so, in this wonderful age of culture and refinement, is amazing. It seems that the accumulated wisdom and knowledge of the ages, which today is in reach of every educated man and woman, would confirm the divine origin of the Book, and forever set at rest every doubting heart in reference to it. But, from the facts in the case, we see that objections to the Bible are brought about, not for want of evidence to prove its divine genuineness, but from the sinfulness of the human heart, and its hesitancy to search into the deep things of nature and God. In the very nature of the case, there can be no just grounds for calling in question the validity or genuineness of the Book of God. It comes down to us as does other books of science, history, and philosophy. It bears on its very face the stamp of genuineness and originality. Why, then, call in question this Book, and seek to detract from its sacred and holy pages the truth of God to man? It seems to me that we have just as much right to call in question the genuineness of other histories as that of the Bible. Common sense should teach us that such a book as the Bible, containing such excellent codes of laws and morals, and such a system of religion, could not have been fabricated or easily imposed upon the nations of the earth. Then, if it was not the invention of imposters, it is the history, the living truth of God to man; and we have no more right to doubt it than any other truth revealed to us in history and nature. No one doubts the fact of the Athenians having social and civic laws, and that Solon propounded them; no one doubts that the Spartans had laws, and that Lycurgus propounded them; no one doubts that the Roman Empire existed, and that laws were propounded for the Romans by Mena; and yet we have stronger and more enduring proof that the Israelitish nation had social, civic, and religious laws, and that these laws were propounded and promulgated by Moses, and that he was the chosen legislator of the Israelitish nation, and that God chose him to write a history of the creation. Taken, then, as a mere matter of history—which it, in fact, is—we have no more right to call it in question than any other history of the world. When we merely consider it as a matter of history, we see it to be the oldest and the most authentic history of the world. Herodotus has been considered to be the oldest profane historian, and yet the Bible dates back beyond his time nine hundred years; and not only that it is the only history that accounts for the creation of the world and the origin of man, but it's the only history that teaches of the immortality of the soul of man, and a future life beyond the grave. There, then, can be no evidence given to doubt its genuineness, or disprove its divine origin. It is just as much a true and vital history as the history of Rome, Greece, England, France, or the United States; and as to its permanency, it will outlast all other law books and histories, for our Savior told of its infallibility when he said, "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away."

Decline of Methodism in the Rural Districts.

MR EDITOR: In the issue of our ADVOCATE dated April 4, 1895, there appears an article with the above heading, which is well worth a careful and prayerful consideration. Taking all the facts into consideration which our Bro. Newsom enumerates, I am persuaded that one of the greatest causes which produces in our Zion such a state of affairs is, the failure on the part of the ministry to preach the distinctive doctrines of Methodism as such, and the lack of moral support on the part of our people given our preachers when they undertake to preach them. It is a fact that those denominations which preach and sustain their distinctive doctrines are making at present the greatest proportionate advancement in membership. Take as an illustration the Campbellites, who never hold a service without in some way teaching one or more of their doctrines; and, as objectionable as some of their tenets are, they have within the last decade increased more rapidly than any other denomination in the South. There are several reasons why this is so.

1. In view of the fact that other denominations preach their doctrines continually, and in proportion to the extent they are believed will be the prejudice of the public mind against Methodist doctrine, and, unless we, as a church, fully and constantly set before the people our doctrines, they will feel that we either have none or that we are ashamed of them.

2. A certain amount of church pride is essential to loyalty to one's church. It is our duty to present our church government and doctrines to the public, as well as to the church, in such way as to cause them to feel to be a Methodist is not only to be the equals of others, but their superiors in many respects, especially in doctrine, as our doctrines stand without their equal in duly and truly recognizing the free moral agency of man, the universal atonement of Christ, the justice and mercy of God, the office and work of the Holy Spirit on the human soul, and Christian experience, which, if properly preached as Methodist doctrine, will produce in the mind of the people the conviction that the Methodist Church is the equal, if not superior, to any other denomination. If one should doubt the estimation I place upon doctrine, let him first prepare an address on the history of Methodism in the World, and deliver it to all his churches at some propitious time, and then follow it up with a number of distinctly Methodist doctrinal sermons, and note the effect.

"But speak thou the things which become sound doctrine, that can not be condemned; that he that is of the contrary part may be ashamed, having no evil thing to say of you." (Titus ii.)

Church Extension.

MR EDITOR: Special calls for funds with which to build churches for our missions in the Indian Territory and Oklahoma, and among the Cubans in Florida, have met with a liberal response from some quarters. The church at Key West is now assured, the money being in hand with which to complete it, while about one-half the amount required for Ybor City has been subscribed. About $3,000 has been paid in or subscribed for work in the Indian Mission Conference. Each one hundred dollars assures the building of a church there, and several brethren have given that amount each for the purpose of erecting memorial churches, to be named by the donors after deceased children or other relatives. The idea is a beautiful one, and I hope that many others will avail themselves of this means of perpetuating the names of their loved ones. Will not these humble temples be more pleasing to the Master than monuments of stone? Bishops Hargrove and Duncan and the undersigned have been presenting this subject at several of the Conferences, but it is impossible thus to reach all who should give, and I earnestly hope that very many who read this will send us contributions for these pressing and worthy objects. We have had many responses to our ten-dollar proposition; can we not have many more? Send all remittances to

A Noble Life.

Mrs. S. Myra Smith (nee Cox) was a native of Mississippi, and, being left an orphan when quite young, was sent to Kentucky to be educated in a Catholic convent. The only religious influence that impressed her childhood was that of a Presbyterian lady, with whom she boarded for a short time. Several years after her marriage she was convicted and converted at a camp meeting near Princeton. From the first religion meant to her entire separation from the world. In a diary of her religious life, under the date of June 19, 1859, she records her experience of entire sanctification. The cause of our Lord was her first thought; the preachers were dear as her own family. In affluent ante-bellum times her house was the preacher's home. Severe affliction, the loss of husband and children, with poverty, did not shake her faith. For many years in Greenville she was ever at the service of the sick, and in the bitterest weather, or on the darkest night, would take her lantern and go wherever she was needed. Fear was a sensation unknown to her. She wept with those who weep, and whenever there was trouble she went to bind up the broken-hearted. Her gift of song was remarkable; its influence brought many souls to the altar.

A minister of another church once told her that her church did not honor her enough. Said he: "If you belonged to my church, you would be made a deaconess."

For several years before her death she, with another elect lady, was a member of the Board of Stewards, and in 1879 she was elected delegate to the Annual Conference. She did not attend the Conference, nor claim recognition, however.

She rejoiced in the organization of the W. M. S., and became at once an active worker. Her strong character, fully consecrated, made her a power in her church and community. Her death was a loss which is yet felt and deplored.

She died on Oct. 14, 1887, in her sixty-sixth year. Her name is still spoken with love and reverence by many who honored her.

Selections.

A young lady, asked by her friend to explain what is meant by devotional reading of the Bible, made answer as follows: "Yesterday morning I received a letter from one to whom I have given my heart and devoted my life. I freely confess to you that I have read that letter five times, not because I did not understand it at the first reading, nor because I expected to commend myself to the author by frequent reading of his epistle. It was not with me a question of duty, but simply one of pleasure. I read it because I am devoted to the one who wrote it. To read the Bible with the same motive is to read it devotionally, and to the one who reads it in that spirit, it is indeed a love letter."—United Presbyterian.

Times of Silence.

We must have times of silence, of waiting only upon God, of retiring from the murmur and hubbub of human voices, that the still small voice may be able to make itself heard. Such hours are not lost. We are arrested from taking paths which otherwise we should have to retrace with slow and weary steps. We escape the useless expenditure of energy which we might better conserve. We become conscious of the rising up within of that great fountain of life which, having come from God, proceeds to God, and that bears us forward, like Mary, to do the one great act of self-sacrifice which lives when the many things of the bustling Martha life are forgotten.

It may not be necessary literally to sit still, or to go apart from the ordinary avocations of life, in order to detect this voice. The boiler makers can talk to each other amid ceaseless hammerings. Those who are accustomed to the roar of Niagara are sensitive to any noises that would not be audible to the unaccustomed ear. So, when once we have caught the tone of the voice of God, we shall detect it amid the rush of daily business. We shall make a great stillness in our heart, enter the inner temple, and wait there until the word of the Lord shall come to us; and all the while to the eyes of our fellows we shall be busy with the occupation and amenities of life.

The one aim, however, of existence should be to give an opportunity to the indwelling Lord to assert himself, and possess the entire realm of spirit, soul and body, so that we may in our measure be able to say with the apostle: "Daily delivered to death for Jesus' sake, that the life also of Jesus may be manifest in our mortal flesh."—Rev. F. B. Meyer, in the Methodist Times.

The Secret Place.

It is one mark of a truly sanctified soul to possess the ability to pause amid the rush of earthly cares and come very near to the heart of Jesus in prayer. It is then that we are permitted to drop distracting burdens and lose ourselves in him, in the soul's joyful waiting at his feet. Ah, then it is that difficult questions find a solution—if not according to our wishes, according to that wisdom which is so much higher than our own. "Enter into thy closet" is a blessed injunction. Weary pilgrim, wherever thou art, draw near to him, who "seeth in secret." It may not always be possible to find this chosen retreat according to our imperfect ideas of what constitutes the closet of prayer. Know this, however, that the soul's seclusion with God may be amid the busy marts of trade. We then are permitted to draw very near to him in the silence of the inmost heart, and speak to him of the things we so much need. There is no way of finding comfort amid the perplexing problems of life but in this intimate and habitual communion with God.—Exchange.

Living to Christ in small things, and living for Christ every day, is the secret of large fruitfulness. A peach-tree or an orange does not leap into a bounty of fruit by one spasmodic effort; an orchard does not ripen under a single day's sunshine. Every raindrop, every sunbeam, every inch of sub-soil does its part. A fruitful Christian is a growth. To finish up a godly character by a mere religion of Sundays, and sermons, and sacraments, and revivals, and special seasons is impossible. A man may be converted in an instant, but he must grow by the year. The tough fiber of the slender branch which can hold up a half-bushel of oranges is very different from a little willow switch. It is the steady, compacting process that makes the little limb like a steel wire. Such is a healthy and holy believer's life. Every honest prayer breathed, every cross carried, every trial well endured, every good work for our fellow-men lovingly done, every little act conscientiously performed for Christ's glory, helps to make the Christian character beautiful, and to load its broad boughs with "apples of gold" for God's "baskets of silver."—The Examiner.

The Christian life is worship as well as work and growth. Every true life reveals the glory of God. Life is the highest worship. What a revelation of God a good life is! The years of a man's life are the pages of a book on which is written the name of God. Looking backward always gives us a vision of God's help. His goodness and his grace have combined to make the year a year of blessing. His dealings with us always have a brighter look when we review them. The diamond gives back the light that it receives, in all the beauty of its broken rays. Our saved souls are made beautiful by the light received from God, given back in praise and worship to him. Every year of our lives should speak a message of God to the world. We are his children, and there is something wrong with us if the world does not learn something of Our Father from our lips and lives.

"Under the Circumstances."

Suffer a word of warning, lest you deceive yourselves. We speak to those who so often seek to quiet their consciences by saying, "I am doing the best I can under the circumstances." Who makes the "circumstances?" Might you not be in circumstances to do more? Could you not be more watchful and prayerful, and possess more of the Holy Ghost and divine power? Whose fault is it that you are so weak and helpless? You may not be living right, and your influence for good in the world is lost and you say under the "circumstances" I am unable to accomplish anything. But a closer walk with God will change the "circumstances." You excuse yourself "under the circumstances" from church work no time. Could you not, by a better and more religious improvement of time, have more to give to God and the church? "Under the circumstances" you can give but little to the support of the church, and toward the evangelization of the world, but would not a little religious economy change the circumstances and enable you to give more? The Master teaches us that we are responsible not only for the talents given, but for other talents that we might have acquired by using those that were given. Take heed of these things.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

How shall we avoid evil thoughts? First, by the fear of God—an awful thought! A living God, infinitely pure, is conscious of your contaminated thoughts. • • • Love and hope will keep us strong against passion, as they kept our Savior strong in suffering, "who, for the joy that was set before him, endured the cross, despising the shame." Secondly, by the promises of God. Think of what you are—a child of God, an heir of heaven. Realize the grandeur of saintliness, and you will shrink from degrading your soul and debasing your spirit. It is in reading saintly lives that we are ashamed of groveling desires. • • • Seek exercise and occupation; • • • commit to memory passages of Scripture. Let him store his mind with these as safeguards. Let these be to him the sword, turning everywhere to keep the way of the garden of life from the intrusion of profaner footsteps.—From "Thoughts of God and Man," by F. W. Robertson, D. D.

The world is ever full of human lives whose eternal destiny seems to depend upon whether they meet cloud or sunshine, encouragement or discouragement, hope or despair, in the faces that look into theirs. Guides sometimes warn tourists among the Swiss mountains not to speak as they pass certain points. Even the reverberation of a whisper in the air may start a poised avalanche from its place in the crags. There are times in the story of many human lives when they are so delicately poised that it depends on how the first person they meet greets them whether they sink into the darkness of despair, or lift up their heads to find hope. We never know when a passing mood of ours may decide a soul's destiny. We dare not, then, even for a moment, or in one case, be discourager of another soul. —J. R. Miller, D D.

Self-knowledge is an indispensable condition of intelligent self-direction and true self-culture. No man can become what he ought to be without first knowing what he is—his faults, his excellences, his resources, and his dangers. It is he who saith, "I am rich and have need of nothing," that is most likely to be "wretched and miserable and poor and blind and naked." Only he who is willing to learn patiently and thoroughly his own faults, in order that he may resolutely attempt their cure, can hope to come to any high excellence.

No one understands God who is not keeping his commandments. God does not come into such close and intimate relations to the disobedient that he can be understood by them. Fellowship in spirit and character is an indispensable condition of real acquaintance. The pure in heart, and only they, shall see God. Only the musical can hear music; all others hear noise.—Christian Inquirer.

The late Dr. Duttes, in speaking of his sufferings, said to a friend a few days before his death: "I have learned a new way of spelling disappointments beginning with an 'h' instead of a 'd'; His appointments." What a blessed way to look at the dark things of life! How it checks rebellious thoughts, and sends a ray of heavenly sunlight through all our trials.

It is a strange sight to see a minister of the gospel of peace ranging the ecclesiastical field, and, like the Irishman at Donnybrook Fair, asking "some gintleman to do me the favor of stipping an the tail of me coat."—Baltimore Advocate.

If God putteth no grievous cross upon you, let your brethren's cross be your cross; which is certain token of true brotherly love.—Bradford.

A DOUBTING THOMAS.

The following letter was just received from one who had a bad cancer beneath the left eye. He came to my office, but did not take treatment until he investigated me two days, and after we gave him a good cure, he refused to give us a statement of the facts, for fear it would come back in a few weeks. Read his letter.

SHINNSTON, W. VA., Sept. 29, 1895.

DEAR DOCTOR: I have thought about writing to you a number of times. It is about one year since I started to your office. My face is sound and well. Your Combination Oil Cure is a wonderful cure and I wish you well in your work. I shall ever feel grateful to you for your good and kind treatment toward me during my stay with you. I shall not forget to recommend your treatment whenever I can. I recommended it to Mr. Moore, of Clarksburg, for his cancer on his lip, and he sent to you for your oils. Now I am willing to give you my testimonial. If you will please write out your blank and send it to me, I will give you my name.

Very respectfully yours,
JOHN M. SAPP.

NAPERVILLE ILL., March 4, 1895

DR. D. M. BYE—Dear Sir: It has been two months since I got your remedies and all traces of cancer are gone. Now if this cancer stays away, it is something unheard of. I am satisfied it is the most wonderful cure I have seen yet. I am used to paying from $100 to $300 to have it taken away, and if it comes back every year it is better than all others I have tried, and I did not have near the pains I had by using caustics, etc. I will recommend your oils to all sufferers of cancer I know.

Yours very truly,
MRS. H. MANOCK.

IT CAME TOO LATE.

DR. D. M. BYE: Dear Sir—Your last box oils received, and oh, so thankfully, by our poor mother; but, Dr. Bye, it came too late, or else we did not send in the first place soon enough, for she left on Saturday, Sept. 15, for a home with her God. She seemed to suffer little or no pain at the last, and her cancer on the surface seemed to be almost entirely cured. I think it had gone to her lungs, and then one grew on the bronchial tubes. She had so much faith in your medicines, as we all had. It took the soreness out of the one on her side, and we think now if we had known of the one in her throat and put the medicine on there, probably it would have prolonged her life a little longer. Whether it would have done any good or not, she is gone now. She died with strong faith in you and your oils and her blessed Savior. We thought it best to write and tell you how things had gone. All her family join in hoping God will bless you and your oils.

Sincerely yours,
MRS. O. MAVITY.

If afflicted, defer not, but send for free book giving prices of oils and particulars. Address.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. E. N. Evans, Monroe, La., Dec. 13: "We have just closed a glorious meeting. Sam Jones did not reach us this year, but Bro. Geo. R. Stuart and Charlie D. Tillman came, and they did the preaching and singing, while the Presbyterians, Baptist and Methodist from sexions to pastors co-operated, and the Lord did most graciously bless us. About 125 conversions. Over 90 have already made application for membership in the different churches, and the division of new members will not change the proportionate strength of the three churches. I never witnessed a more lovely unity or perfect harmony. It was not a disregard of differences, but rising above them in the burning zeal for soul-saving. The attendance from abroad was not so great as last year, but the crowd was on an average about the same, and the verdict is general that the meeting in every way surpassed that of last year. Not a service without penitents, and a deep spiritual influence pervade all that was done. The Holy Ghost lead up to the meeting and seemed to control each service. We closed the eighth night with more than 50 seeking God. Bro. Tillman won all hearts, and Bro. Stuart preached as only he can. It was strong, earnest, spiritual, clear, and effectual. The emphasis was laid on the offices of the Holy Ghost. Faith instead of self-reliance; repentance instead of pretended sorrow; regeneration instead of reformation. False pretenses, worldly mindedness and disregard for God's law were denounced in plain terms. No good thing but was lifted up and strengthened. I never saw criticism so completely disarmed. Above all, God was with us in great power. Bro. Stuart is a great preacher, and impresses everyone as a truly great man who has given himself over, without reserve, to God. Our parish is, by the action of our police jury, clear of whisky for another year. They stood 9 to 1 against ordering another election as requested by the whisky men led by our congressman. We are prosperous in these hard times. Nearly one-quarter of a million spent this year in public and private buildings, and trade improved by stopping the waste and ruin of the evil traffic. Local prohibition is a success here."

Mary M. Reynolds: "Methodism in McComb is forging ahead in a way that is encouraging to every Christian worker, and especially gratifying to our beloved pastor (Rev. Morse), who is closing his first year with us. Surely God has blessed his labors in this charge. Blest indeed above his fellows, inasmuch as he has been instrumental in bringing about that peace on earth, good-will towards men, among all denominations in McComb, and establishing a good fellowship which has not characterized the churches heretofore. Advancement has been made along all lines. Gracious meetings have been here. Self-denial week was observed as a week of prayer. Collections were $9.50, or thereabout. Bro. Clark was with us the last two weeks of March, and held a series of meetings in which he wrought earnestly for the salvation of souls, leaving many at the close of the services with a determination to live closer to the Lord and work for the coming of his kingdom on earth. Bro. Chilton, of Montgomery, Ala., came to us Aug. 25, and labored with us until Sept. 11, expounding the doctrine of the new birth in a lucid way that enlightened and encouraged many stumbling and halting members. His conception of sanctification was so clearly defined, so beautifully presented, that weak humanity no longer hesitated in its weakness, but many accepted sanctification by faith. We hope to have him with us again. Bro. McIntosh has been with us eleven days this month, conducting a revival beyond the most sanguine expectation. There were 52 accessions to the Methodist Church, 25 to the Baptist, besides a number to the Presbyterian. Men and women of each church stood shoulder to shoulder, hand in hand, working for the salvation of loved ones—many who have determined to reach a higher plane of Christian living. Membership in the church has largely increased during the closing year. Thirteen persons by baptism, forty-eight by vows, and sixty-nine by certificate (Bro. Morse loses no time in going after certificates); total membership—476. Under the care of Bro. Hibbert the Sunday-school is constantly growing in numbers, influence and interest. There are 240 pupils, 14 teachers and 3 officers. McComb, as usual, can send in a full financial report. All assessments have been met. Our beloved pastor leaves with his wife this week for Conference. We are thankful that he was sent to us. We trust that he may return to gladden the hearts of many who have known him but to love him. Be that as it will, wherever he is sent, may God's choicest blessing rest upon him, and many souls be brought to Christ through his agency."

THE GREAT RELIGIOUS MOVEMENT GOING ON IN LAKE CHARLES, LA.

At 11 A. M., Oct. 27, eighty-three persons stood in ranks around the altar in Broad Street Church, Lake Charles, La., and assumed the vows of Christian fellowship. One hundred and twenty-two is the total number received by profession at this church, and over sixty in Bro. Randle's charge, making, say, 185 accessions to our church this year, not including those received by letter. Through this revival there were twenty-one accessions to other churches, and we have twelve applicants not yet received. Our Broad Street Epworth League now numbers 93 members, and still rapidly increasing.

The condition of the church at the beginning of the year was not encouraging, although a great deal of good seed had been sown in previous years by faithful pastors and Sabbath-school teachers. There was but little effect visible from the work of recent years. Attendance on church and prayer meetings was small and irregular, yet there were some faithful and devoted helpers.

The noble ladies of the Aid Society, with the help of the Official Board, succeeded in adding needed improvements to the parsonage, beside new out-houses, including stable and carriage house. Thus they gave the first impetus to the revival, for interest in the temporal welfare of the church always leads to interest in the spiritual condition. The Sabbath-school teachers were induced to take a direct interest in the conversion of their pupils, while the faithful superintendent gave vigorous help as a leader in the work.

Early in the Spring an Epworth League was organized. It grew rapidly in numbers and activity, canvassing for members and laboring for the cause of Christ. The pastor in the early part of the year preached at 11 A. M., once a month, a sermon especially addressed to children, and later in the Summer a five-minute sermon at the close of Sabbath-school exercises. These efforts were not without results.

Early in the Summer it became evident that the "fields" were "white already to the harvest," but the laborers were not sufficient. A number of brethren were solicited, but were not able to come to our aid. Finally, hearing that Rev. M. M. Morphis was laboring successfully in North Louisiana, after a correspondence his services were secured to begin a meeting Oct. 9. He remained about three weeks with us. His simple, earnest and unique methods of putting the great truths of the gospel carried conviction, while his original methods of searching interrogatories, used with wonderful tact, held the unflagging attention of his hearers; the number of them increasing till the largest audience-room in the city would scarcely accommodate them. The young people of the League and Sunday-school teachers, who had worked so earnestly with the pastor for weeks before the meeting began, continued their efforts both in the congregation and outside with an earnest courage that was a matter of wonder and surprise to many professors of religion who never saw it "after that fashion." Bro. Crews, of Mansfield, came by request to our assistance, and continued some days preaching with great pathos and power, when his pastoral duties compelled him to leave. In view of the inclement weather we discontinued the protracted services, but are working by the use of the ordinary means. We have now (including Jackson Street) seven weekly prayer meetings, four of them at schoolhouses and cottages, all well attended. These do not include the weekly meetings of the Epworth Leagues for devotional exercises. We believe a profound impression has been made upon the community. Other denominations were invited to unite in the meeting, and some of them gave valuable help. There are now a remarkably large number of young people who will conduct services, lead in prayer and be of use in many ways. The young peoples' Broad Street weekly prayer meeting is looked forward to with pleasure, and is carried on entirely by the young people.

COUGHS AND HOARSENESS. The irritation that induces coughing is immediately relieved by using "Brown's Bronchial Troches." A simple and safe remedy.

Life is God's gymnasium. He takes the measures; we do not know what they are. He puts us in our places, and gives us what discipline we need. The ministers call churches means of grace, and prayer means of grace, and the Bible means of grace; and so they are. But, also, your shop is a means of grace, and your kitchen is a means of grace, and your social gathering is a means of grace; your dull and stupid clerk is a means of grace, and your more dull and stupid cook is a means of grace — or disgrace, just as you choose to make them. Let a man go into life believing this, taking life as his school preparing for the life beyond, and what a glorious thing it is to live! Even failures do not discourage such a man, because he says, I have failed once, and, now I know what my weak point is, I will correct it next time. Christ supplies our need by teaching us the meaning and significance of life.—Lyman Abbott, D. D.

I Had Goitre

Or swellings in the neck since I was 10 years old; am now 52. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and the swelling has entirely disappeared. It has been very troublesome. When I began I was feeling so discouraged with the goitre and rheumatism, I would as soon be dead as alive. Whenever I caught cold I could not walk two blocks without fainting. Now I am free from it all and I recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla. I received a letter from Mrs. Jennie Bigelow, now of Fremont, Mich., asking if my testimonial in behalf of Hood's Sarsaparilla was true; I replied it was, and sent particulars. I have a letter thanking me for recommending

Dr. W. C. Black:

DEAR SIR: I am charmed with my Holman Bible, and know it will bring me pleasure many days. Accept my thanks for your promptness.

Yours, etc., S. W. HARTWELL.

Water Valley, Miss.

The Holman Bible for $1 65.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.65 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to Dec., '96. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in boorgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2.45 instead of $1 65. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2.45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We are now prepared to fill orders for Bibles (both kinds) promptly.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

STRICKEN WITH PARALYSIS.

The following, which appeared in the Western Christian Advocate of May 22, 1895, has been inclosed to me, with requests from several sufferers from paralysis for particular information as to the "remedial" treatment quickly and effectually employed in the case referred to.

Similar inquiries came after notices in other papers:

[From the Western Christian Advocate.]

Dr. W. H. DePuy, on April 30, while preparing to leave the New York Christian Advocate office at the close of office hours, was suddenly stricken with paralysis, the stroke involving the right side. Fortunately several good friends among his associates at the publishing house were at hand, and remedial help was quickly obtained and proved so effectual that circulation was speedily restored and he was able to be removed to his uptown home. Failing to take the immediate rest which the serious nature of the attack required, after a few days he was again prostrated with paroxysms of numbness in the hand and arm, and since that time has been confined to his room. He is now steadily improving, and he expects, after a few weeks of further rest to resume work on some partially completed books upon which he has long been engaged.

To these inquirers this brief response is cheerfully given: As soon as the nature of the attack was recognized and while my friends were engaged in rubbing the side affected, another kindly, at my request, hastily called Mr. J. E. Du Bois, of the Electropoise office, and the latter, whose office was near by, quickly responded, and applied the Electropoise first to the left wrist, and a little later to the right ankle. No drug or other medicine of any kind was used. In response to the application of the instrument during the night, and the next morning I returned to the office feeling no other inconvenience from the attack, except that of being much weakened in the stricken side. In the afternoon I attended a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Sunday School Union, of which I am a member. I now believe there won't have been no early after effects if I had followed the advice of my more prudent friends and professional attendants. Later during the occasional and severe attacks the Electropoise was applied at or near the stricken parts of the body with speedy and unfailing relief, until they ceased to return. W. H. DEPUY.

Louisiana Conference.

We had the pleasure of attending the recent session of the Louisiana Conference. Busy as we always are at Conference with publisher's business, we had the good fortune to secure the facile pen of Rev. J. M Henry to write up the proceedings. Bishop Hargrove, in keeping with his record, magnified his office. We know of no presiding officer who holds the reins more firmly, or dispatches business with greater rapidity. The brethren were delighted with him, and will always be glad to have him as their presiding officer.

Jackson entertained the Conference handsomely. Pastor Singleton and Presiding Elder Johnston proved themselves admirable hosts. The Centenary College boys seemed much interested in the proceedings.

We missed Dr. Morton's address the night before Conference, but heard it highly spoken of. He made a short, but pointed and appropriate address during the first morning session, and then hied away to another Conference.

Dr. Tigert was present in the interest of the Review and the Publishing House. He makes a splendid showing for the Review. During the short period since he took charge he has made it self-supporting, and thus removed a reproach from our church. We missed the Doctor's sermon, owing to the fact that press of business called us home Friday evening.

An enjoyable feature of the Conference session was the Church Extension anniversary, at which the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society was represented by Miss Suzie Lyons, of New Orleans, and Mrs. Bishop Hargrove. Miss Lyons made a very creditable showing for the Conference society. Mrs. Hargrove's address in behalf of the general work was replete with instruction, and was much enjoyed.

We heard excellent sermons from L. F. Jackson, E. N. Evans, and R. W. Tucker.

We were hospitably entertained during our stay by Dr. J. W. Jones and his charming daughters. We were fortunate in having as our fellow guests Rev. John A. Miller and Rev. J. W. McLaurin.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

FIRST DAY.

The fiftieth session of the Louisiana Annual Conference convened in Jackson on Dec. 11. The Conference was opened with religious exercises conducted by Bishop R K. Hargrove.

The roll was called, and many of the old guard and a large number of the younger men responded. But the unique Parvin, the gentle Singletary, and the well-known Norwood were not, for the Lord had called them from this field of toil and sorrow to be with himself.

J. T. Sawyer was elected secretary, with F. S. Parker, W. G. Evans and H. H. Ahrens as assistants.

The following persons were admitted on trial: W. H. Hatfield, J L. Alford, Thos. Carter, C. D. Atkinson, Frank N. Sweeney, C. C. Wier and E E. Riggs.

Under Ques. 20, the Bishop called the following names: C. Keener, character passed, and the name referred to Committee on Conference relations. for a supernumerary relation. The following were called, their characters passed, and their names referred for a superannuate relation: P. H. Dieffenweirth, Jas. L Wright, Jesse Fulton, E. W. Yancey, Geo. Jackson, Joseph H. Stone, R. S. Trippett, E. B. Foust, Thos. B. White, T. S. Randle, C. R. Godfrey.

The presiding elders were called, and their character passed: J. T. Sawyer, P A. Johnston, H O. White, S. J. Davies, J. L. P. Sheppard, J D. Harper and B. F. White.

Ques. 2 was called. "Who remain on trial?" was called, and the following were continued and promoted to the class of the second year: A. S. J. Neill, R W. Vaughan, C. C. Miller, I. L. Bronson. The following not having passed the required examination was continued on trial in the first year: W. D. Pickens. The following was discontinued, Jas. J. Smylie, at his own request.

SECOND DAY.

The Conference was called to order this morning by the Bishop, and requested Rev. T. J. Upton to conduct divine services. The first chapter of first Timothy was read, and, after singing and prayer, the roll was called, and about fifteen additional ministers and laymen responded.

After reading minutes, the trustees of the New Orleans Depository reported, giving about $600 surplus fund to the superannuates.

Received by transfer: Rev. T. L. Lallance, of New Mexico; Rev. W. J. Roberts, of Mississippi.

Ques. 2 was taken up, "Who remain on trial?" and Revs. E. L. Alford, W. G. Roberts, L. E. Wicht, N. E. Joyner, R. R. Randle, Rev. W. B. Van Valkenburgh and Rev. A. W. Turner were continued on trial.

J. W. Lee, Harry W. Rickey, Elton Wilson, W. E. Akin, W. A. Clarke and T. A. Luster elected deacons.

W. T. Woodward, W. H. Benton, T. M. Wafer and E. T. Denson continued on trial. C. R. Seward discontinued at his own request. R C. Grace advanced to class of third year. B. H. Sheppard, W. D. Gaskins, W. D. Haney, J. R. Roy and N. J. Roberts elected to elder's orders.

The secretary of the Parsonage Society submitted report, showing many pastors had been assisted in building parsonages this year.

W. G. Roberts, local, elected deacon. Martin, local, elected elder.

Rev. C. R. Montgomery was readmitted into the Conference.

Ques. 20: "Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?" Their names were called, one by one, and their characters passed.

The Conference adjourned. Dr. C. W. Carter pronounced the benediction.

THIRD DAY.

The third day of the Conference was an ideal Southern day. Not a cloud marred the beauty of the sky. The opening exercises were conducted by Dr. W. C. Black. The prayer was fervent, and the singing was with zest.

A resolution sent up from the Opelousas District Conference was read, and received. The resolution called for the appointment and maintenance of two French missionaries in that district by the Parent Board. Dr. C. W. Carter was appointed to represent the claims of South Louisiana, and urge compliance with this request upon the Board at its next meeting.

Ques. 20 was resumed, and all the preachers were found blameless in their lives and official administration.

Dr. J. J. Tigert was introdnced, and made a telling speech for the Methodist Review, and in an incredibly short time the genial Doctor had secured the renewal of all the old subscribers, and additions. The Doctor is a full team.

The Conference reviewed vote of last year by which W. F. Sanders was located for unacceptability. W. F. Sanders was represented on the Conference floor by Thos. J. Upton, and was reinstated.

The sum of $225 was assessed upon the several charges for the publication of Minutes.

The following persons were granted the superannuated relation: P. H. Dieffenweirth, J. L. Wright, Jesse Fulton, E. W. Yancey, Geo. Jackson, J. H. Stone, R. S. Trippett, E. B. Foust, T. B. White, Thos. Randle, J. B. Walker, and Rev. C. Keener was granted the supernumerary relation.

FOURTH DAY.

This morning the air was fresh and bracing. All the ground was covered with a white coating of frost; yet the preachers were a little late in assembling at the Conference room, due doubtless to the continnous work of the previous days. The Bishop was indisposed, and did not get to the Conference room in time for the opening. Rev. B. F. White, presiding elder of the Delhi district, was called to the chair. Devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. I. T. Reames.

The Committee on Temperance reported through its chairman, Rev. R. M. Blocker. The report was adopted, and the following preamble and resolution also in connection therewith.

Whereas, A formidable organization in the city of New Orleans, with its varied allied influences throughout the State, are making a determined effort to secnre the repeal of the Snnday law at the approaching session of the Legislature; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we will use our best efforts to prevent the success of such an effort, and urge our people, in common with all who love the honor of our State, to secure the election of snch senators and representatives as will pledge themselves to diligence in maintaining the present statute or passing one better suited to secnre the Sunday rest, which is the right of all our people.

J. M. HENRY,
L. F. JACKSON.

The Joint Board of Finance, through its chairman, Rev. T. K. Faunt LeRoy, reported. The amount of money raised for widows and orphans by the churches was $3,041.20; from the New Orleans Depository, $450; from the Bynum Bequest, $720; from the Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, $270—making a total of $4,424.20. This sum was then distributed among the several claimants upon the Conference. The appropriation for this fund for the next year was $4,900.

The following resolution was presented by the Committee raised by the Conference to consider Epworth League matters:

Resolved, That the Annual Conference be requested to appoint an Epworth League Board, to be composed of one layman from each presiding elder's district and a like number of ministers, which shall give special attention to all Epworth League interests within the bounds of the Conference. The Board shall meet annually at the same time and place as the Annual Conference and shall act as a Committee on Epworth League.

Resolved, That this Board be authorized to appoint four ministers as field secretaries, who shall co-operate with the preachers in charge in the organization of Leagues and development of the Leagues already organized. The expense of these secretaries to be paid by the Leagues of the Conference.

The resolution was adopted, and the following Board was appointed: Rev. J. M. Henry, president; Rev. R H. Wynn, secretary; Rev. F. S. Parker, Rev. L. F. Jackson, Rev. Jno. F. Foster, Rev. H. W. May, Rev. H. H. Ahrens — ministerial. Messrs. W. M. Sloan, Shreveport district; Jno. B. Crebbin, of New Orleans district; H. H. White, of Alexandria district; Jno. Pharr, Jr., Opelousas district; Chas. Smith, Arcadia district; F. A. Miles, of Delhi district, and H. C. Newsom, of Baton Rouge district,

The Bishop came in and took charge of the Conference. Bro. White, as he retired from the chair, was heard to remark that, after having tried the office of Bishop for a few hours, he was fully satisfied on that line for the rest of his life.

The hour having arrived the order of the day was taken up, and Ruston, La., was chosen as the next place of meeting over several worthy competitors.

Chairman Jno. F. Foster, of the Sunday-school Board, read the report of that Board. Some improvement had been made in Sunday-school work, but the number of Sunday-schools had decreased during the year. The Board recommended that our ministers and Sunday-school workers avail themselves, as far as practicable, of the advantages afforded by the State Sunday-school Association.

The following young ministers having completed the period of probation, and having proved satisfactory to the Conference, both in ministerial labors and intellectual progress, and having by vote of the Conference been admitted to full connection, were called before the altar to answer such questions as the Discipline requires the Bishop to put to all such as are admitted into full connection in the Conference: J. W. Lee, H. W. Rickey, Elton Wilson, W. E. Akin, W. A. Clarke, T. M. Wafer, T. A. Luster, W. G. Roberts.

Rev. C. M. Lyons read the report on the Bible cause. The report called attention to the fact that there was a very large falling off in the collection for the American Bible Society. Rev. J. W. McLaurin, agent of the society, was introduced and delivered a very eloquent appeal to the Conference in behalf of the work which he represented. The Bishop urged upon the people the necessity of supporting the Bible cause.

Rev. J I. Hoffpauir, secretary of the Board of Church Extension, read the report of that Board. The report called attention to the fact that the allowances of the Board far surpassed the funds in the hands of the treasurer. The demand was greater than could be met, yet the Board was accomplishing much good work.

The afternoon session was presided over by Dr. C. W. Carter, president of Centenary College.

The session was devoted to the memorial service. During the year three members of the Conference died.

Rev. R. Parvin, who for more than forty years served in this Conference. Bro. Parvin was a pioneer in this State, and might very well be termed the "camp-meeting king," for in his eventful career he conducted or took part in at least seventy camp meetings. Many of the flourishing circuits in the Conference were first opened by this wonderful man. Many hundreds of men and women were led into the kingdom by his hand.

Rev. Noel B. Norwood, a much younger member of the Conference, yet in some respects as striking a man as Bro. Parvin, died at his post on the Lower Coast, June 3, 1895.

Rev. E. T. Singletary was the third who was called from this life of labors to a realm of rest. Bro. Singletary was a most exemplary young man. Appropriate memoirs had been prepared and were read, and will be recorded in the Minutes of the Conference.

Saturday evening was devoted to educational matters. The Board of Education had arranged a most delightful program, and the Conference and the people of Jackson came out in full force to see and hear. The first speaker of the evening was Rev. C. W. Carter, D. D., president of Centenary College. The Doctor's address surpassed even the most sanguine expectation of those who knew him best. In phrase and fact, in word and worth, it surpassed anything that has been delivered before the Louisiana Annual Conference in these latter years.

Dr. J. A. Parker followed Dr. Carter in a strong speech. Then came Dr. Beard, the inimitable. Dr. Beard, in referring to the president of Centenary, said: "He is a gentleman of the old school and a scholar of the new." Rev. F. N. Parker followed in a short, but telling, speech.

The first educational anniversary of the Conference was a great success. Some friend offered to furnish the money—if Dr. Carter would name the boy—to send a young man to Centenary for a year.

FIFTH DAY—SUNDAY.

Sunday was a great day in Jackson. Bishop R. K. Hargrove preached in the morning, and ordained the following persons: J. W. Lee, H. W. Rickey, Elton Wilson, W. E. Akin, W. A. Clarke, T. A. Luster, W. G. Roberts.

At 3 P. M., instead of the usual sermon, the Lord's Supper was administered, after which the following were ordained elders: B. H. Sheppard, J. P. Haney, Jas. R. Roy, J. P. Martin.

Sunday evening was given to the cause of missions, and addresses made by Dr. J. A. Parker and W. B. Nance.

SIXTH DAY.

Monday, the last day of the Conference, called forth the brethren at an early hour. The Conference opened at the regular hour.

Resolutions of thanks were passed.

Just as the time for reading the minutes came Dr. J. M. Beard arose and asked a location for himself. The request was granted. Rev. H. O. White, presiding elder of Opelousas district, moved a discontinuance for W. B. Van Valkenburgh. The motion was lost, and the young man was appointed to Centenary College as student. W. F. Sanders asked a location, and it was granted.

The business of the Conference having been completed, the Minutes were read and approved, whereupon the Bishop proceeded to answer Ques. 41: "Where are the preachers stationed this year?"

MUL-EN-OL

is a positive specific. In ordinary cases it will quickly effect a complete cure. In the most severe cases it will ward off the danger until the Doctor comes. Always keep it in the house. In case of an emergency it will be found invaluable. Sold everywhere. Price, 50c., $1.00, $2.00. Prepared by

Prepared by FINLAY, DICKS & CO., New Orleans.

Conference Notes.

Rev. Wilson Moore, of the Atlanta circuit, said, in making his report: "We have lots of people in our country who are always shouting, 'Reform, reform, reform;' but they have not been reformed themselves."

***

Mr. Norsworthy, editor of the Record, displayed a most commendable spirit in issuing a daily during the session of the Conference. The Conference proceedings and notes were prepared by Rev. H. S. Johns, of Plaquemine.

Prof. Wiley entertained the Bishop and the cabinet. A splendid arrangement! The Bishop and cabinet made room for the assistant secretary of the Conference at Prof. Wiley's, so that he might be at hand in case of urgent need.

***

Bishop Hargrove makes a good exhorter, as was in evidence at the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission anniversary, when Mrs. Hargrove, after delivering a most eloquent address, called on the Bishop to make a few remarks.

Dr. J. J. Tigert was in attendance upon this session of the Conference. He mingled among the brethren, and pressed the claims of the Methodist Review. This most excellent periodical ought to be in the hands of every preacher and enterprising layman.

Centenary College suspended exercises for three days during Conference. The students and faculty were faithful in attendance upon the session of the Conference. Dr. Carter, the president, is universally loved by the students of the college and the citizens of Jackson.

The Epworth League anniversary, the first in the history of the Conference, was a grand success. Wm. Sloan, president of the State League, was present and made a short, pointed speech. D. Tigert and Dr. W. H. LaPrade followed. These addresses were all of a very high order.

Dr. J. J. Tigert preached a most eloquent sermon on Friday afternoon of the Conference from Matt. v, 28 and 29. He called attention to some of the subtle dangers which beset us even in our work for the Master. In the course of the sermon he announced this proposition: "A man is no better and no worse than the worse deed he is capable of."

Bishop Hargrove presides with dignity and ease, and enables the Conference, by his thorough acquaintance with the work, to dispatch business with marvelous rapidity. When a preacher was making his report in a low tone of voice, to the discomfort of all who desired to hear, the Bishop said: "Brethren, the man who can't speak loud enough to be heard by this Conference, need not expect a large church next year." The brethren reported in a more audible tone afterward.

Bishop Hargrove says some good things occasionally to break the monotony of routine reports. When a brother was complaining of his inability to bring up his collections, and the smallness of his own salary, the Bishop said: "The mammoth sin of the world, and of this age, is covetousness. Covetousness is looking the wheels of the church. Brethren, if you want to raise your own salary, bring up the church collections. Remember, it is just as religious a work to collect money for missions and widows and orphans as it is to shout at a holiness prayer meeting."

The church has a magnificent educational plant here in Centenary College—a college with a glorious history and a more glorious future. Jackson is an ideal college town. No father or mother need have any fears about the boys if they are sent to Jackson. The citizens feel a just pride in the institution, in its past history, in its present life, and its future. They consider it a special duty to see that the young men who come among them seeking preparation for life shall not only receive a literary preparation, but shall not be poisoned by evil influences which will paralyse them for life. The place is beautiful for body, mind and heart.

Rev. P. A. Johnston, presiding elder of Baton Rouge district, is a resident of Jackson, and, with Rev. H. R. Singleton and President C. W. Carter, are a Committee on Public Worship. They have spared no pains to provide the Conference with first-class preaching. These gentlemen are certainly giving themselves to the work of entertaining the Conference.

By E. N. Evans, of Monroe:

"Every man ought to be up to the full extent of his powers, plus the powers of earth and heaven."

"Glad to have a crowd, but I had rather be alone with Christ than have all the world with me."

By L. F. Jackson, of Alexandria:

"The human ideal of a great man meets the divine ideal in the successful man."

"The difference between a Christian and a sinner is: one is a victor, the other a victim; one a success, the other a failure."

"God wants man to succeed. God wants him, above all things, to succeed in spiritual matters."

"Nay, we shall not inherit the earth, but the earth shall inherit us."

Sayings from Bishop Hargrove:

"I can tell a man nine times out of ten. If he bores the Conference with his report, he will bore the congregation with his sermon."

"Sometimes preaching is a miserable failure, sometimes the singing is bad, but there is no discount on the Word of God."

"Don't attempt to take care of yourself, but be in a hurry about the Master's business."

"Of all men in the world, the Methodist preacher ought to be a man of common sense. I have known a young preacher to completely hedge up the way to the hearts of his people by the lack of a little common sense."

"God does not estimate sin by its grossness, but by its guilt."

"It is a very difficult thing for a man to be a success in life, and not be ruined by his success."

"A man can get proud of his humility. Did you know that? What a virtue is humility; how it adorns the ministry!"

Do Not Cause Weakness.

New Orleans, La., Nov. 25.—"We are pleased with the Paper Dolls which were sent for one trade-mark from Hood's Pills and ten cents in stamps. We are greatly pleased with Hood's Pills, because they cause no griping or weakness."—Stella Foch, corner Tricona and Burgundy streets.

Hood's Pills cure biliousness, indigestion.

NOTES.

Bishop Hargrove paid the ADVOCATE office an appreciated call on Tuesday morning.

The Methodist parsonage at Ellisville, Miss., was destroyed by fire on the sixteenth. No insurance—as usual.

Mrs. C. H. Wasson, one of the leading members of Carondelet Street Church, died at her residence in this city last Saturday. The funeral services were conducted by Bishop Keener and Dr. J. B. Walker. She was a thoroughly exemplary Christian.

Mrs. Bishop Hargrove addressed a good audience at Rayne Memorial Church, on Tuesday night, in the interest of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society. It would be a benediction to the church if she could deliver one of her entertaining and instructive talks in all our great centres.

We are in receipt of an invitation to attend the marriage of Miss Belle Pittman, of Waynesboro, Miss., to Mr. John S. Graham, of Jackson, Ala. The marriage will take place on Tuesday evening, the twenty-fourth instant, at the Methodist Church in Waynesboro. We extend hearty congratulations, and wish for them a long, happy and useful life.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

THE WORK OF THE WOMEN.

(Dorcas, Acts ix, 36; Lydia, Acts xvi, 14, 15, 40; Priscilla, Acts xviii, 2, 26; Honorable, Acts xvii, 12.)

Perhaps undue ado made about the "new woman." Nature and time have something to say on the subject. Said the Irishman, that he was little concerned about the "new woman." It was the old woman who opposed him in many ways.

1. A glance at our different congregations reveals the fact that about three-fourths of the auditors are females. There are exceptions; but in our cities this is about the proportion.

(1) It may be that some preachers present an effeminate gospel. No robust thought, no masculine research. Empty sentimentalism.

(2) It may be that, as a rule, females excel the opposite sex in piety. Certainly, they are less exposed to temptations. Have occasion to pray more.

(3) The fact of disparity in attending divine service being undeniable, general church suffrage would result disastrously for the males. Women being largely in the majority, only members of their sex would likely be elected as stewards, delegates, etc.

2. The women referred to in our text, and others whom we could mention, were the assistants of pastors. No attempt of independent action. As assistants, they were able to accomplish much good.

(1) Tabitha was full of good works. Made garments for the indigent. Gave alms. Our women should conduct missionary sewing-schools. Should do good to the needy, in order to win them for the church. Having given his large income to the needy, Bishop McTyeire could say, "I die poor."

(2) Lydia was noted for her hospitality. This Paul and Silas fully appreciated. No home complete without a prophet's chamber. Preachers welcomed and made comfortable. Our itinerant system would soon terminate if our preachers were compelled to seek the expensive entertainment of the hotel.

(3) Priscilla is mentioned in connection with her husband. Both set Apollos right. Perhaps, Priscilla had brought her husband to Christ. All wives and mothers should be chiefly concerned about the religious well-being of husband and children. Heaven would not be heaven to a woman whose husband is in hell, and in hell on account of her neglect.

(4) In conclusion, mention is made of "honorable women which were Greeks." Rich and educated, they could, and, doubtless, did, render efficient service. Yes, the customs of society are averse to Methodism—to Christianity in earnest. To be in society means to be worldly. But with all that, we should seek and look for converts among the opulent and educated. Many among them who are not satisfied with the husks of hypocritical society life.

The attention of the readers of the ADVOCATE is directed to the handsome advertisement of the Dunning-Medine Music Company, which appears on the eighth page of this issue. This new firm is both enterprising and progressive, as well as thoroughly reliable, and fully merits the large patronage it is already receiving. If you intend buying a musical instrument of any description, you should give this firm a call before making your purchase.

Isn't This about So?

Sick people don't enjoy travel; therefore, get them well before starting. That ocean voyage prescribed for the run-down system and pale, sunken cheeks will be far more enjoyed if preceded by the use of a few bottles of CREOLE FEMALE TONIC—the ideal Uterine Tonic and alterative.

Real joy is as sacred and divine a thing as there is. You know that it is true that we may, if we choose, begin to enter on our inheritance of eternal things now, here, in this life.

Scribner's for Christmas

Frank R. Stockton has a Christmas love story, which bears a characteristic title—"The Staying Power of Sir Rohan." Its illustrations are quaint and exactly suitable.

A thrilling Detective story by C. E. Carryll, entitled "The River Syndicate," perhaps equalling Sherlock Holmes' best work. Illustrated.

Joel Chandler Harris' characteristic tale of a faithful slave—"The Colonel's Nigger-Dog."

Other Christmas stories are "A White Blot," by Henry Van Dyke, a poetic and imaginative tale of a picture (illustrated); "Herotam of Landers," by A. S. Pier (illustrated); and "Hopper's Old Man," by R. G. V. Myers.

Sentimental Tommy

By J. M. Barrie.

Those who have read and who has not? "The Little Minister" and "A Widow in Thrums" can anticipate what Mr. Barrie's "Sentimental Tommy" will be.

It is to be the chief serial in SCRIBNER'S for 1896, beginning in the January number.

Two Years for $4.50.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE costs $3.00 a year, but new subscribers can have all the numbers for 1895 and a year's subscription for 1896 for $4.50.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE is going to be better next year than ever. It is going to have new features. Its Publishers are not satisfied with past successes. It purposes to more thoroughly deserve the confidence of the reading public.

The History Serial—"Last Quarter Century in the United States"—will be continued. Just now it is approaching a period of absorbing interest to the present generation—the first administration of President Cleveland.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE ought to get careful consideration as a Christmas gift. The $4.50 offer ought to get double consideration.

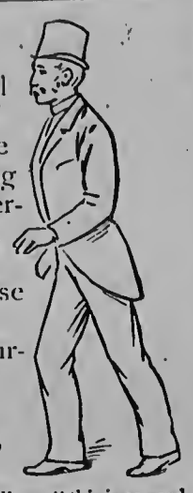
Where Is He Going?



Gentle reader, he is hurrying home. And it's house-cleaning time, too—think of that! Fifteen years ago, he wouldn't have done it. Just at this time, he'd be "taking to the woods." But now, things are different. His house is cleaned with Pearline. That makes house-cleaning easy.

Easy for those who do it—easy for those who have it done.

No hard work, no wear and tear, no turmoil and confusion, no time wasted, no tired women, no homeless men.

Everything's done smoothly, quickly, quietly, and easily. Try it and see.

Send it Back Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, be honest—send it back. 331 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

SHE MADE HOME HAPPY.

BY F. L. S.

"She made home happy!" These few words I read
Within a churchyard, written on a stone;
No name, nor date, the simple words alone
Told me the story of the unknown dead.
A marble column lifted high its head
Close by, inscribed to one the world has known.
But ah! that lonely grave with moss o'ergrown,
Thrilled me far more than his who armies led.

"She made home happy!" Through the long sad years
The mother toiled, and never stopped to rest
Until they crossed her hands upon her breast,
And closed her eyes, no longer dim with tears.
The simple record that she left behind

Appreciating Sunshine.

We have a great deal of sunshiny weather in this beautiful world, but a great many of us are not appreciating any of it. We are so intent upon finding fault with almost all kinds of weather that we do not know when we are receiving some of God's greatest blessings. As Christians we ought to be ashamed of this lack of appreciation of the glories and joys of God's beautiful provision and plan for his creatures. One beautiful morning we took special pains to ask ten different people what they thought of the weather, and we will give the answers as near as we can remember them. The first was a middle aged business man. He said: "Horrible! horrible! Did you ever see anything like it?" The next was a young lady. She said: "Yes, pretty nice; but I'm afraid it is going to rain to-morrow." Next a young man: "Well, we ought to have one nice day after such ugly weather as we have been having." Next an old lady: "Delightful! How good God is to give us such sunshine!" The next answer was: "The meanest weather I ever saw. I never knew before such an ugly atmosphere." The next: "Pretty fair to-day, although it is good weather for rheumatism." The next: "I don't see why we can't have half-way decent days like this all the time." The next: "Yes, sunshiny and nice, but a mean feeling in the air." The next: "I do hope now we shall have a spell of bearable weather." The next: "We ought to have this kind of weather every day; it's a shame the kind of weather we have been having."

It does not seem possible that so many of God's creatures do not seem to appreciate the fact that the large majority of our days are sunshiny and beautiful; and yet it is true. The rain and the snow make it possible for us to have the bright, beautiful, joyous, sunshiny days. Is it not time for the children of God to begin appreciating and enjoying what God has prepared for his children's happiness?—Union Gospel News.

A Blessed Lady.

What we are and do often means more than what we say. And little eyes can see more than words can tell. In an article in Childhood, Louise Chandler Moulton tells this story of an early lesson from one who "went about doing good."

"There were no factories in the place where I lived, no crowded tenements, no starving poor, but there was a certain amount of poverty and of ignorance; and there was in this place a lady—the richest lady in all the country, so I heard the people say—and I watched her comings and goings with a sort of romantic eagerness. She used to drive about, all over the big sparsely-settled township in a little open wagon, and in that wagon were books for children who had no home libraries, dainties for sick people, toys for fretful babies, whose mothers had their own housework to do. And this rich lady—who seemed to my childish eyes a sort of goddess of good fortune—never indulged herself in any luxury. Fashion for her was as if it did not exist. She wore a simple cotton gown in Summer, an equally simple woolen one in Winter, and she went on her errands of mercy with a sun-bonnet shading her sweet face from the hot suns of June, or a warm hood protecting her ears from the blasts of January. I don't know that I ever said to myself, 'Of such is the kingdom of heaven,' but I surely felt it.

"One day I was sent to her house on a slight commission for my mother. She was out, as usual, but the housekeeper, discerning, I suppose, in my face something of the reverence with which I regarded her mistress, asked me suddenly, 'Do you want to see where she prays?' and thereupon opened the door of a room almost as austerely simple as a monk's, and pointed to a couch where I could see the impression of a head bowed in prayer. 'There,' she said, 'is where she kneels.' The housekeeper was called away, and shyly and almost as if it were a sacrilege I was committing, I kneeled in the spot where the Lady of Heaven, as I called her in my thoughts, was wont to pray, and I said a hurried prayer that I might, with God's help, walk in the holy way she trod. I had been taken to church all my life, I had heard prayers enough and sermons enough, but I do not remember that anyone of them had ever moved me to a single thrill of spiritual longing and aspiration such as I experienced in that hushed room, where she was wont to kneel, whose daily life seemed to me more than prayer or sermon. There is no truth in the world more solemn than that our lives are the gospel of our children, a gospel that outweighs a thousandfold any teaching with which our lips contradict it. Put on what deft disguises we may, the thing we are is apparent to the young eyes that watch us so unceasingly."—Exchange.

A Girl's Chances.

During the evening services of one of our town churches, one Summer night, a party of young people strolled in quite late. They had not perhaps set out to go to church; they seemed bent on a frolic rather, and continued their frolicsome ways after taking their seats in the house of God, talking, laughing, looking about, in all their movements disturbing the worship and the worshipers.

We were much struck with the comment of a young man who sat near them; he was disturbed in his own worship, but he did not seem to resent that; he must have been shocked at the irreverence shown to his heavenly Father, but he did not mention that. "Oh," said he, "how can a girl throw away her chances so recklessly? Don't girls know that a young man's belief in what is good and true and high-minded depends mainly upon them? That every time he goes to church with a young lady, or pays her a visit, or joins her in a walk, it is in her power to make him think more purely of women, more reverently of God? And that every time she shows herself simply frivolous, much more when she dares to be funny at the expense of reverence, it not only lowers the young man's opinion of her (that may be a small matter), but it debases him, injuring the warp and woof of his very soul?"

Do our girls always recognize what chances for good lie in their slender palms—what tremendous chances for evil?—Forward.

An Underground Prayer Meeting.

A little driver boy who worked in a dark coal mine, far underground, driving the mules that dragged the cars to and from the places where the miners were digging out the black coal, was one day delighted to see his Sunday-school teacher, with some other gentleman, descend the shaft to visit the mine.

At first the gentleman did not recognize in the little black face the countenance of Jim, who was always so clean on Sunday; but when he did he was very glad to accept Jim's services as guide through the mine. As they were coming back to ascend to the upper air again, Jim said:

"Teacher, here's one place more you must see."

He led him to a big gloomy looking cavern, where the visitor soon distinguished several rough seats cut in the coal.

"Here," said Jim, "is where we have our prayer meetings. While the miners are filling the cars, three of us boys often get a chance to run off here for a few minutes. Then Joe reads a bit out of the Bible he carries in his pocket, and we all kneel and say a bit of prayer, then the rest of the day goes so much better. And here's our missionary box," he added, showing with great pride a rude box cut out of a block of coal.—Epworth Herald.

How It Is Done.

I asked a cobbler once how long it took to become a good shoemaker. He answered promptly: "Six years, and then you must travel." That cobbler had an artist-soul. I told a friend the story, and he asked his cobbler the same question—how long does it take to become a good shoemaker? "All your life, sir." That was still better—a Michael Angelo of shoes! Mr. Maydole, the hammer-maker of Central New York, was an artist. "Yes," said he to Mr. Paton, "I have made hammers here for twenty-eight years." "Well, you ought to be able to make a pretty good hammer by this time." "No, sir," was the answer; "I never made a pretty good hammer. I make the best hammer made in the United States." Daniel Morell, once president of the Cambria rail works in Pittsburg, which employed seven thousand men, was an artist, and trained artists. "What is the secret of such a development of business as this?" asked the visitor. "We have no secret," was the answer; "we always try to beat our last batch of rails. That's all the secret we have, and we don't care who knows it."—Rev. William C. Gunnett.

A Word of Appreciation.

Recently, at a table presided over by a young housekeeper, and surrounded by a goodly company of friends and strangers, a guest said, casually, after tasting a dainty dish: "Mrs. Blank, this salad is delicious. Who made it?" The lady of the house replied: "Thank you, I have been trying a new recipe! I am glad you like it." That seemed to be all of the matter; but the next day, when the guests departed, to one of them the lady said: "I am very grateful for what you said about my salad. I had been worrying about that dinner—it seemed too simple and plain for such an occasion and I thought nobody was enjoying it. The salad was a new dish, and I was especially anxious that it should be nice. Your kind words went right to my heart, and lifted a weight from my very soul. I am thankful."

Losing Temper.

Losing the temper takes all the sweet, pure feeling out of life. You may get up in the morning with a clean heart, full of song, and start out as happy as a bird, and the moment you are crossed and you give way to your temper, the clean feeling vanishes, and a load as heavy as lead is rolled upon the heart, and you go through the rest of the day feeling like a culprit. And anyone who has experienced this feeling knows that it can not be shaken off, but must be prayed off.—Selected.

One of our most brilliant writers gives us this bit of conversation which took place between an arrogant woman of the world and a young lady: "I have never liked you, and there are others who feel the same to you." "Very likely," was the calm reply. "I used to feel bad when I heard that So-and So, and Mrs. This or Mr. That did not like me, until I learned to look and see who and what they did like; and since then I have never been discontented or dissatisfied with myself because some one did not like me."—Selected.

Moderate Drinkers.

Sanitary science teaches that no one has a right to destroy himself and peril the health and comforts of others. The moderate and periodic drinkers are always sources of danger to themselves and others. To wait until they become chronic and degenerate into law breakers is to apply the remedy when it is too late.

Public sentiment should not permit one to become an inebriate or tolerate him after he has reached such a stage. He should be prevented and forced to undergo treatment and should be regarded as dangerous to the safety and welfare of the community and isolated until fully restored.

In the near future science will demand that every inebriate shall have legal guardianship and restriction of personal freedom until he recovers. When these cases realize that such restrictions will be enforced, they will seek treatment in the early stages of their disease. The teaching of science demands that both the pauper and millionaire be seized at the very onset and forced into conditions of health and sobriety, and saved from becoming burdens on the community, centers of ruin and misery.—Dr. T. D. Crothers, in Journal of Hygiene.

For a Vegetable Diet.

One reason why we do not use vegetables more is that we have not learned to cook them properly. There are objections to a vegetable diet, but not more numerous than may be brought against the use of meat. Vegetable nutrients are less easily assimilated than meat, but this difficulty will be removed when the art and science of cookery are further studied. As we learn more about the structure of vegetable substances and the way in which they are affected by different temperatures, we shall be able to prepare them in such a manner that they will yield more nutriment. Most people overestimate the amount of nourishment obtainable from meats, and are surprised to find that vegetables, aside from cereals, have any food value. The high price of beef last Spring taught many families that meat is less essential than they formerly supposed. This is a most desirable lesson for the average American household, since meat is our most expensive food, all things considered. At this season of the year so many other foods are obtainable that meat may be almost wholly omitted from our bill of fare. Having learned to do without it during the Summer, we may manage to get along with less this Winter, and be better in health and richer in purse.—Anna Barrows.

The Cuisine.

Conducted by L. A. B.

Good Breakfast Rolls.—Put one quart of flour into a bowl, make a hole in the centre with a spoon. Put in one-half cup granulated sugar, one heaping teaspoonful salt, one heaping tablespoonful each of good sweet lard and butter. Dissolve one-half a compressed yeast cake in half a cup of warm water, add to the other ingredients with one pint of warm milk, or milk and water, stirring thoroughly and vigorously for five minutes. Turn a cover over the bowl, and cover all with a cloth. Stand in a warm place over night. In the morning knead in flour enough to make a nice velvety dough, not too stiff; cover and stand again in a warm place until it is very light. Turn out on a breadboard, and roll out with a rolling pin to a half inch in thickness. Cut out with a cutter, place a small piece of butter on one half and fold the other half over. Place on cooky tins, cover lightly and stand in a warm place until light. Bake from fifteen to twenty minutes in a quick oven. This quantity will make about thirty-six rolls. By commencing at two or three o'clock in the afternoon, and kneading them up at night, one could bake them early in the morning. Twice the above quantity may be easily made at one time.—Home Journal.

In Memoriam.

Sister Mary Malvina Isbell (nee Hebert), wife of Rev. R. S. Isbell, fell sweetly asleep in Jesus, Tuesday morning, Nov. 19, 1895 at 1:15 o'clock, aged sixty-nine years ten months and twenty-four days. She was the daughter of Valery Hebert, of Iberville parish, La. She was first married to the Hon. Mark Boatner on Feb. 21, 1871. Nearly twenty-five years before her demise she became the wife of our bereaved brother, R. S. Isbell.

The writer has known Sister Isbell for nearly the full time of her wedded life with Bro. Isbell, as one of the gentlest, purest, and most earnest Christians. As an itinerant's wife, she was never known to complain of the hardship and disappointments especially connected with the life of a traveling preacher. She was a devoted mother, and was especially diligent in the training of her children "in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." She was not only a true wife, but a truly devoted Christian worker, ever glad to assist her husband in his work of soul-saving. She was beloved by all who knew her. I was at her bedside only a few days before her departure, and there was a peaceful calmness of soul seldom seen and hardly ever excelled. No doubt but her crown has many stars, evidencing her success in winning souls for Christ. In her dying hour she remembered our missionaries, and made her last contribution to them.

We can truly say of Sister Isbell, "She hath done what she could," and, "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

In her death we lose from the church to the battle a true heroine, and give to the church in the victory a worthy companion for the saints.

B. F. WHITE

OBITUARIES.

WILLIS—SAMUEL BAXTER WILLIS, son of Judge A. Willis and wife, was born Oct. 14 1863 at Lisbon, Claiborne parish, La. He first united with the M. E. Church, South, at the age of ten years. He was educated at Homer, La. Monroe, La., and at the State University in Baton Rouge. He departed this life at his father's home in Monroe, La., June 13, 1895.

With many other messages of love to his friends, while he was dying, he sent me this: "Tell Bro. White I always loved him, and still love him with my dying breath."

The following tribute from his friend and employer, Sheriff Isaiah Garrett, is a true picture of our deceased brother.

H. F. WHITE,
Late his pastor.

True merits should be recognized; noble sentiments, exceptional character and praiseworthy motives should be acknowledged, and those who are most familiar with these traits in a man's character are the proper ones to bear testimony thereto. The truest test of manhood is the alacrity with which we obey where duty calls. The best test of the moral tone of man's sentiments is his tender regard for home relations.

Baxter Willis has been in my employ for nearly three years as deputy sheriff, and as such our relations were of the most confidential nature. No one could be more efficient or honest in the discharge of the duties assigned to him than was Baxter. He was always ready and willing to respond (and that without a murmur) to any duty I called upon him to perform. He was not only an excellent deputy, a most worthy officer, but he was also a true friend. He was extremely kind to and considerate of the prisoners under his charge, and at the same time he was vigilant and careful, and none ever escaped from his custody. He was shrewd in investigation, quick to arrive at accurate conclusions from meagre facts, cautious in making arrests, being careful of the lives of his associates, and the criminal. He would scorn to take advantage of his position as an officer to mistreat a prisoner, and every man who became his prisoner left his custody as his friend. And yet none ever escaped from him, for no man better understood the relationship between officer and prisoner.

His love and devotion to his mother (alas! now almost heart-broken), his affection for his sisters and his regard for his father was pathetically tender. Nothing was too good for him to give, no duty too irksome for him to perform for those loved ones, and in return he was their idol, for he not only deserved their love, but was their only son and brother. He was cut off in the springtime of young and vigorous manhood, the victim of a fearful accident, but fell in the discharge of his duty, and died with the consciousness that he was faithful unto the end.

Oh, dear mother and father and sisters, Baxter has gone from among us, and no more on this earth will we hear his cheery voice or feel his hearty hand-clasp, but Baxter is not lost. Conscious almost to the last moment, and in the full possession of his mental faculties, he died entirely and completely resigned to his fate, and, thank heaven, in the full belief and certainty that he was going home to Jesus. Truly can it be said that our loss was his gain. And even on this earth, though Baxter is lost to his loved ones and to his many friends, yet he is not lost to memory.

ISAIAH GARRETT.

HANCOCK—Little ANNIE WRIGHT, daughter of Hon. J. T. M. and Alice A. Hancock, was born June 17, 1890, at the family home in Jackson parish, La., and died at Raston, La., Nov 2, 1895, aged five years four months and sixteen days.

She was a sweet-spirited little girl, obedient, affectionate, and kind. She manifested unusual intelligence for one of her age. She possessed rare musical talent; could play on the organ, and sing with a sweet voice, "Jesus, lover of my soul," "At the cross," and other of our beautiful hymns. She was fond of attending religious services. Hearing the church bell ringing while sick, she would express a desire to attend the service; but when told she should go when mama went, she was resigned. She was regular in saying her prayers, and seemed to be unusually pious for one of her age. She was patient, and ready to do what she was told to do.

Her attending physician said of her, that in twenty years' practice she was the first angel he ever treated. But the wise Father in heaven, who knoweth all things, and has in his keeping the destiny of all his creatures, knew it was best for little Annie that she should not remain longer on earth, to meet and contend against its ills and its sorrows, and hence took her to himself, where no sorrow is known, and where eternal gladness and joy forevermore fill the soul.

She is the first member of the seven children born unto them that our dear Bro. and Sister Hancock has been called upon to bury. God has dealt very kindly with them, and feeling assured that at the proper time they will meet little Annie again, they express themselves resigned to the divine will, and by his grace are enabled to say with Job, "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away: blessed be the name of the Lord!"

Thank God grace is sufficient for the comforting of the bereaved heart of his trusting followers. Weep not for little Annie. Safe in the arms of Jesus, she waits and watches for your coming into that heavenly home, where loved ones will meet, and meet to part no more.

JAMES L. WRIGHT.

DICKENSON—Mrs. ANNE MILDRED DICKENSON (nee White) was born in Cahola, Ala., Dec. 18, 1825, and died at her daughter's, in Harrison county, Miss., Sept. 4, 1895. She was married to Mr. Wm. Dickenson, March 13, 1847, as I joined the M. E. Church, South, June, 1880. There were five children born to them, one son and four daughters, of whom two—Mr. Jas. Dickenson and Mrs. Lyman Reeves—are left to mourn her loss.

It was the writer's fortune to know this good woman for one year before her death, and, although she was confined to her bed most of this time, she was never heard to murmur or complain, but bore her affliction with Christ-like patience. Just before her death she seemed to suffer untold agonies; but in the midst of it all she asked, "Is this death?" She then began to clap her hands, saying, "Come, Lord, and take me!" and thus continued to shout until her blessed Redeemer called her to come up higher. "Blessed are they that die in the Lord!" The lives of such good people always encourage us to greater efforts, and to attempt, at least, to make our lives sublime, and, departing, leave behind us footprints on the sands of time.

We extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved ones, and pray that they may be so perfectly resigned to the will of their heavenly Father that they will say, "The Lord gave, the Lord hath taken away: blessed be the name of the Lord!"

H. B.

REAGAN—IRA W. REAGAN, adopted son of Judge A. Willis and wife, was born in August, 1874, in Mississippi. He was in early childhood adopted by Judge A. Willis and wife, and by them raised to youthful manhood. He died of swamp fever Sept. 11, 1895, at the residence of Mr. Geo. C. Phillips, on Island Desiard, parish of Ouachita, aged twenty-one years.

He was a true young gentleman and Christian, having been a member of the M. E. Church, South since boyhood. He was a trusted business man esteemed by all.

How soon after the death of Baxter was the adopted son to follow! Only three months, lacking two days, were they separated by death. May God's best blessings of comforting grace be given to the bereaved loved ones left behind!

H. F. WHITE,
Former pastor.

EVANS—CLAIBORNE LYMAN, son of Rev. C. C. Evans, was born in Hillsboro, Miss., Jan. 23, 1895, and died Nov. 3. He died from the effects of a scald received by the upsetting of a pot by the fireplace. He, of course, suffered much. His first given name was for me. The little one is safe in the better world.

are soft, so soft they scarce can be called bones in the earlier years; gradually they harden, and furnish the frame which supports the growing body. The hardening comes from what chemists term "the mineral substances."

When these are absent we have "Rickets"—a lack of bone-tissue, which shows itself in delayed teething, profuse head-sweats, and later, if not arrested, malformations and deformities.

Such a baby needs lime for its weak bones and cod-liver oil for its fat-starved body.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites of lime and soda will give its little body the needed fat in an easy form.

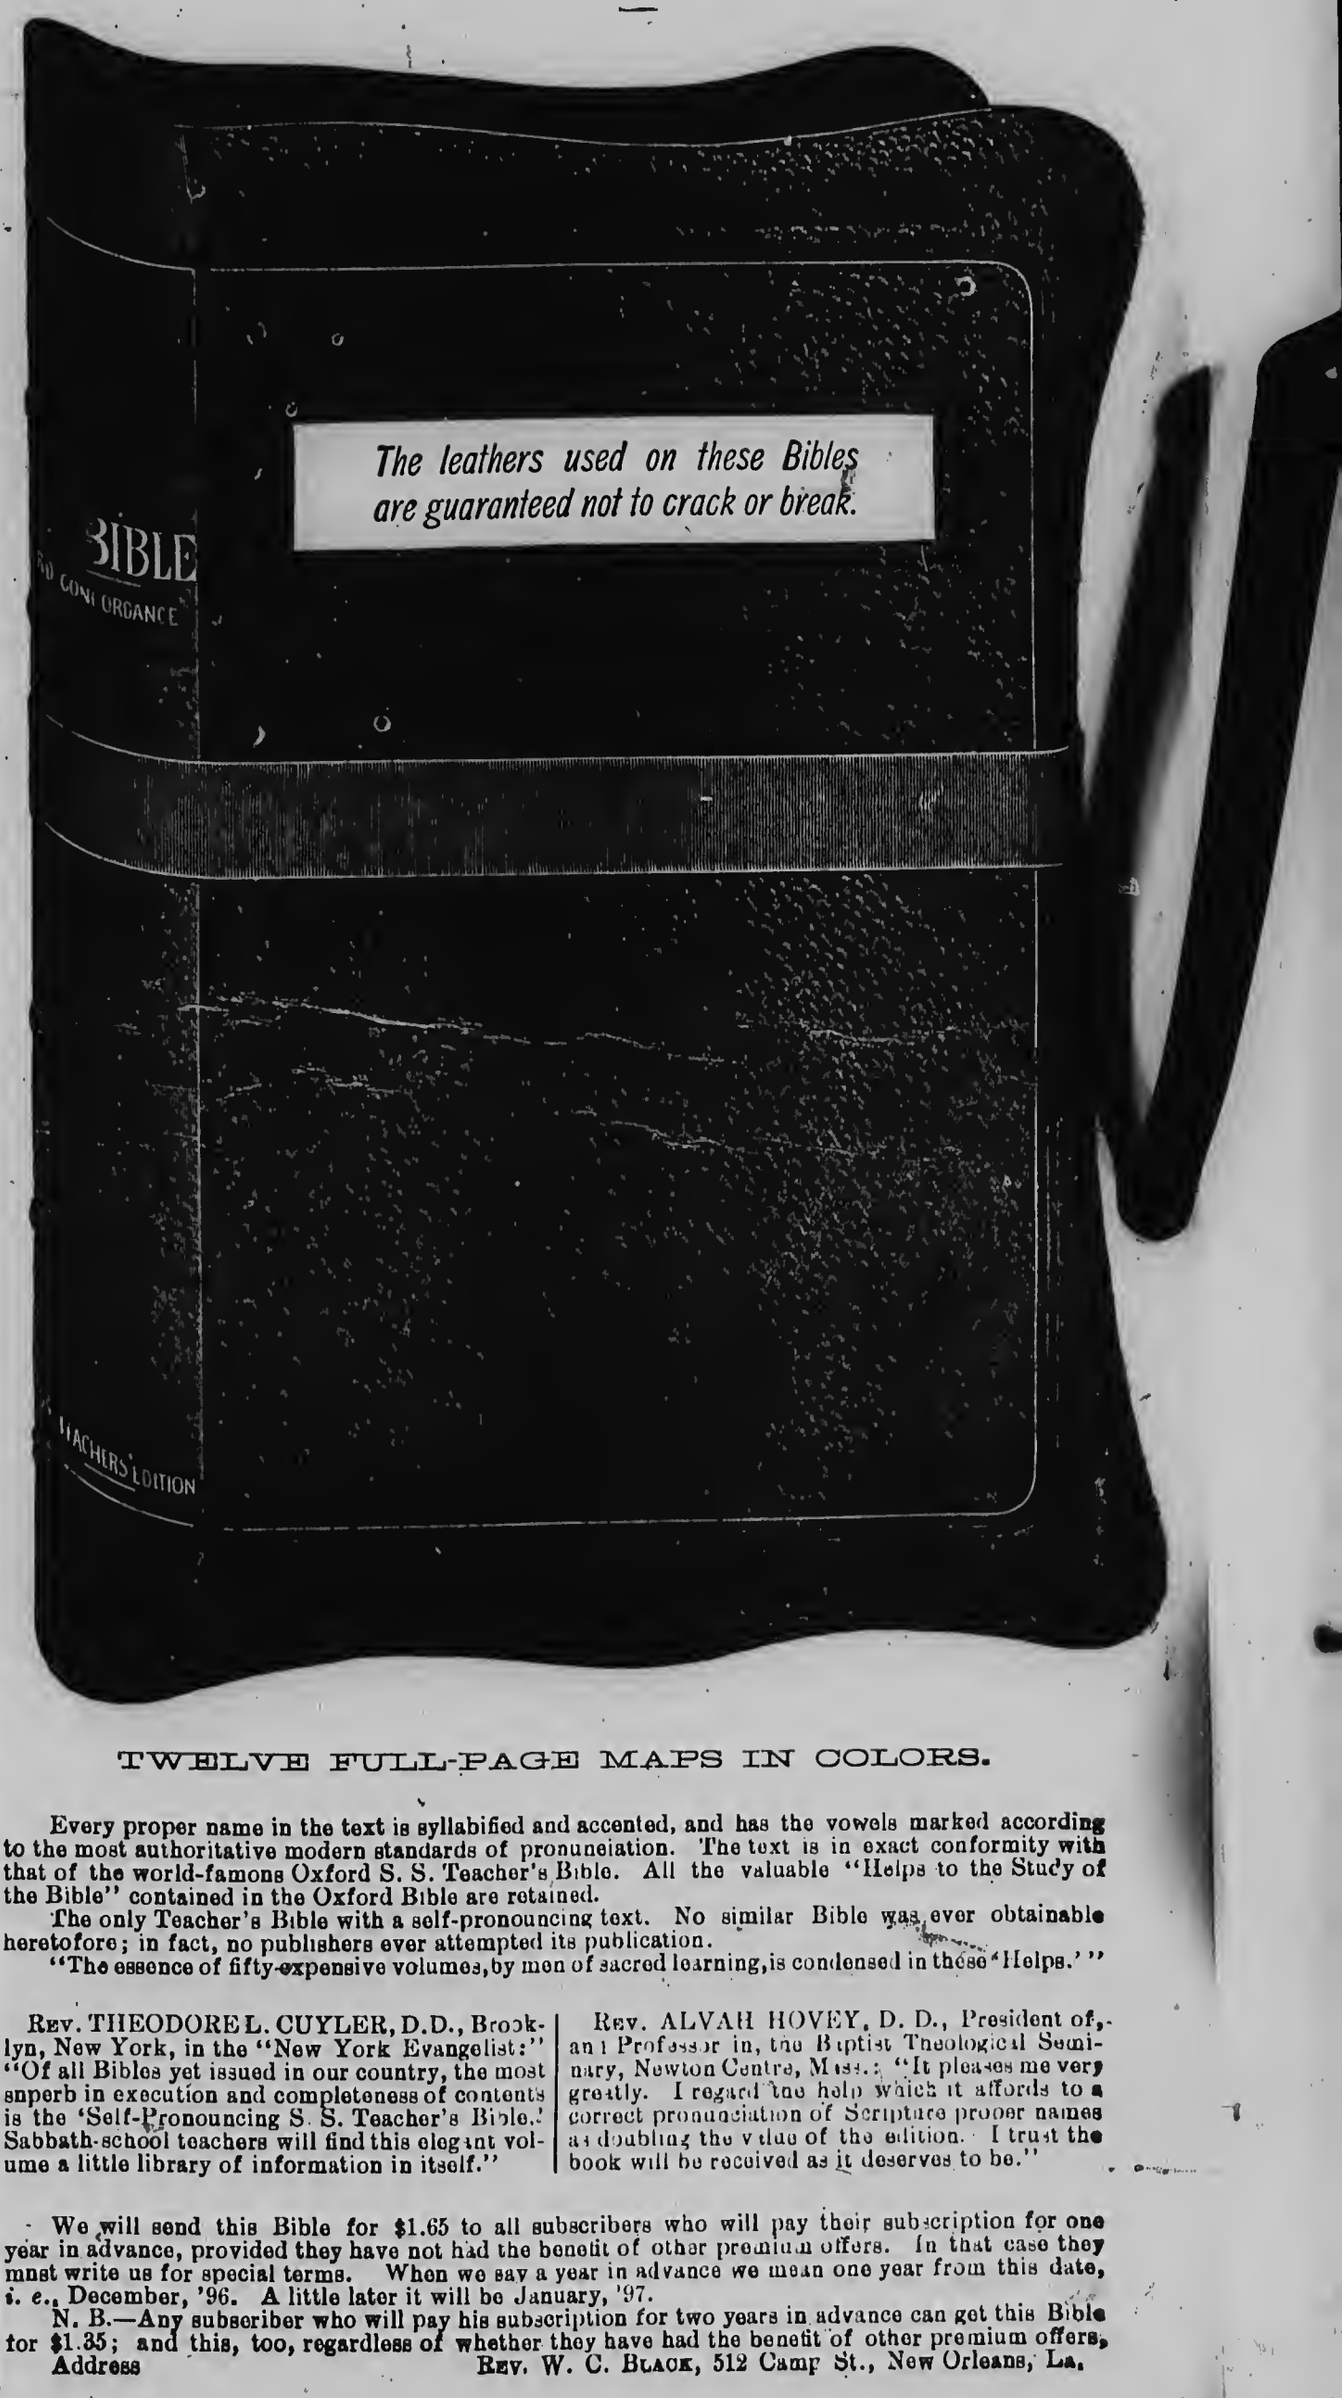
The Holman Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.

Minion, 8vo. Divinity Circuit, Round Corners, etc.



TWELVE FULL-PAGE MAPS IN COLORS.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn, New York, in the "New York Evangelist:" "Of all Bibles yet issued in our country, the most superb in execution and completeness of contents is the 'Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.' Sabbath-school teachers will find this elegant volume a little library of information in itself."

REV. ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., President of, and Professor in, the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.: "It pleases me very greatly. I regard the help which it affords to a correct pronunciation of Scripture proper names as doubling the value of the edition. I trust the book will be received as it deserves to be."

We will send this Bible for $1.65 to all subscribers who will pay their subscription for one year in advance, provided they have not had the benefit of other premium offers. In that case they must write us for special terms. When we say a year in advance we mean one year from this date, i. e., December, '96. A little later it will be January, '97.

N. B.—Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two years in advance can get this Bible for $1.35; and this, too, regardless of whether they have had the benefit of other premium offers.

Is Catarrh Curable?

MRS. MARY ALEXANDER SAYS IT IS IN A RECENT LETTER.

Mrs. Mary Alexander, of Piper City, Ill., writes: "My health had been failing for seven years. The doctors pronounced my case one of bronchial catarrh. I could get no hope of recovery from any of my physicians. My friends urged me to take Pe-ru-na. At this time I was confined to my bed. After taking one bottle of Pe-ru-na I was able to sit up and the swelling on my body and limbs began to disappear. When I finished the third bottle I was entirely well and felt as well as ever in my life. I can heartily say that I believe Pe-ru-na saved my life."

Catarrh attacks any part of the human system. Not only are the head and throat liable to catarrh, but all other parts of the organism may be affected by it. There is catarrh of the stomach, kidneys, liver, etc. Pe-ru-na is an internal systemic remedy, and cures catarrh wherever located.

An instructively illustrated 64-page book on catarrhal diseases sent free by The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company, Columbus, O.

Communion with God was never more needful than now. Feverish activity rules in all spheres of life. Christian effort is multiplied and systematized beyond all precedent; and all these things make calm fellowship with God hard to compass. We are so busy thinking, discussing, defending, inquiring, or preaching, and teaching and working, that we have no time and no leisure of heart for quiet contemplation, without which the exercise of the intellect upon Christ's truth will not feed, and busy activity in Christ's cause may starve the soul.—Alexander McLaren.

No man ever knows just how much the strength of his Christian character can carry, until he has been actually brought subject to some adequate trial.

Dr. Featherston's Book.

I have just finished reading Dr. Featherston's pamphlet, "Second Blessing verses Holiness," and say that it is a good thing, timely, and will help to preserve the church from fanatical views of religion. Let it have a wide circulation. C. MCDONALD.

Forest, Miss., Dec. 18, 1895.

MR. EDITOR: Some time ago I asked you kindly to give publicity to the fact that the Bible Institute Colportage Association, of Chicago, had a fund at its disposal for sending out books and Testaments for free distribution in our jails.

Up to the end of October, we had distributed in this way 12,619 volumes, sending them into twenty-three different States. D. L. MOODY.

Timely Warning.

The great success of the chocolate preparations of the house of Walter Baker & Co. (established in 1780) has led to the placing on the market many misleading and unscrupulous imitations of their name, labels, and wrappers. Walter Baker & Co. are the oldest and largest manufacturers of pure and high-grade Cocoas and Chocolates on this continent. No chemicals are used in their manufactures.

Consumers should ask for, and be sure that they get, the genuine Walter Baker & Co.'s goods.

GENTLE WORDS.

The sun may warm the grass to light,
The dew the drooping flower,
And eyes grow bright and watch the light
Of Autumn's opening hour;
But words that breathe of tenderness,
And smiles we know are true,
Are warmer than the Summer-time,
And brighter than the dew.

It is not much the world can give,
With all its subtile art;
And gold and gems are not the things
To satisfy the heart;
But, oh, if those who sinner round
The altar and the hearth
Have gentle words and loving smiles,
How beautiful is earth!

Those Points of Law.

At the recent session of the Mississippi Conference, as shown by the published reports in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, the following questions of law were made by one of the presiding elders and answered by Bishop Duncan:

1. Does the Discipline of the M. E. Church, South, recognize the employment of women as preachers of the Word, with the authority to occupy the pulpit in reading the Holy Scriptures, and in preaching the same as ministers of the Lord Jesus Christ? Ans.—It does not.

2. Does the Discipline of the M. E. Church, South, authorize a pastor in charge of a station, circuit or mission of said church to invite a woman claiming to be a minister of the Lord Jesus Christ to occupy the pulpits of said church to expound the Scriptures as a preacher of the Word? Ans.—It does not.

3. And does not such invitation given and services so rendered offend against the authority and order of said church and the teaching of the Holy Oracles? Ans.—It does.

But the ADVOCATE does not speak of the several private consultations between the brother who raised the points of law and the Bishop who decided; nor of the remarkable parliamentary decision under which the motion, based on the law points, was rushed through. Neither does the ADVOCATE mention the fact that as soon as possible the following law question was submitted to the Bishop, who took the same under advisement and returned it the next morning through the hands of a third party without answer:

"Does the Book of Discipline prohibit the employment of a godly man or woman to assist in conducting religious services in the church or elsewhere under the personal direction and control of the preacher in charge?"

And it is likely to remain unanswered, because the answer would expose the fallacy and inapplicability of the foregoing three points of law, which may puzzle some people and afford an excuse for annoying other people. Who has ever claimed that the Book of Discipline provided for the licensing or ordaining of women to preach the gospel or to administer the sacraments? Who ever pretended that there was any expressed authority in the Book of Discipline for a pastor "to invite a woman claiming to be a minister," or anybody else, "to occupy the pulpit"? But to what straits were the opponents of Mrs. Snell driven when they framed the third question: "And does not such invitation given and services so rendered offend against the authority and order of said church and against the Holy Oracles?" Mark the words!—"offend against the authority and order." Not against the Book of Discipline and law of said church, but "against the authority and order," as incarnated, it is supposed, in the Bishop and presiding elders! No patent has yet been applied for on this newly invented method of making laws for the M. E. Church, South. Neither is it supposable that the General Conference or the Committee on Appeals will ever ratify laws so made. It certainly is not law.

And now as to that other clause, "Offend against . . . the Holy Oracles." It is amazing that a Bishop in Southern Methodism should so decide, for not only did Mary Bosanquet Fletcher conduct religious services to the edification of John Wesley and others, but John Wesley on one occasion gave the right hand of fellowship to Sarah Mallett, and recognized her as a Methodist preacher. But John Wesley's mother herself was guilty of preaching before he was ordained, and had larger congregations in her house and yard, probably, than her husband in Epworth Church. It has been one of the glories of Methodism to use her gifted women in any line of usefulness to which God might call them. And this was never esteemed an "offense against the Holy Oracles," for Methodism, which Dr. Chalmers defined to be "Christianity in earnest," has always adhered to Holy Writ, claiming to be a child of Divine Providence. And permitting women to pray or teach in public was, and is strictly in accord with the Holy Bible. Did not Miriam prophesy in public, in the presence of not less than two million people? (Ex. xv, 20.) Did not Deborah judge Israel, command the army, and prophesy publicly also? (Judges iv, 14.) Did not Huldah prophesy even before the high priest and nobles of Judah, and for the benefit of the king himself? (II. Kings xxii, 14-22.) Was not the wife of Isaiah a prophetess? (Isa. viii, 3.) Does not Psalm lxviii, 11, expressly declare, "The Lord gave the Word; the women that publish the tidings are a great host"? (Revised version.) Does not Joel ii, 28, foretell, "It shall come to pass in the last days, saith the Lord, that I will pour out my Spirit on all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy"? Did not the aged Anna proclaim redemption in Jesus' name to all that dwelt in Jerusalem, while Simeon was ready to depart in peace? (Luke ii, 38, 39.) Did not the woman unto whom Jesus revealed himself at Jacob's well fly to the city of Sychem and invite people to come and see the Messiah? (John iv.) Were not women first commissioned to tell of the resurrection? (Matt. xxviii, 1-10.) Was not Mary, the mother of Jesus, with the other women in that upper room in Jerusalem (Acts i, 14) when the Holy Ghost fell upon them, and they all began to speak with other tongues? (Acts ii.) And did not Peter take for his text Joel ii, 28-32, and point to the fulfillment before the eyes of thousands? Did not the Holy Ghost fall on Mary and the other women, and did they not speak with other tongues? Did not Philip, the evangelist, have four daughters who did prophesy? (Acts xxi, 9.) Was not Phœbe a deacon in the church at Cenchrea (Rom. xvi, 1), with all the privileges, powers, rights and duties which any of the seven deacons in Jerusalem had? Does not Gal. iii, 28, teach that there is no distinction between men and women in God's church, but they "are one in Christ Jesus"—one in his church, possessing the same rights and powers? Does not Paul, in I. Cor. xi, 4-16, declare and teach that if a woman be modestly attired she may pray in public and prophesy in public? And who will say that prophesying and preaching are not one and the same thing?

Perhaps some of us will soon be prating about "our historic episcopacy," and striving to demonstrate our "apostolical succession." We are thinking more highly of ourselves than we ought to think. We forget the rock whence we were hewn, and the hole of the pit whence we were digged. We forget that Methodism began in the North (as Dr. Lafferty said some years ago) with a Dutch woman and a one-eyed man, and that the father of Methodism in the South was a cock-eyed Irishman. We forget that Mr. Wesley violated not only "authority and order"—whatever that may be—but also the law of his church and country, when he licensed men to preach, and especially when he took upon himself to ordain preachers. Don't let us forget these facts in our history. They may be unpleasant facts, but they are facts. David never forgot that he was the son of Jesse.

In conclusion, let me call the attention of brethren who have been so long reading and commending Matthew Henry and Lange and other Calvinistic commentators, to the teaching of Clark's commentaries on these points in dispute. We are in danger of losing our reckoning. Some may find themselves fighting against God.

In the Living Present.

Charles Dudley Warner says in Harper's Weekly that the easily-led world begins to believe that marriage is a failure. Scandal and modern fiction cause that belief. But if our women, married and unmarried, were allowed to vote on the subject, the vast majority would deny the supposed failure. Only disappointed spinsters and un-womanly women hold that the exception is the rule.

Prof. A. B. Bruce, of London, after traveling much in the United States, declares that he was painfully impressed with the prevailing lack of punctuality in our country. Seldom that at the opening of divine service half of the auditors are present. Some arrive after the sermon has been more than half delivered. The Watchman, of Boston, says that the statement is sadly true.

Rev. John Watson, in the British Weekly, speaks of Jesus as a young man. His disciples, too, had not attained to middle age. A guild of young men had been the pioneers of Christianity. After the meridian of life had been passed, men became sordid, unable to say, "None of self."

The life of Jesus had been a poem of religion, an epic of philanthropy. It charms and attracts the young specially.

Medical journals assure that coffee and tea drunkards multiply. Tea-chewing the latest vice. Most of the prevailing dyspepsia caused by caffein, the active principle of tea and coffee. Caffein, says Prof. Virchow, is a poison, the same as alcohol. Many drink tea for purposes of exhilaration. But such exhilaration is only a fashionable name for intoxication.

It has been discovered that peanuts excel cod-liver oil as fat-producers. Physicians prescribe them in pulmonary diseases. Are easily digested. No harm possible, as in the case of Koch's lymph. Bye the bye, the Academie of Science, in Paris, has awarded to Prof. Behring its so-called diphtheria-prize, 25,000 francs, for discovering the famous anti-toxin.

Pope Leo XIII. owns the most valuable chair. It is dearer than the throne of any European potentate. It was presented to the Pope by our American banker, Troop, and cost $40,000. Made of solid silver, it is inlaid with many precious stones. It is stated that the Pope receives larger revenue from the United States than from all other countries combined.

Our Jingos clamor for—a fratricidal war with England. Even intimate, without blushing, that our government entered into a secret treaty with semi-barbarian Russia. Such a war would indeed suit our vast herd of demagogues and adventurers. And the angels sang, "On earth, peace!" ICH DIEN.

Miss DeBroes.

BY MISS BELLE KEARNEY.

It was in 1871, during the last Commune in Paris. The slope of the hill near Pere la Chaise was streaming with blood. Bodies of the butchered were lying about in horrible conditions. A woman, frantic with grief, was standing in the midst of the slain with her arms uplifted in an attitude of the wildest despair, crying out: "They are all dead! My husband, my son, my father! I have nothing to live for in the world." A gentle hand was laid on the uplifted arms and a soft voice whispered in the ear of the forlorn creature: "My sister, you have Jesus Christ. He has said, 'I will never leave thee nor forsake thee.'" The comforter was Miss de Broen, a young lady of wealth who had been traveling on the continent with friends for pleasure. God led her to Paris and to the Communists. This was her first active ministry for Christ. She said, when she saw the calm settle upon the woman's spirit whom she had approached on that awful day, and the eager light come into her eyes when she told her of the love of her Lord, she then and there consecrated herself and all that she possessed to the service of God. She immediately communicated her intention of remaining in Paris to her friends, and began at once that beautiful mission work that has made her name blessed in the hearts of thousands of human beings. For nearly twenty-five years she has stood alone, an unwavering light in the darkness of the atheistic gloom, carrying forward her vast undertaking with a trust that has never, never once abated.

Terrible sickness followed in the wake of the siege. Miss de Broen established a medical hospital, where the sufferers could be administered to "without money and without price." After the horrible revolution ended, it was continued for the poor in Belleville, the district in which she had settled; but through all these years it has been resorted to by many from the heart of Paris, the average annual attendance being as great as 30,000.

In supplying the bodily wants of these needy people, no opportunity has been neglected of bringing their sin-sick souls to the personal knowledge of the Divine Physician, who came to "bear our infirmities." Out of this enterprise there has grown a training-school for girls, sewing classes, day and night schools, mothers' meetings, a gospel mission hall, where regular Sunday services are held, besides Bible classes, prayer meetings and temperance meetings.

A large proportion of Miss de Broen's time is spent in visiting the poor and sick, and distributing tracts and Bibles. I shall never forget the pathos in the voices of the men and the women, who stretched out their hands in an imploring way to her, saying, "If you please, madame," for the gospel leaflets she carried as she walked through the streets of Belleville.

Miss de Broen's life-work has been to stem the tide of blighting atheism and cool the fever of this communistic rage. The strain has been a cruel one, and has told on her resources, both physical and financial, most terribly. Her private fortune has been spent, and the mission is now supported almost entirely by contributions from Christians in other lands. Last year the hospital had to be closed for lack of funds, and now, to maintain the existence of the mission, incessant work is required. From a beautiful young girl Miss de Broen has grown into a middle-aged woman, with the marks of anxiety on her strong, sweet face.

Personally, I will say here, Miss de Broen is peculiarly attractive; brown hair without a tinge of gray, soft, intelligent brown eyes, exceedingly fair complexion and an expression deeply spiritual. Her manners are exceedingly highbred and gracious, her mind cultivated and vigorous, her nature of the gentlest, tenderest type; she lives in her comfortable home at 3 Rue Clavel, Belleville, Paris. Here she has her associates in her mission work and dispenses the most generous hospitality to visitors, who, like themselves, are forwarding the coming of the kingdom of God on earth.

Miss de Broen's work is known distinctively as the "Belleville Mission." It is thoroughly separate from any other kind of mission. The idea has been entertained by some that her's was connected with the McAll Mission, but it is not in the remotest degree. Aside from the Belleville Mission, Miss de Broen conducts an establishment in Paris, which is the headquarters of the French W. C. T. U., at 205 Rue Honore. Regular board can be secured there, and a temperance restaurant supplies meals, independent of lodging, at a most moderate charge. In this building she has a free reading room, and in the saloon above the W. C. T. U. holds its meetings, and Bible classes are conducted regularly. It has been a home and restful abiding-place to many strangers who were yearning for the touch of a friendly hand and the sound of a familiar tongue. It has been a beacon-light, too, for many shipwrecked lives. The large window opening out on the ground floor is filled with attractive Scripture texts and open Bibles. A young woman, who belonged to the sad, unfortunate class that fills the streets of all large cities, was passing by this place one night with heart and brain on fire, hurrying to throw her body into the Seine, when, on glancing into the lighted window, she was tempted to stop a few moments and read one of the colored texts; from this her eyes wandered to the open Bible and there she read the message that came to her as a rope to a drowning man. She found God and was saved! In the capacity of president of the W. C. T. U. of France, Miss de Broen's opportunity of spreading the gospel of total abstinence has been broadened and her work made more difficult. Let all Christians who have this interest of our Master closely at heart, cheer this noble woman by writing letters of sympathy and sending sums of money, however small, to forward the glorious cause she has undertaken in His name. It will be "bread cast upon the waters" that will surely return ladened with the salvation of many souls.—St. Louis Advocate.

Michael Schlatter.

It was a happy thought of The Voice to ask the physicians of Denver for their opinion as to the cures said to have been wrought by Michael Schlatter. He was there so long, and so many visited him, that if any considerable number of cures were wrought, the physicians of the city would be sure to know of them. Our contemporary has replies from several doctors. Three of them say that they know of no cures which the alleged healer effected. Another, Dr. C. J. Scott, says that, so far as he knows, there were no cures of any actual disease. A number of his patients, who had diseases of the eyes and ears, were "blessed" by Schlatter, but without any apparent result. Dr. Scott, however, recalls one of his own cases—that of a woman who was losing her mind. "She was extremely nervous, morose, and could not sleep," but, after being "blessed," she recovered entirely, slept well, and became quite rational. He admits that Schlatter did for her what he could not do, and adds: "The majority of humanity wants something or some one to lean upon. Schlatter's strong mind furnished that something, and many were greatly benefited in mind. He did good, and I am glad he came."

The most important letter was from Charles N. Hart, M. D., president of the State Medical Society. He says he knows of several cures for which he is willing to give Schlatter credit. One was a case similar to that reported by Dr. Scott. It was of an aged woman who could not sleep, and could get no relief from her physician (Dr. Hart himself). After she saw Schlatter she slept well, and has slept well ever since. All the cases of cure Dr. Hart knows of were cases of nervousness, and it is his opinion that Schlatter helped about one per cent. of all those that came to him. That would be, as he estimates it, fifteen to twenty daily. In Dr. Hart's opinion he did no harm, but considerable good in helping a class of cases which the physician can not help. There medical opinions are entitled to great weight, and we believe that they will explain on natural grounds all the actual cures of which Schlatter was the agent.—Independent.

Theological Schools as "Dens of Thieves."

It is a happy sign that orthodox pastors and papers in Germany are beginning to make themselves heard in earnest protest against the impudent infidelity of higher criticism. One of these is the Kropp Anzeiger, edited by Pastor Pariassen, a man of great influence in mission work. He thus denounces the universities, where the wretched skepticism is petted and patted on the back:

"It is not much to say that our universities have become the dens of thieves. Many young men have lost their most precious possession, their soul's salvation. A church that will suffer such a condition of affairs does not deserve to live. [The most influential church paper in Germany, the Allgemeine Lutherer Kirchenzeitung (Leipsic), has for weeks and months been protesting against the destructive work of these false professors in their influence upon young men preparing for the ministry, and asks:] Is the candidate honestly and openly to confess that in his convictions the fathers of the church have for centuries been hindering grievously when they accepted the divinity of the Scriptures as the revealed Word of God; that the Scriptures, from the mythological account of the creation to the close of the 'unauthentic' Apocalypse, are full of human errors, irregularities, contradictions, fables, legends, from which, with great difficulty, the Word of God is to be hulled out? Is he to tell the people that their faith in the atoning death of Christ, in his resurrection, in the power of the sacraments, is groundless, and to be cast aside?"—Truth.

Ashamed of its Product.

The saloon is the only factory that is ashamed of the work it turns out. Every other business points with pride to what it can furnish for men or women or the homes of the land. But the liquor traffic, the fearful trade that thrives only on the sins and sorrows and sufferings of our fellow-men, shrinks away in disgust from the creations of its own handiwork. The saloon is very proud of its customers when they first enter its mill, and when they are in process of going through its demoralizing evolution; but when the work is ended—when the sot and the drunkard are finished in their manufacture—then the very barkeeper who has assisted in the work regards the creature of his business as a miscreant and kicks him from his doors. It is no wonder that the cold sleet of the world's hostile opinion is beating steadily in the face of every man engaged—either at wholesale or retail—in a business which dares in a great exposition of the arts and appliances of civilization to display the raw materials with which it works, but is compelled in shame to hide out from the gaze of mankind the completed and perfected product of its manipulation—that wreck of life, character and hope—the finished inebriate.—Extract from a Speech by Hon. Walter B. Hill, of Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 1 1895.

Helpful Reading.

The reading habits of many of our American youths are deplorable. They pore over novels that are as barren of heart-food as a stone is of meat. They waste time and life to gratify a habit that is as hurtful as it is idle. The late Bishop Pierce, of the M. E. Church, South, once wrote a letter to his daughter, Claude, which contains wholesome counsel for other children. He said:

"I wish, my daughter, that you would devote yourself to serious reading. It is necessary, not only to develop your mind and make your knowledge respectable in society, but it is a high moral duty. It is a grave question whether a Christian ought to read anything that does not increase knowledge and prepare for life. The very most that can be allowed on the other side is a little light reading for recreation. You, I fear, are wasting time with magazines and tales, and empty stories in general. This is a great evil—in fact, a sin. Quit. Read history, biography, poetry, English classics; study the Bible, doctrines, principles, and history. It will thus improve your heart, and character. I want you to be good and happy. The time has for you to prepare earnestly for and its responsibilities. A word wise is sufficient."—Exchange.

There are men—says Rev. T. Witherspoon, D. D., of Kentucky, the Homiletic Monthly—with whom the thermometer of emotion never seems to rise above the freezing point, who, as Prof. Phelps says, 'preach on the atonement as Agassiz would have lectured on an Amphibian fish, or on the glacial theory.' Who that has ever heard one of these cold, sensible, imperturbable men fastidiously and elegantly crooning a congregation into a state of both natural and spiritual somnolency, has not felt an almost irresistible impulse to cry 'Fire!' or do something else sensational to break the dead and dreary calm? When the heart of a church has fallen asleep; when the conscience is no longer aroused, and the spiritual emotions are no longer quickened under the preaching of the Word, the truth which comes in thunder tones of threatening or denunciation, if it be winged by the power of the Holy Spirit, must produce a sensation. And so the great preachers of all ages of the church have been in this sense sensational. They have broken in upon the dull, stately round of religious ceremonies and proprieties like one shouting "Fire!" in the midst of a staid and silent-worshiping assembly.—New York Observer.

Judge Chapin, of Detroit, has produced consternation among the saloon keepers and hotelmen of that city by declaring that he will hereafter send to jail, without the option of a fine, any violator of the liquor law who comes before him. As a consequence of this vigorous enforcement of the laws, Detroit is likely to have a general drouth one day in the week, at least. Roosevelt has set the pace in New York in enforcing laws, and a good many communities are now considering whether it is not better to lay aside sham and pretense for awhile, at least, and enforce the excellent moral laws, which have almost become obsolete on the statute books for lack of moral courage on the part of people and the courts to execute them.—The Interior.

GIVE!

Give as you would if an angel
Awaited your gift at the door;

Found you where waiting was o'er;
Give as you would to the Master,

Rev W E. Ballard

Just as the sun was passing below the western horizon, on the twenty-third day of November, ultimo, the pure and saintly spirit of the Rev. W. E. Ballard, of the Mississippi Conference, M. E. Church, South, took its flight to that "upper and better country" to which his eyes have long looked. One of the "many mansions" in the "Father's house" received its occupant on that day, and the heavenly hosts welcomed another one of God's elect children; and the innumerable multitude, who have come up through great tribulation, was increased by one. After four years of the most intense suffering, borne with the meekness, gentleness and submission of St. Stephen, our beloved brother, always listening and ever ready, heard the Master say: "It is enough! Come up higher!"

Abler pens than mine will, no doubt, pay fitting tribute to the memory and worth of our departed brother; but my intimate association with and frequent visits to his bedside, coupled with his gentle winsomeness, had so endeared him to me and mine that I can not refrain from paying my humble contribution in that direction. I doubt whether there is anyone who knew him better, or loved him as well, outside of his own family, as did myself and family. No one could know and not love him. He commanded the respect of all with whom he came in contact, and his amiability and the gentleness of his life and character bound his immediate personal friends to him with an affection akin to that between David and Jonathan. His long illness, and the patience and perfect submission with which it was borne, and the sweet resignation to the will of his Master, was a benediction to be, and the best possible exemplification of the sustaining and comforting power of divine grace. Although racked with pain and wasted with suffering, never a murmur or complaint was heard from him. Always cheerful and resigned, he watched and waited for the final summons. With the consciousness, like St. Paul, of having fought a good fight and kept the faith, he was ready for the hour of departure whenever the summons might come. I loved him when he was well; I revered and loved him better when the Lord laid his smiting hand upon him, and demonstrated the excellence of his manhood and the high grade of his Christian character.

As a preacher, he was away above the average in ability, and far in advance of the majority. He preached the gospel in its sublime purity, and with marked success, and I have no doubt but that his crown of rejoicing is decked with many stars—the symbols of the spiritual children God gave him. He was a man of exceptionally sound sense; had no place in his theology for vain or old wives' fables, nor with the many isms that are disturbing our spiritual Zion, esteeming the old, old story, as found in the Word, as not susceptible of improvement by additions of the theories and vagaries of men.

Although the day was rainy and extremely disagreeable, the attendance at his funeral was very large, attesting the esteem in which he was held by the people among whom he finished his ministry and rounded up his beautiful life. The eulogies pronounced on that occasion, although of a high character, had the merit of simple and exact justice. It would be pleasant for me, if I had the ability, to pronounce a eulogy upon his life and character in this paper, such as he deserved and as my affection would warrant.

What I have said comes from my heart, and is all true. Peace to his ashes and blessings upon his memory. It won't be very long before we shall meet him again, where the parting hand is never taken; where the tear of sorrow and the pain of separation never comes; where is no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, and where we shall see the King in his beauty, and all our loved ones under the shade of the tree of life. God grant that none of us may fail to secure an entrance there.

To the gentle, faithful, devoted and loving wife, and the sons of our beloved friend, who did all that love and affection can ever do for the comfort and solace of the loved one we tender our most profound sympathy, and earnestly pray that "the peace of God, which passeth all understanding" may fill their hearts and heal the wounds made by the dispensation of his providence, and that, when our work on earth is done, we may form a united company in "the land of rest."

Fraternally, E. G. DeLap.

The Inauguration.

Great preparations are being made in Jackson for the inauguration of the governor-elect of Mississippi. The militia is to be there in force, with hands braying and banners flying, as if a display of military strength was necessary in these "piping times" of peace. But that is not all. The Governor's Mansion is to be turned into a dance-house, and a so-called Grand Inaugural Ball is to be the climax of the occasion. Champagne will sparkle, other wines will look red, whisky will entice, and more than one fair girl will be whirled around in the arms of one whose liquor-tainted breath will almost blister her cheek. And the State of Mississippi will be called upon to defray the expenses, and thereby furnish free drinks and encourage dissipation where it needs most to be discouraged.

And all this in the face of the fact that the governor-elect is a member of the M. E. Church, South, whose rules condemn social drinking in every form, and the modern dance in every variety of voluptuousness and lasciviousness. And all this in the face of the fact that the majority of Christian people in Mississippi are antagonistic to such forms of dissipation and folly.

Is it not time that such follies were relegated to the barbarous negroes of Africa, the semi-barbarous Turks, and the semi-infidel nations of Europe? Is it not time that our young people were taught by those in social and political, as well as ecclesiastical, authority that intellectual pleasures are far better than those derived from the heel or toes, and that it is far better to be a follower of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ than a devotee of Terpsichore? —that it is better to follow the Nazarene than to follow Bacchus?

It is to be hoped that the governor-elect, as a loyal Methodist and a professed Christian, will discourage all the elaborate preparations now being made, and will refuse, on behalf of himself and family, to take any part whatever in the inaugural ball.

To the honor of the retiring governor and his good wife, be it said that never during their occupancy of the mansion has there been a wine-supper or a dance within its walls.

CHRISTMAS SONG.

BY MRS. L. CRARY SADLER.

Air: "Some Mother's Child."

Oh, what is that light that is shining so bright?
'Tis the Bethlehem star on this glad Christmas night.
And list to the music, it comes from above,
The angels are singing their sweet song of love,
Their sweet song of love,
Sweet song of love;
Oh, hear you that music,
That sweet song of love?

What is it they sing? 'Tis of Jesus, the King,
"Glad tidings of joy unto all we do bring."
While shepherds were watching the azure above,
They heard angels singing that sweet song of love,
That sweet song of love,
Sweet song of love;
Oh, hear you that music,
That sweet song of love?

The Savior is born. "The bright morning star,"
"The ensign of Jacob," 'twas seen from afar.
The wise men had followed that star in the sky
While the angels were singing that song upon high,
That song upon high,
Song upon high;
The angels were singing
That song upon high.

"Peace and good-will," they're singing it still;
To God be the glory, our hearts he doth fill.
'Tis the same "sweet old story" they sing up above,
The same heav'nly chorus, the same song of love,
The same song of love,
Same song of love;
Oh, list to the music
Of that sweet song of love!

Correspondence.

From Mrs. Snell.

The Rev. J. D. Crymes had the charge of insubordination brought against him by his presiding elder, Rev. J. M. Weems, because he had me to assist him in revival services. The Rev. J. M. Weems presented the following questions to Bishop Duncan, and his ruling is also given.

1. Does the Discipline of the M. E. Church, South, recognize the employment of women as preachers of the Word, with the authority to occupy its pulpits in reading the Holy Scriptures, and in preaching the same as ministers of the Lord Jesus Christ? Ans.—It does not.

2. Does the Discipline of the M. E. Church, South, authorize a pastor in charge of a station, circuit or mission of said church to invite a woman claiming to be a minister of the Lord Jesus Christ to occupy the pulpits of said church to expound the Scriptures as a preacher of the Word? Ans.—It does not.

3. And does not such invitation given and services so rendered offend against the authority and order of said church and the teaching of the Holy Oracles? Ans.—It does.

Thus Bishop Duncan has ruled that the Methodist Church does not recognize the right of women to "preach." If by "to preach" means the right of women to assume the duties and privileges of the regularly ordained ministry, I do not suppose there will be found in all of Methodism a dissenting opinion.

As my public work has brought about so much discussion in your columns, I beg you to grant me for the first time the privilege of saying some things that I deem justice to my work demands.

I am no "preacher" in the sense the word is generally used, nor have I ever at any place or at any time sought to be regarded as such. I am simply one of the laity who believes that God has bestowed a special love and gift for saving souls upon her, and who seeks to do it in a womanly way under the leadership and through the invitation of regularly ordained ministers of the Methodist Church. I have never wanted to speak from "pulpits." I have always by choice preferred the floor just before or behind the altar railing.

I do not belong to that class of women who regard St. Paul as an "old fogy," or who want a new translation of the Bible by "women only;" nor do I believe that the world is suffering for "strong minds" more than it is for more loving hearts filled with the indwelling Christ.

The Arkansas Methodist Conference was in session during the same days the Mississippi Methodist Conference held its congress in Yazoo City. Miss Haygood, sister of the Bishop, was invited to speak to the assembled Conference. This she did at length, giving a full account of her work among the heathen, and closed by exhorting the ministers present to greater zeal in the saving of the heathen. The Conference not only heard her willingly, but passed a unanimous resolution endorsing her and her work. Has the Methodist Church in Mississippi a law prohibiting women from doing that which Methodism in Arkansas allows? Is it unlawful for a woman to do in Mississippi what a Methodist Conference in Arkansas commends her doing in China?

If a Conference may lawfully allow a woman to deliver a religious address to its body, may not a minister have the right to have a woman assist him to save his people by working in a public way in the church under his control?

Women, in this as well as other States, during sessions of their annual missionary meetings deliver religious addresses to mixed assemblies in our churches. Mrs. Hargrove, well known in this as well as other States, visited Columbus, and by invitation occupied the entire hour in a religious talk, and that was the regular preaching hour, too, and the usual congregation was there assembled.

These things we all know to be customary and constantly allowed in our churches. Shall our church become a respecter of persons, and grant to some women the right to speak and deny it to others? Upon what ground and by what authority could such discrimination be made?

As I do not desire the right "to preach" in our churches as a minister of the gospel exercises that right, but to simply as a Bible teacher win souls to Christ, I do not consider Bishop Duncan's ruling as necessarily an obstacle in the way of my continuing my religious work as heretofore. I have never at any place or time called myself a minister.

Mary McGee Snell.

From Dr. Fearn.

Mr. Editor: Ever since I have been in China I have wanted to write a letter to my friends who read the Advocate, but each time that I made the effort something would come up and I would have to put it off "till a more convenient season."

I have been in China now nearly seven months, and have seen much that I thought would be of interest to your readers; but when one tries to write about them the trouble begins. If you will bear with me, I will try and see if I can send a little.

On my first trip from Shanghai to Soochow I was impressed with the amount of uncultivated land on all sides. My earliest impressions about China were, that there were so many people in the Empire that all the land was under cultivation to feed them. One does not see any great number of trees, and when seen they are "scrubs," and only a few in one clump. After leaving Shanghai you pass though several miles of land planted with cotton. The cotton is very small, and is planted broad-cast, while the wheat and rye are planted in rows. This is another case where the Chinaman does just opposite from our way. The cotton is used by the many mills in Shanghai. Further on from Shanghai you pass through a section of country devoted to the raising of indigo. It is raised in very large quantities and exported. As you near Soochow you get into the rice region. At this time of the year the farmers are busy harvesting the rice crop. As you go around on the canals you see scores of boats passing loaded with rice. The boats go to the cities and sell their cargo to merchants who prepare it for the market. We have a great deal of silk made in and around Soochow. The Soochow silk is considered very fine. A small town near here is known as having the finest cocoons in the world.

The Chinese are very fond of ducks as a food, and quite a number make their living by raising them for the market. As there are so many canals in this part of China it makes it quite an inexpensive business to raise them. As you go along the canal you will see a boat in which lives an entire family. The only ground they claim to own is a small portion where they keep their ducks at night. All during the day the ducks are allowed to feed in the tall grass along the edge of the canal. To keep them from wandering off the boat is kept constantly near them, and one of the family will have a long bamboo pole with an old fan tied on the end to scare back any that try to run away. I don't think I will be exaggerating when I say that I have seen, at least, a thousand ducks in one drove. To see as many little ducks swimming around in the water makes a very pretty sight. At night they are either driven into a pen on shore, or put into very large baskets on the boat.

The number of different contrivances for catching fish are without number. They use everything from a trap to a net, but I have never seen a hook and line. The traps are generally built entirely across the canal, the bamboo poles in the center being a little below the water and flexible to let the boats pass. I saw a man have an immense net that went entirely across the canal. It would be let down till it lay flat on the bottom. When raised, by means of pulleys, it would catch all the fish that happened to be over it. It would take pages to tell of all the different kinds, so I will not undertake the job this time.

I enjoy getting the Advocate, and always get news of my friends. I am learning some of this strange language each day. It is a very interesting study, and I hope before long to be able to talk without any trouble. I feel grateful that I can be out here and help do something for the Master.

Hoping this will prove of some use to you I will say, Good-bye.

Your friend, J. B. Fearn.

Bro. B. F. Goss	25

Many thanks to all the brethren and sisters. May God graciously bless them all, and give them great prosperity in every way.

Now, I wish to say the Missionary Board appointed me special agent to raise amount due on land bought for the Indian Mission. We owe about $175 yet, and want to pay it this Spring, and then, after getting that off of hand, I want to raise all I can on salary of missionary.

So, brethren and sisters, please send me any amount you can at once to pay off debt on land, and then we will look after salary. Send to me at Hermanville, Miss. Take notice of change in office; and if you think of helping me paste the change up where you can see it when you want to send me something.

Brethren and sisters, let's pay this debt on land at once, and God will bless us. Let me hear from you.

A. D. Miller, Agent.

Hermanville, Miss.

Anti-Mormon Investment in Souls.

If you have it in mind to bequeath a sum to "send the gospel to every creature," why wait until death? Why not make the contribution now, and have the joy of knowing (while you live) that you are aiding in this great work.

The Board of Missions will receive the amount you wish to bequeath, and give in return an "Annuity Bond" for same amount, and pay interest agreed upon, annually or semi-annually, during your natural life; and at your death the amount thus bequeathed comes into possession of the Board of Missions.

In this way your money is loaned at fair interest, and in the safest possible way, while at the same time it is doing its work for God and humanity. Can you do better than invest in this way?

There are doubtless many who would thus employ a portion of their means if the matter were brought to their attention. Will such persons please correspond with us? And let our preachers and people take this subject upon their thought, and notify us of any who may wish to make such use of their means.

Storms.

Sir William Hamilton was struck with paralysis beside his study table, and ready to give up. He laid down his pen, as he thought for the last time; but his wife, hurrying in from the parlor, staid in that study for twelve long years, and so rallied the forlorn man that to-day the world is indebted to her for that system of philosophy that has moulded the thought of a century.

John Flaxman was born in poverty, and hobbled about on a crutch. It is little wonder he was sometimes despondent over his misfortunes; but the bright-faced Ann Denham giving him her hand so fired him with courage that he astonished all England with the poetry of his chiseling.

Thus have your friends cheered and rallied you. Many times when all discouraged in your work they have come in with bright looks and hopeful words, and so inspired you that victory came in the first sweep of your new-found valor. Ashame is it to forget these experiences, and let one crabbed, wasplsh, fault-finding critic upset your peace of mind and drive you from the line of duty.

Indeed, the wonder to me is that we do not have more enemies. Take it all in all, I think the world handles us pretty tenderly. We often-times have a good hearty laugh at the weaknesses of others, and it hardly shows the right spirit to fall into a fret, if others see some of our weaknesses and turned to laughing too. You can not expect to be fondled like a babe all your days through. This life of ours is an intensely practical thing and if you look for the south wind to blow warm and gentle all the time, you will be doomed to fearful disappointment, for the seasons swing on into the equinoxes, and then come the storms with their hail and fury. —X

Who Can Pronounce It?

Odyssey had selected the proper apparatus for gathering acorns and had been all day interested, using bellows and pencil to get ready. He bade farewell to his wife and her vagaries; but with her skill at repartee, she harassed him with a tirade of demonstrative language, both vehement and peremptory. She feared he might contract bronchitis, or be caught by a canine; and told him he had no Christianity; that acorns would enervate and exhaust him and he would become a sacrifice to science. Besides she wanted him to help in the quadrille. But the old European, being an exquisite phelan and fond of romance, put an end to the bustle by jumping into his gondola with great eclat and buoyant spirits. As he sailed past the cupola, a girl offered a bouquet to him; in taking which he destroyed the equipoise of his boat, and fell into the water, thus blighting his halcyon dreams. He felt it obligatory to return to his old combatant in a lethargic state of mind, seeking her lenient judgment, since he had not suffered from so much daw in a decade. His finances being so low as to tempt the gallows, and he being satisfied with his debut, she, as a finale to it all, with a comical grimace, dressed him in grenadine, put on his back the largest placard extant and dubbed him old Odeon.—Selected.

Contemplate the love of Christ and you will love. Stand before that mirror, reflect Christ's character, and you will be changed into the same image from tenderness. There is no other way. You can not love to order. You can only look at the lovely object and fall in love with it and grow into likeness to it. And so look at this perfect character, this perfect life. Look at the great sacrifice as he laid down himself, all through life and upon the cross of Calvary, and you must love him. And loving him you must become like him.—Drummond.

Delight, enthusiasm, hope, content—these are the true conditions of a Christian life, just as song is the true condition of the bird, or color of the rose. But just as the bird is still a bird although he can not sing, and the rose is still a rose although its red grows dull and faded in some dark, close room where it is compelled to grow—so the Christian is a Christian still, even although his soul is dark with doubt, and he goes staggering on, fearing every moment that he will fall, never daring to look up and hope.—Phillips Brooks.

I used to think it was great to disregard happiness, to press to a high goal, careless, disdainful of it. But now I see that there is nothing so great as to be capable of happiness—to pluck it out of "each moment, and, whatever happens," to find that one can ride as gay and buoyant on the angry, menacing, tumultuous waves of life as on those that glide and glitter under a clear sky; that it is not defeat and wretchedness which come out of the storms of adversity, but strength and calmness.—Anne Gilchrist.

The Secret of a Happy Life.

Look on the Godward side of your troubles. The gardener's sharp pruning-knife in the midst of the too luxuriant tendrils is not a sign of anger, but of love. It is the unchastened child that is spoiled. Just as the grape clusters grow more luscious and richer-flavored by the touch of the unsparing blade, so the bleeding heart develops the virtues of a saint by the keen shocks of suffering.

Be Christ-like, and live for the sole purpose of redeeming others from sin and guilt. If you seek enjoyment as a definite object in life, happiness will coyly elude your panting and breathless chase. Live above the sordid aims and green-eyed envy of the world, working unselfishly for God and man, and you shall taste the bliss of Christ's serene and ineffable joy. Our age runs to minor strains, and the cup of nectar, instead of being unspeakably delicious, smacks of gall and wormwood. Why? Because we hunt for pleasure too hotly, and lo! the gay cup bubbles with ruin; because our mad chase after excitement at last jades and bitterly reacts; because we plunge too eagerly into secular pursuits, and incessant toil is apt to breed weariness and disgust. Imitate Christ, and every day will beget a sort of ecstasy and elevation in doing good to others. Without Christ no royal purple or sumptuous fare can escape being hopelessly pierced with sorrow and pain. With Christ a man walks in unperturbed calm above carpings of criticism, or arrows of slander, or the cold, brutal sneer of ostracism. Living like Christ makes life divinely beautiful and joyous. Under the touch of his transfiguring presence every dark path opens up glimpses of light somewhere, every throb of pain shall ultimately rise into a pulse of gladness, every sting of misery shall be transformed into a burst of praise, every tragic loss and tear of grief shall turn into a palmy triumph and an eternal gain, and every pit of sin and sorrow shall become a starting-point from which to soar to heaven.—Rev. Philip Graif, in Herald and Presbyter.

Seizing Opportunities.

A lady, once writing to a young man in the navy who was almost a stranger, thought: "Shall I close this as anybody would, or shall I say a word for my Master?" and, lifting up her heart for a moment, she wrote, telling him that his constant change of scene and place was an apt illustration of the word, "Here we have no continuing city," and asked if he could say: "I seek one to come." Tremblingly she folded it and sent it off.

Back came the answer: "Thank you so much for those kind words! I am an orphan, and no one has spoken to me like that since my mother died long years ago." The arrow shot at a venture hit home, and the young man shortly after rejoiced in the fulness of the blessing of the gospel of peace.

How often do we, as Christians, close a letter to those we know have no hope, "as anybody would," when we might say a word for Jesus! Shall we not embrace each opportunity in the future?—Southern Churchman.

To walk with God. Did you think . . . it was a rapturous, beatific, ecstatic sort of thing, possible for people who lived in the olden time when the world was not so big, and possible for some people now perhaps, who, like clergymen and others, are supposed to live a little apart from the real life of the world—but, situated as you are, hardly possible for you without making a radical change in your circumstances which you are not able to make? No, no. The path on which to walk with God is just that plain, practical, prosaic, commonplace path on which you are walking every day. And walking there with purity, with truth, with honor, with high character, you are walking with God just as much as any apostle or prophet or martyr ever did, or any Scriptural hero, or any traditional saint.—David H. Greer, D. D., in "From Things to God."

What is the reason that men praise the past and hope for the future, yet do not see the superior wisdom of improving the present? We sing of "The good days of old" and "The better time coming," but the present, the only time that is really ours, is neglected. Is life to be all memory and hope? "Now is the accepted time."—Baltimore Advocate.

We hear a good deal about "Blue Laws." That is the nickname with which we brand a law that rubs us where we happen to be sore. In the South Sea Islands a statute discouraging the consumption of broiled missionary would be a "Blue Law."—Dr. Parkhurst.

O brother man, fold to thy heart thy brother;
Where pity dwells, the peace of God is there;
To worship rightly is to love each other,
Each smile a hymn, each kindly deed a prayer.

Then shall all shackles fall; the stormy clangor
Of wild war music o'er the earth shall cease;
Love shall tread out the baleful fire of anger,
And in its ashes plant the tree of peace!

—Whittier.

OH DESPONDENT, AFFLICTED ONE,

It will inspire faith and hope in your sorrowing heart to read the letter below. Send for free book, giving prices of oils and particulars.

Address,

DR. D. M. BYE,
Indianapolis Ind.

INVERNESS FLA., Aug. 26, 1895.

DR. D. M. Bye, Indianapolis, Ind.:

MY DEAR DOCTOR—I am happy to state to you that I am completely well now and have been for three weeks. Your oils killed the cancer. They sloughed out to the bone and the places filled up level and left only a little scar. My physician here watched the places with marked attention and as they would come out and go to healing would remark, "Well, that is a powerful remedy," and it is doing the work so nicely and promptly. He had treated me about one year, and then said he could do me no good; besides two other doctors here, one of them claimed to cure cancer, but they all failed. Their treatment gave me great pain and I am satisfied it started them to spreading. One of them was located above the right eye, one on the right side of nose, and one on my cheek close to my ear and running up under the hair a little, all very bad places. They had been there for 8 years, and in the last year had doubled in size, and the doctor failed to arrest their growth. There were three other places appeared on my face in the last year and seemed to start as the first did. I put the oil on them and they are gone. My face is smooth again.

After giving you the facts, I would love to tell all suffering ones of your oils; that they too could be healed, for the treatment will do the work quickly and with less pain than any one would expect, and while other remedies may give some relief, your oils cure. You can but imagine how one feels to afflicted and know they must be eat up alive and die an awful death; then to be cured and no trace of it left.

May God bless you with a long life, and may those afflicted learn of your oil cure and be healed, is my prayer for them and your co-workers.

Yours in faith,

W. W. VINCENT.

CLIFTON, Kan., July 2, 1895.

Dr. Bye, Indianapolis, Ind.:

DEAR SIR—The fistula opening has not been visible for quite a while, say one and a half months. The lump inside still bothers me, but not so bad as before. I do wish you would send me more treatment to finish up the job, for I received more benefit from your treatment than from many physicians in three years, including a painful surgical operation. Send me more medicine if you think best.

Fraternally, J. D. MATTHEWS,
Editor of Baptist Visitor.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. J. H. Rogers, P. C., Walthall circuit, Durant district, North Mississippi Conference: "I want to say through the columns of the ADVOCATE that we are in our new home, and began our work on last Sunday. The people of this town gave us a hearty welcome. They remembered us on last Friday night in a very substantial way. Suffice it to say, they brought nineteen different articles, just such things as a preacher needs. Success to the ADVOCATE."

Rev. J. F. Evans, Dec. 17: "Our reception at Vaiden was very encouraging. Four years ago we left this charge, and now return to receive the hospitality of this good people. Quite a number of the citizens were present when we reached the parsonage for a handshaking and to give us a hearty welcome. Many good things were left in the larder, not by the pound, but by pounds. These people know how to welcome their pastor and how to encourage him and make him feel good in his work. May the good Lord baptize us all with his Spirit!"

Rev. H. P. Lewis: "The year is about gone, and we must go too. Our new work is called 'Lake.' So we go from the Summit to the Lake—up or down, which is it? Anyway, we go to Jackson; then 55 miles towards Meridian on the A. and V. R. R. During the year I have collected and forwarded $39 62 to the ADVOCATE—a part of which was for Bibles. I hope to be able to do more for our ADVOCATE the coming year than I have done in the past. I do hope and pray that our brethren who are so fond of controversy will cease contending about the theory of sanctification, and begin, if they have not already done so, living pure, consecrated Christian lives. Let us ask God to make and keep us pure, humble and sweet. God help us all to have pure hearts and right spirits."

Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, Carrollton, Miss., Dec. 16: "Well, Mr. Editor, you have changed my ADVOCATE again. We have moved, and about to get settled in our new home at Carrollton. Preachers have but little to move, and if poverty be a blessing at all, under any circumstance, it is a blessing to the poor preacher, for it is no little trouble and expense to pay freight on a lot of plunder every year or two. We had two good and profitable years at Vaiden, and became very much attached to the good people there; but the authorities thought best to move us. We moved in a few days after Conference adjourned. And while we left a good people, we found a good people. When we arrived the parsonage was not in exact order to receive us, so we were driven around to the splendid residence of J. R. Bingham—that big-hearted, noble-souled Christian gentleman—whose good name and worthy deeds are well known to the churches of Mississippi. The good ladies in the meantime came over to the parsonage and set it in order, supplying it with many needed and necessary articles both for house and dining-room. Then many nice things were put in the pantry, such as sugar, coffee, flour, rice, hams, with a nice lot of canned goods and fruits, etc.—all of which made the pastor and his wife feel that they had a royal welcome to the town and community."

Rev. Heslep R. Tucker, P. E., Dec. 16: "We had a good day at Corinth on last Sunday. Bro. Harris begins his second year under most favorable circumstances. With a religious people, a harmonious church, a good Board of Stewards and a larger salary, we can but bespeak for him and his congregation a year of great prosperity, even greater than the very successful one which has just closed. Booneville was made a station at the last session of the Conference, and, while our people regret to part with their former pastor, Bro. Sage has been kindly received, and met with large and appreciative audiences on his first Sabbath. Booneville is a live and progressive town, and our Methodism here proposes to be in the front. The old church has been disposed of, and the people intend for Bro. Sage to report a handsome new brick church at the next Conference."

PEARL RIVER.

The quarterly meeting held by Dr. Sawyer was very interesting to the little flock at Pearl River. Dr. Sawyer preached three forcible and edifying sermons, administered the holy sacrament, and baptized one young lady. Two young ladies were received into full membership, they being the outcome of our little Epworth League. Dr. Sawyer gave the League an uplifting talk Sunday evening.

We were glad to have our dear young pastor, Rev. W. A. Clarke, with us on the first Sunday in the month, he being en route to Conference. He had preached his farewell sermon at his last appointment, and we did not expect to see him again. We can scarcely hope he will come back, but we will ask God to bless him wherever he goes. He has been "faithful over a few things." God bless him.

OUR FEMALE COLLEGES.

The Methodists of Mississippi are planning wisely and well for their boys. The establishment of Millsaps College marks the beginning of a new era for Methodism in our great State. But we are not providing so well for our girls. We have quite a number of female colleges, but we need to concentrate upon some point and adopt one college in Mississippi to educate our girls, as we have done for our boys. The result of our present policy is: our girls have to pay tuition, and music, art, elocution and the modern languages are put down as extras, so that our girls' education becomes very costly. The presidents of these female colleges are forced to make these extra charges to get along at all, so our girls are being educated at a tremendous disadvantage. Besides the high price which they must pay, they are denied the privileges of the facilities which they need fully as much as the boys.

Now, the remedy is for the church to make as good provision for the girls as it makes for the boys. With the exception of the Woman's College at Lynchburg, Va., we have no Southern Methodist female college that enjoys the benefits of an endowment. Why can't we make the same provision for our girls that we have made for our boys. Why can't we endow our female colleges, provide ample facilities in chemistry, astronomy and physics? The idea has prevailed that the girls must be educated, and if anybody must go lacking, let it be the boy. He must go to the shop or plow, and help educate his sister, because she needs it worse than he does. But all this is wrong, because both ought to be educated along the same lines. The necessity for sending the boy to the plow or shop results from the fact that our female colleges are not properly equipped by endowment and cheap facilities. The school men are forced to charge tuition, and to make music, art, elocution and the languages extras, to get along at all, so that our need now is to equip these female colleges thoroughly, and education will then be put within the reach of every girl, and our boys can leave the plow or shop and take advantage of the facilities offered in the male colleges.

Telling Testimony.

"All gaming," says Archbishop Whately, "since it implies a desire to profit at the expense of another, involves a breach of the Tenth Commandment." "Of all habits," says Charles Kingsley, "gambling is the most intrinsically savage." A great authority on racing, Sir George Chetwynd, says that the outsider never wins but by sheer chance. The sure end of gambling is thus moral degradation and pecuniary ruin. The late Bishop Phillips Brooks speaks of this development of betting in our day as a "token of the decay of manliness and self-respect, more alarming than almost anything besides." It has (he says) an inherent baseness about it, which not to feel shows a base soul. The chaplain of the Stafford jail, in England, says that one of the large corridors of that prison can be filled with young men of the clerk and accountant class whose ages vary from sixteen to twenty-three, and who confess themselves to have been brought there by betting and gambling. Chaplains of other jails bear similar testimony. Of prisoners in Chatham who came from employments in post offices, sixty per cent. have been led into crime through betting.

Stuttering Cured

BY DR. G. W. RANDOLPH, 471 POPLAR STREET, MEMPHIS, TENN.

I came here, an inveterate stutterer. I have been here four weeks, and can talk as well as anyone, but, of course, I have to observe his treatment, which a child can use. I want you to put this in your paper, so others can write and be cured. He only charges $10 to send his cure by mail, and offers $1,000 to anyone who can stutter while using his method. Respectfully,

W. W. ANDREWS.

A Clerical Misfit.

One of the saddest of sights is the clerical misfit. He might be useful in some other calling, but in the ministerial he is a failure. In some cases he has no love for it, and in others no adaptation to it. He is a preacher, but he can not preach with acceptance and profit. He is a pastor, but he can not get along with his flock. He is a minister, but finds service wearisome and galling. He is a watchman, but neglects the oversight of souls. He is an evangelist, but wins no converts. Observation brings to light those who would be better out of the ministry than in it. Nothing can be alleged against their moral standing, but they are not suited to their work. They have mistaken their calling. How to relieve them is a puzzling question. The best thing to do is to guard against their multiplication. Those who belong to this unhappy class are to be pitied; but it becomes presbyteries to prevent, if possible, all swelling of their number. A sifting process is necessary at the beginning of the ministerial course. Applicants for the ministry must be most thoroughly and carefully tested as to character, qualification, learning and spirit.—The Presbyterian.

Thousands of Dollars

Mr. S. G. Derry.

I spent trying to find cure for Salt Rheum which I had 13 years. Physicians said they never saw so severe a case. My legs, back and arms were covered by the tumor. I was unable to be down, could not walk without crutches, and had to have my arms, back and legs bandaged twice a day. I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and soon could see a change. The flesh became healthy, the sores soon healed, the scales fell off, I was able to give up bandages and crutches, and a happy man I was. I took

Water Valley, Miss.

The Holman Bible for $1 65.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.65 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to Jan., '96. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2.45 instead of $1.65. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2.45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We are now prepared to fill orders for Bibles (both kinds) promptly.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

THE Electropoise

is a little instrument, weighing less than a pound, which when attached to the body under proper conditions, causes the whole system to absorb

OXYGEN—PURE OXYGEN

from the atmosphere. It introduces this potent, curative agent, oxygen, into the remotest and most recondite parts. Oxygen purifies the blood, it

VITALIZES EVERY ORGAN,

it makes war on disease, by destroying its producing cause. It eliminates the morbid and noxious elements that act injuriously or that

LOWER VITALITY.

It neutralizes or expels all poisons, either of malaria, contagion, or from the effects of powerful drugs. With the body plentifully and freely oxygenized blood, it is impossible for disease to exist, because the conditions that made it possible have been removed—burnt out.

SUPPLIED WITH OXYGEN

NOT A SURE CURE,

of course not; but, by its new method of applying oxygen, the Electropoise has often effected cures of chronic cases that were pronounced "incurable."

STRICKEN WITH PARALYSIS.

The following, which appeared in the Western Christian Advocate of May 22, 1895, has been inclosed to me, with requests from several sufferers, from paralysis for particular information as to the "remedial" treatment quickly and effectually employed in the case referred to.

Similar inquiries came after notices in other papers:

[From the Western Christian Advocate.]

Dr. W. H. DePuy, on April 30, while preparing to leave the New York Christian Advocate office at the close of office hours, was suddenly stricken with paralysis, the stroke involving the right side. Fortunately several good friends among his associates at the publishing house were at hand, and remedial help was quickly obtained and proved so effectual that circulation was speedily restored and he was able to be removed to his uptown home. Failing to take the immediate rest which the serious nature of the attack required, after a few days he was again prostrated with paroxysms of numbness in the hand and arm, and since that time has been confined to his room. He is now steadily improving, and he expects, after a few weeks of further rest, to resume work on some partially completed books upon which he has long been engaged.

To these inquirers this brief response is cheerfully given: As soon as the nature of the attack was recognized, and while my friends were engaged in rubbing the side affected, another kindly, at my request, hastily called Mr. J. E. Du Bois, of the Electropoise office, and the latter, whose office was near by, quickly responded, and applied the Electropoise, first to the left wrist, and a little later to the right ankle. No drug or other medicine of any kind was used. I continued the application of the instrument during the night, and the next morning returned to the office feeling no other inconvenience from the attack, except that of being much weakened in the stricken side. In the afternoon I attended a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Sunday School Union, of which I am a member. I now believe that I would have been no early after effects if I had followed the advice of my more prudent friends and professional attendant. Later during the occasional and severe attacks, the Electropoise was applied at or near the stricken parts of the body with speedy and untelling relief, until they ceased to return. W. H. DEPUY.

Celebrating Christmas.

Our church at Shubuta celebrated Christmas last Sabbath by raising a cash collection of one hundred dollars for foreign missions. How much more appropriate to celebrate the natal day of our Lord in this way than in the way in which it is often celebrated by professing Christians! We congratulate Bro. Bradford and his flock. May their example prove contagious!

Bible Burning in Brazil.

In the United States we have recently had a book, published by Cardinal Gibbons, professing to recommend the reading of the Bible. Five weeks ago at Garanhuns, Brazil, the Roman Catholic priests burned all the Bibles that could be found in that place.

An account of the events that led up to this, from the pen of Miss Eliza M. Reed, written November 5, will be found on page 14. Under date of November 15, she writes further:

In the afternoon, we heard screams and yells coming from the largo in front of the church. The priest had ordered all the Bibles, tracts and papers that the people had received from us, to be burned. He tore up the Bibles in pieces, then they were lighted, and a great flame went up, and up, amid the shouts of an excited, lost multitude. The voices of rejoicing died down with the blaze. Even they, ignorant, dark-souled beings as they are, were hushed into silence as they looked down on the black heap of charred Bible leaves lying there in that open largo. There was much drinking and fighting all the evening.

Meanwhile the crowd, incited by the priests, were threatening the life of Dr. Butler and of the other missionaries. But the Brazilian Government deserves all praise for its vigorous measures for their protection. Miss Reed continues:

It was necessary to have the soldiers at our door again that night. During the service three men came toward us armed with long knives. They were promptly arrested and the knives taken from them. Later on in the evening fifty-five men were arrested for disorderly conduct, and each man of them had to give up to the police a great knife.

Excepting that Sunday night and the Monday following, when the soldiers were present as our guard, we were stoned every single night while I was there, generally in the early evening, but several times, for good count, the stones came crashing on us after midnight, and twice in broad daylight single stones were hurled against the window. The tiled roof is full of great holes letting the hot sun beam in on us, or the rain pour in; whichever it may be.—Presbyterian.

The Mississippi Dram-Shop Law.

It is probable that a systematic, persistent effort will be made in the Mississippi Legislature at its approaching session to emasculate the dram-shop law. We are not informed as to the precise character of the changes that will be asked for; but that a number of amendments will be offered there seems to be no reason to doubt. One scheme, doubtless, will be the exemption of cities of a given population from the provisions of the present law. Some of the larger cities have gone dry under the present local option law. The liquor rings of these cities will persistently advocate any scheme which will bring back the outlawed traffic; and they will doubtless be able to rally to their banner some men of whom better things should be expected. These men will represent their cause with such plausibility as almost to deceive the very elect. The "Prohibition-does-not-prohibit" argument will be brought into requisition, as will also the "loss-of-revenue" argument, and many others.

The friends of prohibition throughout the State need, therefore, to gird on their armor and be ready for the fray. No concession whatever should be made to the infamous traffic. No change must be made in the present law except to make its provisions more stringent. This we are sure is the wish of an overwhelming majority of the white people of the State. The Methodists of the State, who constitute a large percentage of its population, have already spoken through their Annual Conferences, and given forth no uncertain sound. The Baptists, in their State Conventions, as well as in various associations, have been no less emphatic. If the wishes of the people are consulted, there will be no change in the law except to make it more rigid. In fact, we see no reason why the Legislature should not pass a straight-out prohibitory law for the entire State. There are only about seven or eight counties that tolerate the traffic at all. Why should these few counties continue to dominate the policy of the State? Suppose it be granted that in some of these counties the law would not be enforced! Is that a reason why the law should not be passed? A little investigation will show that some counties do not enforce the license law. Blind tigers are not confined to dry counties. There are wet counties where saloon keepers do a thriving business without paying for license. They find this method less expensive. The plea of non-enforcement should, therefore, be of no avail. A community which confesses that it is dominated by the lawless element should not be allowed to shape the legislation of a great State on a question of paramount importance. No. Let the law be right whether all the counties of the State enforce it or not.

Perhaps the time will soon come when a change of administration or a quickening of the public conscience will revolutionize these lawless counties and introduce the tune, "Prohibition does prohibit." Let all those who are interested in the extirpation of the liquor traffic keep an eye upon Jackson during the next ninety days. And it will be necessary to do something else besides looking. Work—active, earnest, persistent, organized work—will doubtless be necessary.

The membership of the Presbyterian Church, North, is reported at 922 901. The membership of the Presbyterian Church, South, is 203,999. If united, the combined Presbyterian force in this country would number 1,126 903.

"I don't like a preacher who talks about money." How unpopular the Apostle Paul must have been with some people!—Exchange.

About the Advocate.

The financial depression of the past three years is now rapidly passing away. Gold and silver may not be as abundant as they were in Solomon's day, but they are circulating, much more extensively than they did a year or two ago. This is, therefore, a good time for our preachers to push the claims of the ADVOCATE. Our circulation is on the increase, and there is no reason why the rate of increase should not be doubled or trebled within a few weeks.

If all the preachers of the patronizing Conferences will present the claims of the ADVOCATE from the pulpit and also during their pastoral visitations, large results will follow. The work of the preacher in this direction is greatly facilitated by the premiums we are offering. Take our Bible offer as an example. We sell the Holman Bible to our subscribers at less than half the usual price. All our people ought to have this Bible; but many of them know nothing of our offer, and will not unless the preachers inform them. And if the preacher has a copy of the Bible to exhibit, he is sure of his game. No more popular premium has ever been offered. This Bible is exactly the thing the people want as soon as they know what it is. We find it difficult to keep a stock on hand. The preacher who calls attention to this offer does two good things at once. He circulates the Word of God in the very best edition and also circulates his church paper. And what better work can he do than this? The ponderous family Bible that lies upon the parlor center table is not used. Materfamilias would chide, if not chastise, her children if they should handle it every day. What the people need in their homes is not a parlor ornament of this description, but a Bible that is adapted to every-day use. The Holman fills the bill exactly. A professional man of high standing who procured one of our Holman Bibles, a few months since, told us recently that he has read the Bible more since then than he had done before for many years.

Moreover, our preachers should not forget the fact that in circulating their Conference organ they are helping themselves and rendering a service of incalculable value to their people. Methodism is suffering in many places for lack of the information which the church paper imparts. It is utterly impossible for our people to take an active, intelligent interest in the various enterprises of the church without the information and the stimulus which the church paper gives. Any pastor can open his eyes on this subject if they are not already open by comparing families that take a church paper with those that do not. Where no church paper goes it is almost impossible to interest the people in connectional enterprises.

In conclusion, we wish to say that pastors can help us not only by securing new subscriptions, but also by making collections for us. A list of subscribers will be furnished any pastor on application.

The Venezuelan Question.

The dispute between Great Britain and Venezuela concerning a strip of territory lying between Venezuela and British Guiana has brought about international complications of grave importance. The British Government having refused to submit the question to arbitration, President Cleveland, regarding this action as tantamount to a declaration on the part of Great Britain that she will be governed by her own sweet will in the matter, sent a message to Congress in which he reaffirms the Monroe doctrine with great emphasis. He declares that, let the consequences be what they may, the United States can not allow any European government to make acquisitions of territory on American soil in any such way. This is equivalent to serving notice upon England that she is in danger of being involved in war with the United States.

We do not believe there will be a war. We think that, on sober second thought, Great Britain will recede from her position. Certain it is that if she goes to war she will have other powers to reckon with besides the United States. Russia would take advantage of the opportunity to extend her boundaries in the direction of the Mediterranean, and other international complications would arise — all of which England understands perfectly. This being the case, however much John Bull may bluster for a time, he is going to count well the cost before he engages in a war with the great American Republic which gave him several good thrashings when she was only an infant among the nations. President Cleveland's message meets the hearty approbation of the American people regardless of party affiliations. No act of his administration is so universally approved.

An Opportunity to Do Good.

All our superannuated preachers and all our preachers' widows ought to have the ADVOCATE. Some of them, however, are unable to pay for it. The publisher is willing to do his part in this matter; but there is no reason why he should bear all the burden. He has already been overtaxed in the way of furnishing the ADVOCATE free. Every other Methodist is under just as much obligation to contribute according to his means for this purpose as the man who happens to be publisher of the ADVOCATE. Anyone who desires to do a generous act is here given an opportunity. You can either select the names of your beneficiaries or we will do it for you, and give you the names, so that you may know how your money is appropriated. Here is a chance for a Christmas or a New Year's gift.

Pastoral Help.

The good spiritual shepherd must know his flock. The knowledge which comes from a view of the mass on Sunday is not sufficient; he must know each sheep by name. He must know the needs and trials of each, and must study a remedy for each ill. He must be a doctor as well as a theologian and teacher. The capacity for house preaching is more rare than that of pulpit address. To shoot into the flock is easier than to draw a bead on the solitary bird. The Christian preacher must learn to direct his address to the single hearer as well as to the large congregation. Both gifts are valuable, but the former is the more difficult to acquire. It requires not only facility in social intercourse, but devotion to the high purpose of the ministry. We must aim not only to please, but to save, the people. In the pulpit on Sunday the preacher is set to that work, while in the familiar chat of the home he is in danger of losing himself in the commonplace. How to put off the clerical form and to mingle with the people on familiar terms in carrying out the high purposes of his ministry, is a practical problem not easily solved. He can dispose of many theological knots easier than of this one; but, hard as it may be, he needs to learn the solution. — Zion's Herald.

A. P. A.

We had commenced to write something concerning the A. P. A. as a factor in politics when the Tennessee Methodist came to hand with the following, which is exactly what we intended to say:

Every politician, big and little, has his own theory as to what caused the Republican victories in the late elections. Republicans claim, of course, that dissatisfaction with the administration caused it. Democrats say that the lack of harmony in their ranks on the money question did it. These wise men, no doubt, know, but political policy constrains them not to say it, that one great helpful cause of the late ballot-box revolution was the American Protective Association vote. And this fact finds corroboration in election news from various cities and States. Let us see. Take Kentucky. There the Democratic platform denounced the A. P. A. The Democratic party was defeated for the first time in almost a score of years, and Bradley, an American in fact, as well as in name, was elected. He was endorsed by the A. P. A. That association carried Louisville, the Democratic stronghold, for the Republicans by five thousand majority. Democracy there means Rum and Romanism. See Massachusetts. The Republican platform contained a plank on the school question, endorsing the chief principle of the A. P. A. The Democratic candidate for governor took pains on the stump to rail and rage against the order. The State was carried by the Republicans by an unusually large majority. Ohio. Bushnell was indorsed by the A. P. A. and was elected by a majority of 80,000, much more than was predicted by the party managers. Omaha. The city was carried by a straight-out A. P. A. ticket, electing the mayor, judges and city officers. Maryland. The A. P. A. gave their votes to Lowndes, the Republican candidate, and that, together with the Democrat dissatisfaction with Gorman, the Democratic boss, gave the State to the Republicans.

Sanitary science has achieved a great victory in civilized lands over that Asiatic scourge—the cholera. According to the recent report of the British government, it appears that in 1893 this much dreaded disease attacked 64 places and 287 persons, causing 135 deaths. In two-thirds of the places the authorities succeeded in stamping it out. This is a different record from that of 1849, when 14,497 persons in London died from cholera, and from that in Spain in 1885, when the cholera victims numbered nearly 250,000. With due precaution and care cholera inroads are preventable.—Presbyterian.

When Dr. Duff began work in Calcutta he found that a cow had more rights and higher rank than a woman, and he said to try to educate women in India was as vain as to attempt to "scale a wall 500 yards high." To-day in the province of Bengal alone 100,000 women and girls are under instruction, and India's most gifted daughters are laying hold of the treasures of the higher education. Zenana doors have been unlocked by the gentle hand of Christian womanhood, and a transformation is already accomplished which centuries of merely human wisdom and power could not even have begun.—Dr. A. T. Pierson.

We were very much surprised to find in Texas the Bible circulated in thirteen languages, but out here in these Western States it is circulated in sixteen languages. What wonderful missionaries the American and British Bible Societies are in every land, standing as they do like the pillars of Hercules under all that is worth the name of civilization in the world, perpetuating the miracle of tongues in 300 languages and dialects of the earth. The present work of our missionaries at home and abroad could scarcely be possible without the aid of these societies.—St. Louis Advocate.

A poor woman in New York City who keeps a small fruit stand gives regularly twenty-five dollars a year to the cause of missions—and this, too, when her entire income is not over two hundred and fifty or three hundred dollars a year.

There were several mistakes in the appointments of the North Mississippi Conference as published in the ADVOCATE. The appointments, as we gave them, were furnished to the press-gang by the presiding episcopos. An eleventh-hour cabinet meeting, however, made several changes.

Miss Kate Bachman, daughter of Mr. R. F. W. Bachman, of this city, died in Chicago last Sunday morning. Having been her pastor for some years at Jackson, Miss., we knew her intimately, and a finer specimen of consecrated young womanhood we have never known. She loved the church almost as her own life, and was always ready to do whatever her hands found to do to promote its prosperity. Earth is made poorer and heaven richer by her death.

Mr. Terrel, United States minister to Russia, did a sensible thing when he removed the American missionaries from the Sultan's dominions. In the present state of affairs there is no certainty that the Sultan can protect them from the fury of the fanatical Mohammedans even if he were ever so anxious to do it; and then there is very grave doubt as to his Majesty's losing any sleep if every Christian in his dominions were ruthlessly slaughtered.

Rev. J. O. Andrew, D. D., of the Alabama Advocate, was in Atlanta last week to attend the burial of his daughter, Miss Annie. The many Georgia friends of this golden-hearted, glorious preacher and man will be deeply pained to hear of his sad bereavement. If nobility of soul were defense against grief, his causes for tears would not be many—would not be at all. May the grace of his Savior friend avail him much at this touch of the cemetery horror.—Wesleyan Advocate.

At the recent session of the West Texas Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Bishop Johnston of San Antonio diocese, Protestant Episcopal Church, and three other Episcopal ministers, were introduced by Bishop Key in words of fraternal salutation, expressing his pleasure at their visit. Bishop Johnston in reply said that they had called to give evidence of their "sympathy and appreciation of the work being done by the Conference, and, as Christian people, to share in and admire the enthusiasm and zeal that have always characterized the Methodists," and expressed the wish that "the day would soon come when all Christians would be united and work together for the advancement of the cause of Christ."—Exchange.

An Instructive Lecture—For a Noble Cause

Preachers and Laymen of Mississippi:

Our brother, Rev. H. G. Hawkins, consents to deliver his unique lecture on Japan, and exhibit a fine collection of curios, in the interest of "The Lambuth Training-school," at Kobe, Japan. To see and hear this is a rare treat, and very instructive. None should miss this opportunity. The young, as well as the old, will be delighted. Then 'twill be appropriate to make a free-will offering, large or small, according to your means, for the building of this school, which is to be a living, ever-growing and multiplying monument to the memory of our great and apostolic missionary, J. W. Lambuth, and his faithful helpmeet. Her life is now bound up in the success of this beneficent work. We lack now only $200 of the sum needful to buy lot and build the house. The school itself is, and will be, self-sustaining, and one of the most far-reaching works ever enterprised for the heathen. Here is new and rich soil in which to sow the seed of the kingdom. We have the seed sown with skilled and practiced hand. The only lack is the house for a granary. Who will help to build it? If you can't do more, put in a brick or a plank, and have the sweet satisfaction of vested interest in a work that pays an hundredfold now in this present time; and in the world to come, oh, what a harvest of joy!

Yours in hope, J. P. DRAKE.

"French Mission."

I arrived here yesterday, in order to make all necessary arrangements for moving and getting equipped for this field of labor. From all I can ascertain, the Missionary Board has acted wisely in this appointment, for the field is ripe for harvest, and have every reason to believe that the Lord will greatly honor and bless our labors in this portion of his moral vineyard. As the move will be expensive, house for preacher's family to rent and furnish, horse to buy, etc., to properly serve the work, as we will need French Testaments, literature, etc., I feel prompted to ask of the readers of this paper to send a Christmas-week gift, thereby helping to carry forward to a success this new endeavor work in the Lord's name.

Let everyone send a contribution, and be represented indirectly in this work, and let everyone pray God's richest benedictions upon all the instrumental means used that will tend to glorify his name, and uplift, upbuild, a fallen race. Pray for us, and send on your contribution to me at Lafayette, La. "Give, and it shall be given you."

H. W. WALLACE, P. C.

A Chance to Make Money.

The times are hard, but there always seems to be opportunities for those who are willing to work. In the past month I have made $175 above all expenses, selling Climax Dish Washers, and have attended to my regular business besides. I never saw anything that gave as general satisfaction. One should not complain where they can make $6 a day, right at home. I have not canvassed any. so anxious are people for Climax Dish Washers that they send after them; any lady or gentleman can do as well as I am doing, for anyone can sell what everyone wants to buy. I think we should inform each other through the newspapers of opportunities like this, as there are many willing to work if they knew of an opening. All you have to do is to send for a sample Dish Washer. This company does not ask any pay until you have them sold. For full particulars address the Climax Mfg. Co., Columbus, Ohio. After you have tried the business a week, publish the results for the benefit of others.

Notice.

To the Preachers of the North Mississippi Conference:

Please remit to me at Sardis, Miss., not Greenwood. Brethren, let's make a strong effort to raise our foreign missionary assessments by the first of March. Cotton is a good price this season; it may be low next. Doctor, please see to it that my postoffice is changed on your mailing list, or books, for I have already missed the ADVOCATE, and thereby have missed much of my intellectual food. We are only partly at Sardis yet; wife and little Smylie are in Meridian. The people of this beautiful resident town seem to have large and warm hearts.

FORBID THEM NOT.

There is no sweeter story told
In all the blessed Book,
Than how the Lord within his arms
The little children took.

We love him for the tender touch
That made the leper whole,
And for the wondrous words that healed
The tired, sin-sick soul

But closer to his loving self
Our human hearts are brought,
When for the little children's sake
Love's sweetest spell is wrought.

For their young eyes his sorrowing face
A smile of gladness wore—
A smile that for his little ones
It weareth evermore.

The voice that silenced priest and scribe,
For them grew low and sweet;
And still for them his gentle lips
The loving words repeat:

"Forbid them not." O blessed Christ!
We bring them unto thee,
And pray that on their heads may rest
Thy benedicite!

—Christian Treasury.

"Blessed Are the Peacemakers."

A good man, eminent and beloved as a teacher of the young, says that many years ago he adopted the following for one of the rules of his life as a teacher: "I will be blind when I might see, deaf when I might hear, and dumb when I might speak. I will put out all the fires I can, and never kindle any. Associated almost constantly with young people, earnestly desiring not only to instruct them, but also to help them to become noble, unselfish, peace-loving, and peacemaking men and women, experience had taught him it was one of the best rules for him to follow.

Would not his rule be a good one for anybody, old or young, to adopt who aims to be a peacemaker? Is there anything unChrist-like in it? "I will be blind when I might see." That does not mean that our eyes should be closed to anything we ought to see, not even to evil when we ought to see it. "Deaf when I might hear." That does not mean that our ears should be stopped when language is used in our hearing of which a Christian should be prompt to manifest disapproval. "Dumb when I might speak." Nor does that mean that our tongues should be tied when our eyes have seen or our ears have heard that which no Christian could see or hear without rebuking it. "Put out all the fires I can, and never kindle any." That would show Christ's Spirit. To do that would make one a peacemaker. If a quarrel is beginning, or a misunderstanding, or an estrangement, that fire may often be quenched by the peacemaker, and thus Christ's work be done. But it is easy to fan the fire to fiercer flame, and thus devil's work be done. The teacher's rule is a text on which any of us can think out a long and a good sermon.

Once in my boyhood I was playing around the workshop of a builder who was largely interested in a water-power mill on the river near us. The machinery of the mill was out of order and needed repairs. This builder had secured two men, millwrights, from another town to do the repairing. They were at their employment in his workshop within my sight and hearing, and from some cause had got into a loud and bitter controversy. They were very angry with each other. Their employer was a neighbor and friend of ours, a Christian man. He was soon drawn to the spot by their loud voices. It was near the close of day, and the sun shone in at the windows from the west. He drew near to the excited and angry disputants, and in a kindly, calm, and gentle voice, but so distinct that I heard every word, said, "My friends, let not the sun go down upon your wrath." The altercation ceased in a moment. There was a brief silence, and then one of the men replied in a subdued voice, "The sun shall not go down upon my wrath."

The man who might have fanned the flame had put the fire out. It was more than fifty years ago. But it made an ineffaceable impression upon my young heart.

Our old neighbor and friend long since went to that other world, where peacemakers are welcomed, and where, like the pure in heart, they see God. I do not know how often he practiced the grace, but he did it then so naturally and so well that it could hardly have been unfamiliar work, and he has, no doubt, long since learned the full meaning of the beatitude, "Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God."—The Congregationalist.

He Proved It.

Recently the evangelist, E. L. Hyde, was conducting a revival meeting at B—— in New Jersey, and in the course of his remarks said "he could prove to the satisfaction of any infidel within ten minutes that he was a fool," little thinking that he should have occasion or opportunity of doing so. The next morning while walking, a gentleman accosted him very abruptly by saying: "Aren't you the evangelist preaching up here at the church?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, I supposed you were a gentleman."

"I claim to be one."

"Well, I don't think you are one. Didn't you say last night you could prove to the satisfaction of anyone within ten minutes that all infidels were fools? If you don't prove it to my satisfaction, I will publish you in all the city papers as the most consummate liar that ever struck the city."

Seeing there was no possibility of reasoning with the man, Mr. Hyde said:

"Where is your infidel?"

"I claim to be one," was the reply, "and I want you to know that I am no fool either."

"You don't mean to say that there is no reality in Christianity.

"I do, sir. I have studied all phases of the subject and have traveled and delivered lectures against Christianity for more than twelve years; and I am prepared to say there is nothing in it."

"You are certain there is nothing in it?"

"Yes, sir, there is nothing in it."

"Will you please tell me," said Mr. Hyde, "if a man who will lecture twelve years against nothing is not a fool, what in your judgment would constitute a fool?"

He turned away in a rage. Mr. Hyde, drawing out his watch, insisted he still had six minutes, but the infidel would not hear him, nor was Mr. Hyde published in the city papers.—Selected.

Ye Did It Unto Me

A little "street arab" got aboard a street-car, and, finding room on a seat, leaned over and fell asleep. His clothes were ragged and scant. His little bare feet were brown and toughened, and his face was dirty. His hat fell off, and showed an uncombed tangle of hair. As he lay there asleep, with his little head on the hard seat, a sweet-faced, well-dressed young girl who sat opposite leaned over, and softly slipped her muff under the little fellow's head. A man near her nodded approval, and putting his hand in his pocket handed her a piece of money, beckoning toward the boy as he did so. The next man did the same, and almost before she knew it, with her face aflame, she had collected something from everyone in the car. She put it in his hat, and laid it under his hand. Then softly removing her muff again, she had the car stopped and went her way.—Herald and Preshyter.

Deserved Promotion.

Hon. Chauncey M. Depew tells the story of his visit to the Mechanical Department of Cornell University. He found at the head of it Prof. Morris, who claimed him as a superior officer, giving as a reason that he was an old-time worker on the New York Central railroad.

"How did you get here?" asked Depew.

"I fired on the New York Central. I stood on the footboard as an engineer on the Central. While a locomotive engineer I made up my mind to get an education. I studied at night, and fitted myself for Union College, running all the time with my locomotive. I procured books, and attended as far as possible the lectures and recitations. I kept up with my class, and on the day of graduation I left my locomotive, washed up, put on the gown and cap, delivered my thesis and received my diploma, put the gown and cap in the closet, put on my working shirt, got on my engine, and made my usual run that day."

"Then," said Depew, "I knew how he became Professor Morris."

That spirit will cause a man to rise in any calling. It is ambition, but it is ambition wisely directed, aiming not at the goal—for such an ambition produces envy, scheming, discontent and weakness—but bravely and cheerily aiming at one's self, seeking to make one's self fitted for higher work. When this is accomplished, the opportunity for higher work is sure to come.—Selected.

The Moral Devastations of Degenerate Books

To recommend degenerate books to neurotic or hysterical readers is not only to vaccinate, but to inoculate them. There is here certainly a communication of the disease. An unhealthy imagination finds in the wild lubrication of the degenerates welcome nourishment and a pattern zealously to be imitated. Every dormant inclination is awakened and monstrously developed by this sort of reading. Far from causing a satisfaction of these morbid tendencies that shall no longer seek perpetuation in deeds, such reading only strengthens what becomes an imperative necessity to commit crime and immorality. I could cite dozens of cases from the criminal records of the past few years where thieves, housebreakers and murderers indicated that the primal conception of their misdeeds arose from the perusal of sensational novels in which malefactors were exalted and their heroic deeds expatiated upon with enthusiasm. I do not assert that these individuals were made criminals by what they read. Their natures were perverse by birth and education. The propensity to crime was organic. But who can say that the perusal of immoral books was not the direct cause which governed their latent instincts, producing a well-defined aim? Indeed, the malefactors themselves believe this to be so. Could I but relate the moral devastations traceable to the reading of Nietzsche and Ibsen which I have seen in actual life!—Forum.

True scholarship means accuracy. A student may know many things in general without knowing any one thing accurately and well. The genuine scholar is known by his care and accuracy in observation and statement. He carries a measuring-line in his brain and lets it out through the eye. So far from being random guesses, his estimates result from habits of accuracy. There are different types of accuracy. There is the microscopic type, which wastes its energies on the infinitesimal and useless writing octavos on the Greek article, or the properties of the Hebrew yod, without ever attaining sound judgment on the larger things about which men concern themselves from day to day. The practical scholar takes the accuracy gained in the drill of the schools into the departments of science, letters, art and business. Once thoroughly trained to handle his powers, he remains the careful student ever after.—Exchange.

Men give me some credit for genius. All the genius I have lies in this: When I have a subject in hand, I study it profoundly. Day and night it is before me. I explore it in all its bearings. My mind becomes prevaded with it. Then the effort which I make the people are pleased to call the fruits of genius. It is the fruit of labor and thought.—Alexander Hamilton.

Uselessness of Alcoholic Drinks.

"In most persons alcohol acts at once as an anesthetic and lessons also the rapidity of impressions, the power of thought, and the perfection of the senses." Drs. Todd and Bowman, in their "Physiological Anatomy," state that "Alcohol retards digestion by coagulating the pepsin, thus interfering with its action." Sir Henry Thompson, perhaps the greatest authority on dietetics of this century, wrote regarding alcoholic beverages: "Men and women are healthier and stronger, physically, intellectually and morally, without such drinks than with them." A declaration signed by a large number of eminent English physicians stated that "Man in ordinary health, like other animals, requires no such stimulants, and can not be benefited by the habitual employment of any of them, nor will their use increase the aggregate amount of his labor. In whatever quantity they are employed they rather tend to diminish it." Sir Andrew Clark said, "I am bound to say, that for all honest work, alcohol never helps a human soul." Prof. Sidney Ringer says: "Varied, repeated, and prolonged experience, and the testimony of many medical men, prove that troops endure fatigue and the extremes of climate better if alcohol is altogether abstained from. * * * Modern trainers recognize the apparent fact that the power of sustained exertion and the resistance to fatigue is best promoted by abstaining from alcohol." The London Lancet states that "Given digestible, solid food, and fair, that is, normal digestive power, pure water alone is all sufficient as liquid. * * * Health, happiness, and work find stimulus enough in the unsophisticated well of nature.

The saloon is only a supply to the demand. When the demand is gone the saloon will vanish. There are hundreds of resorts to-day where one can enjoy himself better than in the saloon, and the field of attraction is daily growing larger. New realms of pleasure are continually revealed to us as we throw off the slavery to alcohol and advance in intelligence and refinement, and are prepared thereby to enjoy them. We have as yet but lifted the corner of the veil that hides the wonderfully charming secrets of nature. There is little hope that there will be much reform for the multitude who are given over to the use of the saloon; it is the younger generation who are constantly taking the place of the elders, to whom we must look for the adoption of higher ideas. Herein can every humanitarian take heart and work with them for the regeneration of his kind.—The Journal of Hygiene.

Cigarette Smoking.

Dr. C. A. Clinton, of the San Francisco Board of Education, has made a special study of the effect of cigarette smoking among the public school children of that city, and expresses himself in the following unmistakable language:

"A good deal has been said about the evils of cigarette smoking, but one-half the truth has never been told. I have watched this thing for a long time, and I say calmly and deliberately that I believe cigarette smoking is as bad a habit as opium smoking. I am talking now of boys, remember. The effect upon grown men is, of course, not so marked.

"A cigarette fiend will lie and steal, just as a morphine or opium fiend will lie and steal. Cigarette smoking blunts the whole moral nature. It has an appalling effect upon the system. It first stimulates and then stupefies the nerves. It sends boys into consumption. It gives them enlargement of the heart, and it sends them to the insane asylum. I am physician to several boys' schools, and I am often called in to prescribe for palpitation of the heart. In nine cases out of ten it is caused by the cigarette habit. Every physician knows the cigarette heart. I have seen bright boys turn into dunces, and straightforward, honest boys made into miserable cowards by cigarette smoking. I am not exaggerating. I am speaking the truth, that every physician and nearly every teacher knows."—Evangelical Messenger.

A lady said to a young man near her in a railroad car, "Sir, do you speak Hebrew? If so, will you be kind enough to swear in Hebrew? In English, it is to me and to others very distressing."

OBITUARIES.

WRIGHT—Died in Natchitoches parish, La., Oct. 14, 1895 Mrs. ELIZABETH WRIGHT, who was born in Marion county, Miss., April 28, 1813, making her at her death over eighty-two years of age. She was married in the year 1834 to John R. Conerly, and afterwards moved to this State about the year 1847, and settled in what was then known as Sabine parish, now Vernon parish. In the year 1854 her husband died, leaving her with the care of ten children, five of whom have preceded her to the better world. In the year 1857 she was again married, to the Rev. A. Wright, and to this union she gave birth to another son, who is now a Methodist preacher. In the year 1887 her second husband died, leaving her again a widow. She then broke up housekeeping, and came to make her home with her daughter, Susannah.

Mother Wright attached herself to the Methodist Church in early life, and ever defended the doctrines of Methodism. Her home was always a home for preachers of the gospel and the way-worn traveler. She had been blind for two years before her death, and she was seldom ever heard to complain. Like she bore her afflictions with Christian fortitude. She was visiting her children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren, and great-great-grandchildren, when she was taken sick, and thus she died away from home, but not away from friends. Her children were all summoned to her bedside to await the moment when God would call her home.

Her remains were brought home and buried at her old church (Holly Grove amid the throngs that had assembled to pay the last tribute of respect to her lifeless body.

Farewell, mother, till we meet you in a better world. JOHN FRANKLIN.

MOORE—MARY ELIZABETH MOORE was born near Durant, Holmes county, Miss., Jan 3, 1843, and died in Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 5, 1895. She was the daughter of J. S. and S. C. Herbert, and was married to Mr. Josephus Moore, Dec. 12 1866.

Sister Moore joined the Methodist Church in 1856 and was a devout and faithful member down to the day of her death. She was exceedingly active and faithful in Sunday-school work—a good scholar and a superior teacher. For some years she was the president of the Woman's Missionary Society and lady manager of the Juvenile Society. This work lay near her heart, and received her constant attention and enthusiastic support.

She was known as an angel of mercy in the homes of the poor and needy, and at the bedside of the sick. It gave her great joy to minister to those who were in distress.

In all the relations of life Sister Moore was distinguished for gentleness and kindness, and by a spirit of self-sacrifice for the good of others. Those who knew her best say, "She never spoke evil of anyone." This is a great crime, and far too rare among professors of religion. It is a just tribute to say that Sister Moore was one of the most useful and best-loved women in this pastoral charge.

She had gone to Memphis for treatment, and died away from home, with no one of her family near except her husband. She expressed herself as ready for the change, and passed away in great peace and in full hope of glorious immortality. A vast concourse of relatives and sorrowing friends attended her funeral at Acona, Miss. GILDEROY.

PHILLIPS—CORA MEEK PHILLIPS, daughter of John M. and Mary A. Hitt, and wife of G. W. Phillips, was born in Greene county, Ala., Jan. 6, 1858; was married to G. C. Phillips in 1877, and died at Lauderdale, Miss., Oct. 10, 1895.

It was my privilege to be her pastor for nearly two years. As a neighbor she was pleasant, thoughtful and kind. Her thoughtfulness was kept continually before us. In her home her character appears still more beautiful. She always was kept bright by her sunny nature. She met the battles of life with the courage of a true heroine.

As a daughter, she was thoughtful and affectionate. She did what she could to scatter flowers in the pathway of a widowed mother. As a wife, she was true, affectionate, and devoted, beautifully adorning this sacred relation. As a mother, she was tender, long-suffering, and self-sacrificing.

She was converted and joined the Methodist Church when ten years old, and continued a member until her death. Her name was first enrolled among our Sunday-school tenour, but our school had no better teacher. Her class consisted of five of her own children, who always, when possible, filled their places at Sunday-school with well-prepared lessons.

A mother mourns for a lovely daughter, a husband for a true wife, and six children for an affectionate mother; but her voice, from a brighter land, calls them to a holier life and a heavenly home. GEO. H. THOMPSON.

WOODS—Died at his residence near Phœnix, Yazoo county, Miss., Aug. 25, 1895, JAMES T. WOODS.

The subject of this brief memoir was born near Fulton, Ky., Jan. 2, 1833. When he was about twelve years of age he removed to Warren county, Miss. He was married to Mrs. M. A. Green, daughter of Rev. S. Dilly, an excellent Christian woman, Jan. 29, 1859, who died in 1883, leaving four children—three sons and one daughter. Soon after the close of the war he removed to Yazoo county, Miss., and settled near Phœnix, where he remained until his death. In 1885 he married his second wife, Miss Mollie E. Selby, who, with her little son and the four children by his first wife, are left to mourn their irreparable loss.

Bro. Woods was a model citizen, having the confidence and esteem of all who knew him; an affectionate husband and tender parent, and, above all, a devoted Christian.

Soon after he came to Yazoo county he professed religion and joined the M. E. Church, South, in which he remained a faithful member, filling the offices of steward and Sunday-school superintendent during the last years of his life. In reference to his Christian virtues much might be said, but all may be included in the language of inspiration: "Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace."

G. W. ALEXANDER.

SMITH—MANERVIA A. SMITH, wife of G. B. Smith, was born Nov. 1, 1851, and died Dec. 15, 1895, aged forty-four years one month and fifteen days. She was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, at an early age, at Ebenezer Church, Franklin county, Miss.

She was the mother of ten children, one of whom preceded her to glory. The others she leaves behind, all of whom are devoted members of the Methodist Church except the three little ones, who have also been baptized.

She was a devoted wife and mother, an earnest and faithful Christian, a lover of her church, and always had a sympathizing heart to all the suffering; always cheerful, and endeavoring to make home bright and happy.

Her life is well worthy of imitation. Though she has passed away from us, her good influence will ever be with us. She died without a struggle; simply fell asleep in the arms of Jesus. We are sure she is with her rejoicing kindred who have gone before. May God comfort the bereaved husband, soothe the sorrow of mourning sisters and brothers, her precious, aged mother, and guide the feet of the dear little orphan children, and grant them all a happy reunion around the great white throne of God! M. KNOUT.

FLY—Whereas, it seemed best to our Father in heaven—who, in his great love, does all things for our good—to remove from our midst our beloved friend, FANNIE ERNONA FLY, Nov. 9, 1895; And whereas, By this sad event the Methodist Sunday-school of Centerville, Miss., is called upon to mourn the loss of one of its best members; therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is only a just tribute to the memory of our dear friend to say that in her death we have sustained a loss in our social as well as in our religious circle which we will ever deeply feel; and while we submit to the will of our heavenly Father, none the less do we mourn this friend whose pure, young life was an example of true Christianity.

Resolved, That we extend to the bereaved family our sympathy, and pray that God will help them to bear this great trouble.

Resolved, That these resolutions be entered upon the minutes of the Sunday-school, that a copy of the same be presented to the family, and also a copy be sent to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication.

MATTIE CARTER, for Com.

BEALL.—Whereas, Death, the greatest enemy of the human family, has again visited our town and taken away Sister SARAH I. BEALL, who departed this life Dec. 13, 1895, and desiring to make some expression of the loss the church has sustained; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death of Sister Beall her children have lost a very kind and affectionate mother, the church a zealous supporter, and the community one of the best women it has been our privilege to know.

Resolved, That the church extend to the children and grandchildren of Sister Beall our sincere sympathy, and commend them to a merciful providence in this sad bereavement. She has left this earth for an eternal home, where parting comes no more.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the church minutes, and a copy furnished the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE for publication. J. J. HOUSTON, for Com.

WHITE—WILLIE L., younger daughter of W. L. White, deceased, and Mrs. Ida White, was born March 6, 1890, and after a brief illness died Oct. 29, 1895, aged five years seven months and twenty-three days.

This precious little one, though so young—having been taught by her pious mother—was a bright little Christian. She loved Jesus, had faith in him; loved the church, loved good people. What a glorious inheritance is hers! After a short, little sunshiny life—life in which there was not much suffering or pain—gladdening the heart of widowed mother, lovely companion of loving sister, she has gone to live with the angels forever—not dead, but living and alive forevermore. "He hath done all things well." (Mark vii, 37.)

B. S. RAYNER.

GAGNET—LENNIE LOUISA, daughter of S. P. and Belmont Gagnet, was born May 5, 1886, in Franklin, La., and died there on Dec. 5, 1895.

"She crossed on her bosom her dimpled hands,
And fearlessly entered the phantom bark.
We watched it glide from the silver sands,
And all our sunshine grew strangely dark.
We know she is safe on the other side,
Where all the ransomed and angels are.
Over the river, the mystic river,
Our darling Leunie is waiting for us."

the whole oil

You look at cod-liver oil. It is so much oil or fat. But the chemists come along and tell us that in that oil are united, in almost invisible form, most valuable medicinal agents, that the fat of cod-liver oil is only one of its merits, and that no process of medical skill or chemical science can unite these peculiar properties with oil as they exist in nature. This is why there can be no substitute for cod-liver oil. When you get Scott's Emulsion you get the whole oil divided into tiny little particles, digested, and ready to be taken up into the system.

The hypophosphites which are combined with it are valuable tonics, increasing the appetite, strengthening the nerves, and restoring vitality in the weakened system.

When you ask for Scott's Emulsion and your druggist gives you a salmon-colored package with the picture of a man and fish on it you can trust that man with your prescriptions!

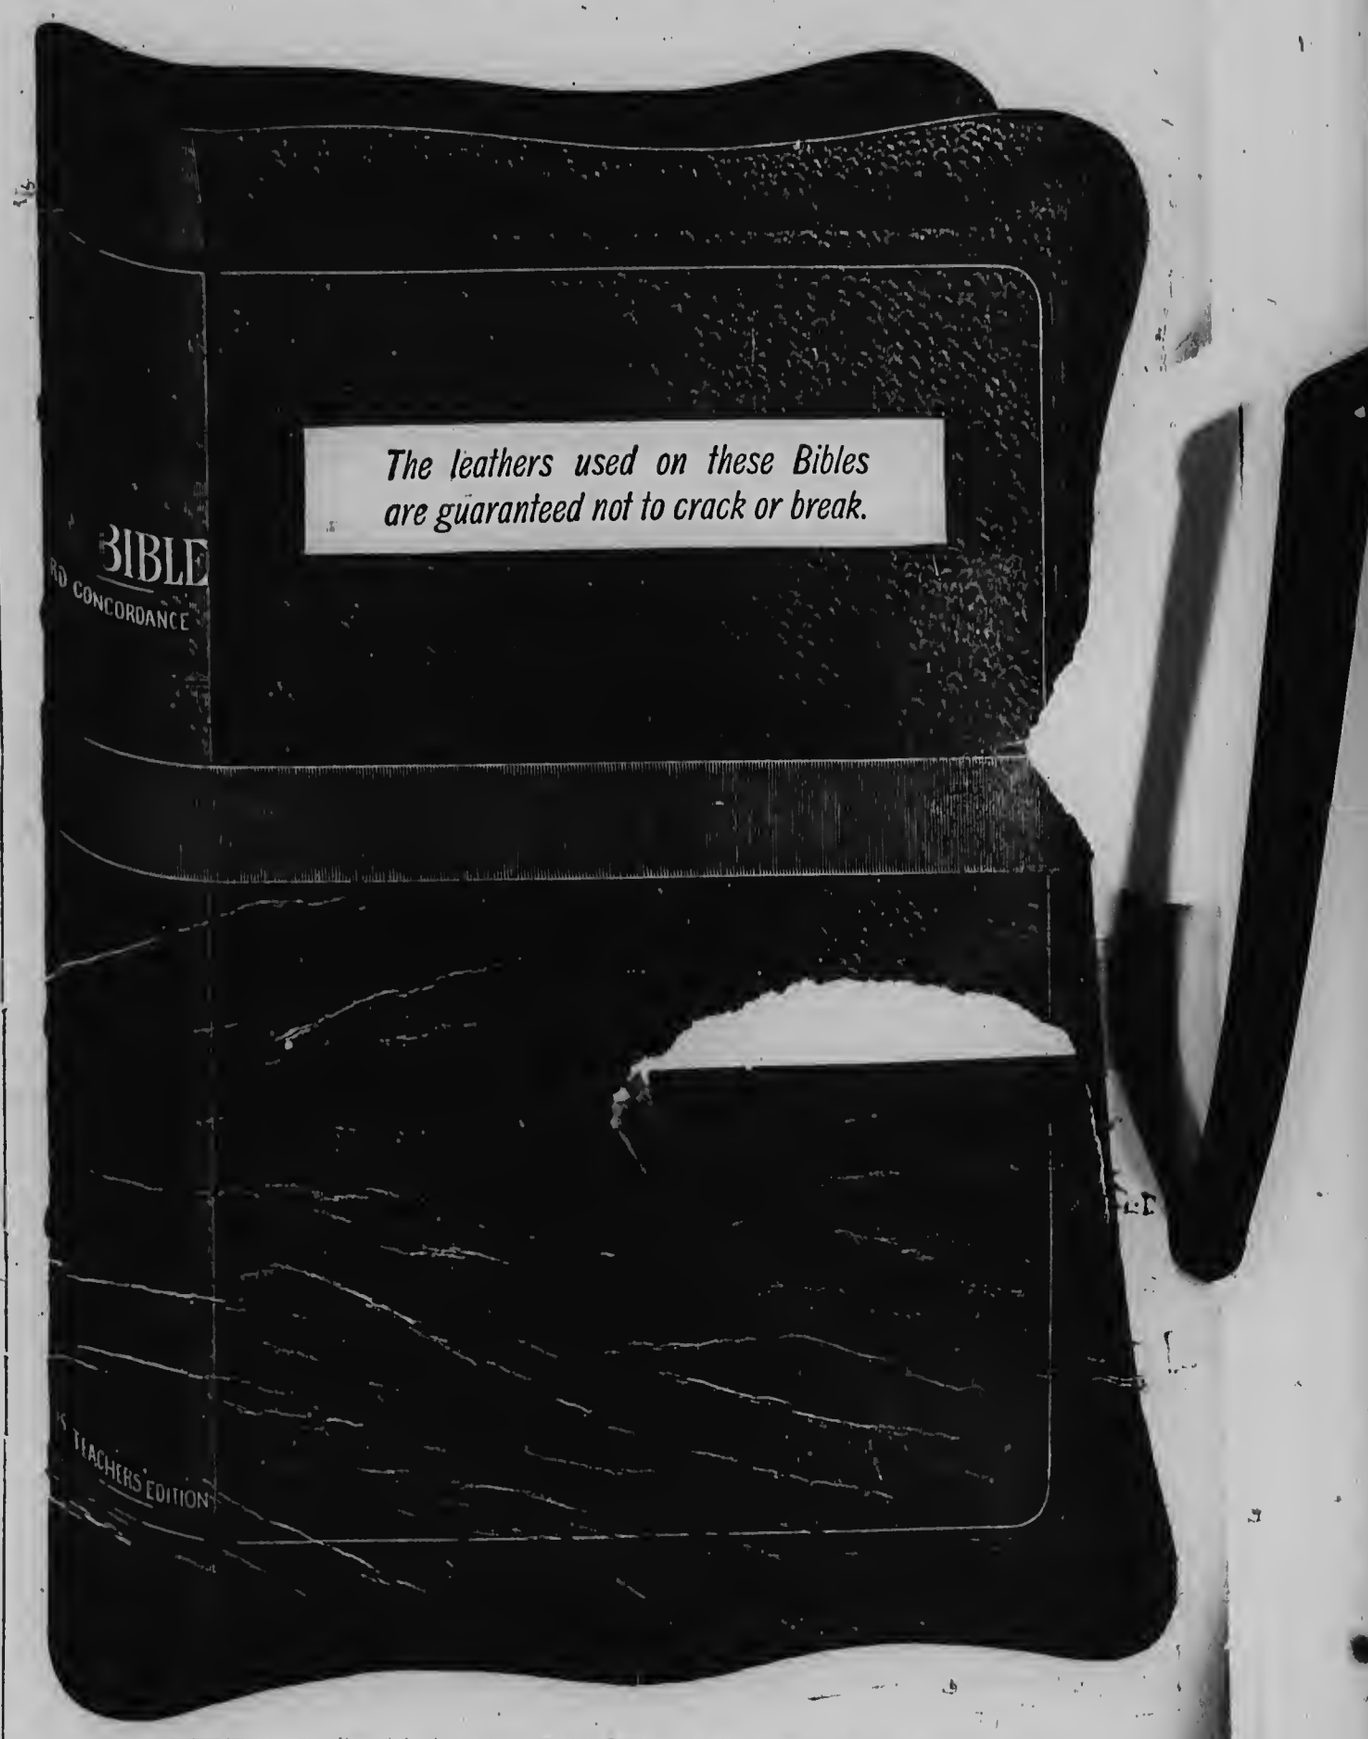
The Holman Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.

Minion, 8vo. Divinity Circuit, Round Corners, etc.



TWELVE FULL-PAGE MAPS IN COLORS.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn, New York, in the "New York Evangelist:" "Of all Bibles yet issued in our country, the most superb in execution and completeness of contents is the 'Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.' Sabbath-school teachers will find this elegant volume a little library of information in itself."

REV. ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., President of, and Professor in, the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.: "It pleases me very greatly. I regard the help which it affords to a correct pronunciation of Scripture proper names as doubling the value of the edition. I trust the book will be received as it deserves to be."

We will send this Bible for $1.65 to all subscribers who will pay their subscription for one year in advance, provided they have not had the benefit of other premium offers. In that case they must write us for special terms. When we say a year in advance we mean one year from this date, i. e., January, '96. A little later it will be February, '96.

We are prepared to offer the Holman Bible to subscribers who pay their subscription a full year for the small sum of $1.50. This Bible has all the matter of the larger styles and is bound in the same style. The difference is, that it is in smaller type. When ordering be sure to say "$1.50 Bible."

A Lady Makes Money.

Mr. Editor:—I am always interested in reading of the success of others and will tell of mine. I tried school teaching, clerking and sewing, all hard work for small pay. I met a lady making $15 a week selling National Dish Washer—best made. I ordered ½ dozen, washed mother's dinner dishes in two minutes, sold all first afternoon; profit $12. The next week I made $37, in a month $143; I am a good talker. I buy of the World Mfg. Co. "BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES" are unequaled for clearing the voice. Public speakers and singers the world over use them.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

CHILDREN INCLUDED—"AND HIS HOUSE."

(Acts x, 2; xi, 14; xvi, 15, 31, 33.)

A certain statesman is reported always to have tipped his hat when meeting a child, saying that that child might possibly become a prominent member of society.

1. As circumcision constituted the initiatory rite to Judaism, so baptism constitutes the door to the Christian church.

(1) Circumcision took place when the infant was but eight days old. God privileged the children to share the benefits of his covenant.

(2) The apostles declared that converts to Christianity should not be circumcised. Acknowledging thereby that baptism had been substituted for same.

(3) Christ expressly declared that little children should come—be brought—unto him, saying that of such is the kingdom of heaven. It would, hence, be wicked to exclude children. Thus the households of Lydia, Cornelius, and that of the jailor were baptized.

(5) Sad that so many preachers fail to enthusiastically interest Christian parents as to their duty of bringing their children to the house of God for baptism.

2. Our children not being deemed heathen, our Epworth League Board has provided for a Junior League in every congregation.

(1) The Junior League is not a substitute for, but a supplement to, the Sunday-school. May that school prosper!

(2) In the Junior League the children are pleasantly familiar and with the will of God. It is, as it were, the "kindergarten" of the church. Stiffformality is avoided.

(3) In the Junior League the children of members and outsiders are brought together, learn to love each other, and, in due time, swell the membership of the church.

(4) That church which provides most amply and most wisely for the children will be the church of the future.

All who are exposed to the weather should keep Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup handy.

CHILL FUGE is guaranteed to cure Chills and Fever. It makes rich blood. Children love it.

CHILLIFUGE contains Iron that does not blacken the teeth, nor constipate the bowels. Makes rich blood.

CHILLIFUGE possesses all the virtues and none of the disagreeable features of Quinine used by Physicians.

CHILLIFUGE does not require a knitting needle or a stick to mix every dose. No iron filings to settle at bottom of bottle and irritate a weak stomach.

When you feel shaky, Malaria has singled you out as a victim. Take CHILLIFUGE; it will rout the trouble at once.

CHILLIFUGE is a superb appetiser, and is highly valuable for weak and sickly children, as well as the aged and feeble.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN

"Uncle Tom's Cabin," Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe's great novel, was written over twenty years ago. Almost immediately after its publication, it created to attract attention, and its fame grew until it was in every nook and corner of the civilized world. No American novel ever achieved such enormous popularity. For forty years the sale of this great book has steadily kept up, and so popular is it to day that the edition recently printed consisted of 275,000 copies. A new generation is now reading "Uncle Tom's Cabin" with the same keen enjoyment that their great fathers and grandmothers experienced forty years ago. It is a book that will never grow old, and other generations will laugh over Topsy and cry over Eva as we have done. Heretofore this great book has never been sold for less than one dollar. The edition of this great work that we offer is printed in clear, readable type, on good paper, complete, unchanged and unabridged, and consists of a large volume of nearly 200 large 8-column pages, neatly bound. It is handsomely Illustrated. We send this great Book absolutely Free to every subscriber to the Woman's Chat-Box. It sends 20 cents for a three month's trial subscription.
